

Solar refrigeration for Kenyan rural Communities

Okoth, M W

Date: 1990

Abstract

Availability of wholesome food products insufficient quantities is a prerequisite for a healthy, productive human population. Refrigeration of perishable foods is one way of achieving this end. The use of solar powered refrigerators would enhance food preservation in Kenyan remote rural areas where conventional refrigerators either cannot be used or are too expensive. The state-of-the-art of solar refrigeration is reviewed.