GOVERNMENT HOUSE

NAIROBI

BRITISH EAST AFRICA

SECRET

25th November 1914.

Sir,

I have the honour to forward in original, for your information, a despatch by the General Officer Commanding, British East Africa, dated October 31, 1914, in which he summarises the various phases of the military situation in this Protectorate from the time of the declaration of war to the end of October last. Attached to his despatch will be found reports of the engagements which have taken place during this period, some of which have already been communicated to you under cover of earlier despatches.

local knowledge, and my personal perusal of his reports leaves me in no doubt that he has left nothing undone which could add to the efficiency of his branch, the best test of which is found in the fact that no movement of the enemy's forces or scouts has escaped the notice of his men.

5. I must highly appreciate the services rendered by Lieutenant Wavell. This officer, who is a fine Arabic scholar and thoroughly understands the Arab people, raised a small body of men by his own exertions and established the post at Mafreni, from which base he beat off several attacks of the enemy under trying and difficult circumstances, till severely wounded.

vived this Protectorate with every prospect of success. The situation was dealt with in the most determined and efficient manner. The resources of the Protectorate were utilized to the full. British East Africa is fortunate in having a unique class of settlers. There has been a sacrifice of Cavalry and infantry and a considerable number of Britishers, South Africans and Boers with valuable experience of the country and of active service. They readily joined the Volunteer Units, and with 8 Companies of the King's African Rifles formed the definitive forces that it will be necessary for us to maintain a defensive attitude and to seek greater strength and reliability. It is probable that the enemy may be encouraged to offensive in the months to come. Larger forces will be required to defend the country. The problem is how to do this without incurring too much expense.

On October 3rd the Jura Imperial S

Scops and the British Maxim Gun Volunteers 29th

embarked in the remainder of Indian Expeditionary Force. They were immediately placed under the orders of Major Hawthorne, who despatched them up Gau in the

our outposts came under Machine Gun fire.

Major Stenör had a strong moral influence and was able to get the situation to the point where the enemy were in their trap too.

Major Stenör, with one platoon of the Jwing Regiment and one platoon of the African Rifles, sent a message and reported having been heavily fired on not far

Captain Stenör, with Half "C" Company, his officers and men then went up and joined Major Stenör about 1000 yards from our company of riflemen and men of the Jwing Regiment. Captain Stenör's force was then ordered to attack the enemy and drive them back. This last attack was a continuation of the enemy's own counter-attack in position.

Major Stenör's counter-attack was driven off to our left front. He then ordered Lieutenant Dent's Force, with Major Stenör's Force, then at 18.00 p.m. the enemy opened fire with a heavy support by infantry. This fire was supported by two companies of the Jwing Regiment.

At 18.30 p.m. Captain Stenör with "C" Company, the Jwing African Rifles, and weak company of the Jwing Regiment advanced to make a counter-attack against the enemy's left flank. Soon after starting they came under a very heavy fire. Captain Stenor and Lieutenant Lundström were wounded. Captain Stenor continued to lead his men in their position. Major General Lundström, with the corps in his hand, was also wounded. Captain Stenor was trying to advance when he was hit by a bullet in the head. Both these officers were working as duty under the direction of Captain Söderström who was in command of American Rifles, our men pressed forward and drove back the enemy who fled without stopping for 3 miles, leaving quantities of equipment and armament.
