CHINESE TRADE BOOM COMING.

Merchants Waiting for Peace.

Experts View. Reports in foreign trade affairs are faced with a serious problem in considering the future of commercial relations between Great Britain and China.

Mr. H. H. Fox Commercial Attaché to the British Legation in Peking, who recently toured British chambers of commerce while on leave from China, is confident that Chinese merchants are eager to trade with the country again.

The position of the moment is an unfavorable one, but trade between the two countries will boom as soon as China is moderately permitted to exercise their powers of quick recovery.

The Chinese are at present demanding that the amount of trade expansion in the up-country should be equal to the amount of the same in the coast.

It will appear that China is coming more normal than the British have to do with. It is a fact to note that in an industrial section, represented by cotton in which wool never is used.

A writer in regard to Mr. Fox and his colleagues, Mr. H. H. Fox, commercial secretary at Shanghai, is available to report for merchants and manufacturers in the British Empire, who had to give up experience of trade in the Far East, and who have now to give up experience of trade in the Far East, and who have now to give up experience of trade in the Far East.

The important addition is the coming forward of the latter possibilities of the market are to be registered.

The Poultry Census for Nairobi Town

The schedule for the Poultry Census of the Nairobi Town has been published and should have attracted the attention of poultry farmers.

It will be noted that although the number of chickens in Nairobi Town is not very large and that the census should attract all breeders. There were no many small holders in the last census of Nairobi that it was considered advisable to increase prize money in order to encourage poultry breeders to send a specimen to assist in their work.

The birds will receive all possible care and attention from the Agricultural and Horticultural Society and also the Poultry Club. It is hoped that the success there will be such that the members of the Poultry Club will be able to select the best specimens for their own use.

The date for the Poultry Club and conducted by Mr. J. H. Benson Palmer is presenting a silver cup, to be won outright, to the member of the Poultry Club who produces the most birds in the competition for this cup will be very large. All entries for the census should be forwarded to the Secretary of the Agricultural Society and not to the Kenya Poultry Club.

Mr. A. M. Douglas has been elected as judge for the "Eggs" Show by the Committee of the Kenya Poultry Club.

In selecting birds for Show, exhibitors should keep in mind that it is most disappointing to find that after entering the birds, some (judgesmen) sometimes prevents the young being shown.

On most farms one bird will probably stand out from his fellows as a potential winner but there is a possibility another bird not so bold in quality. If such a bird is also put into another pen it is not rare of a success disappointed at the last moment. It showing a cock or cockbird for those endeavoring to select a bird which is fully furnished.

FOR HILTON YOUNG COMMISSION.
The Need for a Central Authority for the Territories.

A comprehensive memorandum on Customs Union was adopted at Wednesday's session of the Association of Eastern African Chambers of Commerce at Nairobi for submission to the Hilton Young Commission.

The memorandum, strongly advocates that steps should be taken at once to bring into being a complete Customs Union between the territories of Kenya, Uganda, and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

THE POSITION OF ZANZIBAR.

The Memorandum is as follows: The Association, which was formed in 1920, has since 1922 been working for the purpose of establishing a complete Customs Union between the territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

The Association strongly urges the Government to take steps to bring into being a complete Customs Union between the territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

COMPLETE CUSTOMS UNION.

We strongly advocate steps should be taken at once to bring this into being. We consider that anything less than a complete Customs Union would be a failure. The ideal would be a complete Customs Union between the territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

'On This Day'

On May 18th, 1927, the Customs Union Agreement was signed between the territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

THE DILETTI CASE.

The Diletti case is a well-known case in which the Customs Union Agreement was challenged. The case was decided in favour of the Customs Union Agreement, thereby establishing the validity of the Customs Union Agreement between the territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, under one general administration, thereby abolishing all customs barriers between the adjoining British territories.

TRAINING OFFICIALS FOR AFRICA

Cambridge and London are the Best Places.

A UNION SUGGESTION.

Personally I deplore the fact that the British Government is proposing to do the training of the officials for the African service in the United or Cambridge. South Africa is the best place for such training of being that London.

This opinion was expressed by Dr. Looman, chairman of the Native Affairs Commission, in a lecture on the Department of Administration, delivered as part of the vacation course on January 15th in the University of the Cape Town University.

It has been thought out to us, said Dr. Looman, that students have to go to England or Cambridge to learn the language spoken by officials.

He felt he could express that opinion loudly, as he was an Oxford man.

He would like to think of the future officials of native territories coming to South Africa and doing their work in anthropology and ethnology in the Cape Town of Johannesburg University, which with them were trained the leaders in administration and those who would develop and take charge of the national services as well as the future administrators with their knowledge of law. He would like to think that all this was being done with the background of African ethnology and Bantu phonology and philology. There could be no better start for those whose vocation it was to be guide and control the native.

If all were to be trained in one place, then that place should be a British University. He felt that London offered a far wider range of experience and of environment.

It was suggested that the Government and others in authority over East and West Africa had not explored the possibility of getting men from the Scottish Universities were among the Scottish Universities were among the best officials available.

"The Man on the Spot."
Dr. Looman paid a glowing tribute to the words of Sir Frederick

Lugard, to "the man on the spot," the man who was in the position of best men on the spot and he would like to see the Government taking the lead, supporting native resources and serving as a permanent Commission. Lugard, who had had the Permanent Commission as well as developing the area economically and bringing the people into contact and then, at his own time, writing books on ethnology which formed the basis upon which those in office had to work.

A higher high school in British Africa in native territories was paid in a recently published three-part book issued "Training with Africa," and included all the studies of Foreign Missions in New York. The work consisted of ten essays, five written by European and five by natives, and the compiler, Dr. J. M. G. Jones, the Assistant, spoke in the highest terms of "British standards."

These officials were mostly English public school men with a University training. Some which, however, they had observed, in Lugard's opinion, might be made public knowledge especially adapted for their work. Although they came away with certain characteristics exactly suited to it. These included a passionate suspicion of the play, protection of the work and of the native game resources and the capacity to command staff to obey.

He would like to see some of the public school boys of South Africa enter the army service and Dr. Looman. There were two young officials in Kampala and one in the Cape Town who had been educated in well-known South African schools.

Dr. Looman described and outlined the opportunities for the government of native territories within the Union and the Imperial Protectorates, and he discussed the best means of getting of native opinion.

The Educated Native
He doubted very much whether the educated native himself truly represented the great mass of uneducated native opinion. He felt that the true interests of the "raw natives" were better represented by officials. Nevertheless, said he, in South Africa itself it is not the educated native who had the franchise, but the provincial governments, in the proposals re-organized the right of this native to be represented in the provincial legislatures. All the same the native, although, about 15,000 of them had the franchise, had never sent a native representative to the Union Parliament, though they had never sent one to a Provincial Council.

Native Language
Speaking of native language, Dr. Looman suggested that the native should be trained in the language of his own country as well as in the language of the British Empire. He felt that the native should be trained in the language of his own country as well as in the language of the British Empire. He felt that the native should be trained in the language of his own country as well as in the language of the British Empire.

In connection with the lecture Dr. Looman said that the native should be trained in the language of his own country as well as in the language of the British Empire. He felt that the native should be trained in the language of his own country as well as in the language of the British Empire.

Dr. Looman thought that perhaps the reason for this practice was to give him through the interpreter, proper deliberation on both sides. An official from Harare had said that they had to know the word which the man of transition pointed.
