that we might let all officers have

J.M. 24/4

Mr. Liddell.

We told the GOVERNOR in our despatch of the 24th of February on D.G.O. 16 that on points of principle they were not at liberty to suggest terms more liberal than those which had been approved by the Treasury. Both the suggestions made by Sir P. Girouard in this despatch appear to me to be points of principle, and, as the Treasury have had the actual text of the rules before them, I feel that we could not sanction the proposals made by Mr. Batterbee with a view to meeting Sir P. Girouard's views without going to the Treasury. This I am strongly inclined to do. Both the points now raised were clearly in our minds in framing the rules which we sent to the Treasury, and are expressly dealt with in those rules. There has been no oversight. If we now asked the Treasury to reconsider these points, they would say either that we do not know our own minds or that we make ~~any~~ concession (and the new leave rules are very liberal concession) the base for a further advance.

that

Under the old system officers get no extra leave for periods of service between 20 and 25 months and between 25 and 30 months, and nothing extra for service beyond 30 months even if the overtime amounted to year. Under the new rules an officer cannot serve overtime for more than 29 or 30 days without earning extra leave for his overtime. This is a great advance. It is true that owing to the agreement with the Union Castle Steamship Company, the number of officers who will serve two or three weeks overtime without getting extra leave will be comparatively large. But even in West Africa the difficulties of relief owing to long distances and inadequate transport facilities often involve a man serving overtime for a similar period without compensation. The grievance now ~~left~~ in East Africa is inconsiderable in comparison with the difficulty of going back on our own proposals and making further demands on the Treasury.

I feel much the same about the difficulty of officers returning from leave. The necessity in some cases of going back earlier, or as an alternative of taking

taking additional leave for some days without pay, existed under the old system, and was one of the grounds on which we felt it necessary to get an improvement in the leave conditions in other directions. I think that it would be impossible to have anything to do with a system which involved carrying on leave from one period to another, and I fear we can only take the ground with the Governor that the ~~separation~~ of the present arrangements as to return from leave is part of the bargain which the new leave rules represent and must be adhered to. We must rely on improvements in the terms of service to attenuate the hardship in course of time.

The third point raised by Mr. Batterbee at the end of his minute is on a different footing. It is a matter for administrative decision to what extent the new leave rules shall be applied to officers actually on leave on the 1st of April, when they came into force. I think that such officers may reasonably benefit to some extent, although their leave was actually granted before the rules came into force, and I think a fair compromise is that they should benefit in pay, as Mr. Batterbee proposes, but that we should not re-calculate the length of their leave ~~to do this~~, apart from the trouble it would give, might upset the arrangements made in the Protectorate for the relief of officers now serving. There is no need to go to the Treasury on this point.

Yours

John 25

I have spoken to you about the annual help paying though has been suggested as to when you have to apply the rules - it is a case of "dead" & "alive". Does your P&G? I gather that in India should be willing to allow some alteration in spending the Treasury are ready to agree & the account officer's approach to balances and be as ready to forward the fact as to who has the power to forward the fact. In any event will have to consider on the basis of the date which I sent forward for consideration.

EAST AFRICA PROTECTORATE.

2nd March 1911.

HO.

Sir,

*File
I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 106 of the 24th ultmo enclosing revised Leave Regulations which may, subject to any observations I wish to make, be brought into force on April 1st.

2. The Regulations will, I feel sure, be generally welcomed by the members of the service, who greatly appreciate the consideration for their welfare shown in the more liberal conditions now proposed.

3. There are however one or two small points which, resulting as they do from the new agreement with the Union-Castle Line, may possibly not have been fully considered.

4. The fact that this Line has four-weekly sailings only makes it almost impossible, except by a rare coincidence, for an officer either to take his leave on the expiry of service of an exact number of calendar months or to return exactly at the

THE RIGHT TIME.

LEWIS HABSBURG, P.O., M.P.,

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES,

DOWNING STREET, LONDON, S.W.

the termination of the leave he has earned.

5. I think that in view of this the concluding words of 1 (b) of the new Regulations operate somewhat harshly, inasmuch as they might conceivably deprive an officer of any leave in respect of as much as 27 days' service, supposing that his steamer left one day before the expiry of a period of completed calendar months. I would therefore venture, ^{to} suggest that it would be perfectly fair and quite easy to substitute for the words "that no additional" the word "proportional", and add "but any fraction of a day's leave so earned will be ignored." This would not involve any abstract or difficult calculation, and is, I think reasonable in view of the obligation on officers to travel by one particular line.

6. I do not think moreover that it can be considered to suggest terms more liberal than those approved by the Treasury. To ignore a fraction of a month's service would be no hardship if there were a choice of steamers, which would enable an officer to proceed on leave at a date reasonably soon after the expiry of a period of completed months, but, as things are, he has no such choice.

7. Similarly on return from leave he is confronted by the same problem. He must either forego part of the leave he has earned in order to go by an earlier steamer, or, if the dates allow of his receiving an extension, that extension is suspensionable and carries no pay. Here too I think that, once more having regard to the obligation to travel by one particular line of steamers, paragraphs 3 and 9 might reasonably be revised so that such extensions could be granted on pay, and further that if an officer has to travel by a steamer leaving before his leave has expired he may add the unexpired portion to the next leave he takes. As stated this may sound complicated, but it would be perfectly simple in practice. As matters stand an officer ~~may~~ lose 14 days, i.e. the leave earned by almost three months' service, which would appear manifestly unjust.

8. I trust that I shall not be thought to be asking for an alteration in the proposed Regulations in order to meet a few isolated cases. On the contrary, except by the rarest coincidence, every officer in the service is necessarily affected every time he goes on leave, and I hope therefore that I may be pardoned for criticising proposals which are in the main so generous and acceptable.

9. I am addressing you separately on the subject of healthy and unhealthy stations.

I have the honour to be,
