In view of the previous definite a statement that it is vital to the health of the Colony, I suggest that we should allow section 51 as originally drafted to stand on condition that understanding that it is not intended to cover regular inspection of broodstock or systematic examination of postulates (as and the bill drafted as to make a good example of any question

Your telegram 12th May Public Health Bill suggested amendment in clause fiftyone would nullify whole object of clause. In this country where there is grave danger of infection from venereal disease of large numbers of ignorant natives not acquainted with after effects of complaint provision as in clause fiftyone considered essential. Deletion or weakening of this clause would eliminate provision made for examination of inhabitants of places or areas particularly suspected. Clause fiftyone necessary and desirable to protect natives from results of ravages venereal disease. Conditions in this country naturally differ from those in England where population educated. Powers under Clause No. 51 have precedent in South African legislation from which whole of part five taken. Trust you will agree to retention of Clause fiftyone as drafted. It is vital to health of colony.
