To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

It is a small relief to be mixed up with only the most prominent characters of Mr. Huxley for my editorial work, which I fear, may have seemed very honourable by reading it.

I do not regard Huxley as a man of great intellect. I do regard him as a man of great energy and of great force of character. I do regard him as a man of great energy and of great force of character. I do regard him as a man of great energy and of great force of character.

EMPIRE FREE TRADE REFERENDUM

Proposal by Conservative Party.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

(BY WRITERS)

Bygones, June 1. Speaking at Leeds yesterday, Stanley Baldwin, the ex-Premier, made reference to the referendum which he had stated would be taken in the event of a British Conservative Government, proposing to set aside the Government's policy of preference to Imperial produce.

He said the referendum was regarded as that the sense of the people would not be further divided and would enable the Government to set on what any further Government following would not feel it necessary to enter any agreement of a fiscal nature that had been entered upon.

The Baldwin statement had been approved and initiated by the Conservative Government who had a majority of over 200 and yet now they saw a minority Labour Government attempting to sweep a vote—British Official Wireless Service.

(BY WRITERS)

Bygones, June 21. The Postmaster-General announces the establishment from June 2 of a public telephone service between this country and London.

The service will be limited at the outset to calls between London and Nairoibi. Telephone area and subscribers in British Africa Official Wireless Service.

WHAT KENYA PEOPLE PAY IN TAXES.

Average Figures of Various Communities.

NATIVE PAYMENTS.

Lord Francis Scott Addresses Constituents at Mt. Kenya.

Some particularly interesting figures showing what the communities of Kenya are paying in indirect and direct taxes were given by Lord Francis Scott at a recent meeting of his constituents at Mt. Kenya.

He urged the abolition of the death duties, which he described as an iniquitous tax for a country which based its system on indirect taxation.

HOME REPRESENTATION.

Thika, May 31. The Lord Francis Scott, who is on his second tour of his constituency, addressed the Thika branch of the Kenya Home Representation Society.

He said that the Government had agreed to the Federation Project, the country's first step towards independence.

WIRELESS IN EAST AFRICA.

A RADIO LEAGUE.

Valuable Organization.

The "E. A. Standard" has arranged for the regular publication of a wireless page. This Article, written by Mr. Lionel J. Hughes, a well-known Kenya radio authority.

The news comes forward that the Annual Convention of the South Africa Radio League, which was held in Johannesburg, has concluded and that several national important matters connected with the League have been discussed. The most important is the membership issue which now allows all members, radio engineers and amateurs alike to be members of a transmitting licence, thus allowing them to be allowed to transmit for the benefit of the League.

The full report of the Convention will be found in the May edition of "G.P.O." the League's publication.

Probably many people who have noticed N.A.R.L. notes in the "E. A. Standard" have wondered actually who they were that they were connected with amateurs was probably well known, but what their ultimate aims and objects were were quite unknown.

The South Africa Radio League, which originated in the Union of South Africa, now includes the two Rhodesias, Tanganyika Territory, Uganda and Kenya—viz the majority of members in Egypt and West Africa, is a society of transmitting amateurs and other interested in the propagation of Radio waves. Although it includes in its membership many known professional Radio men, it has no special relations with any one.

The main object of the scientific study—was as well as a propagandist as well as a propagandist (it is to be understood that an amateur is limited to amateur to water where commercial use is allowed (Kilowatt). They, in addition to other amateurs in the world, have definite wire-wards upon which they work without interference from other amateurs and, in fact, they have no special relations with any one.

It is well known that there are many of these men, and that they are not only in the world, are maintained in International Radio Union, which, owing to the international nature of such work, is a very important factor in the combined interests of all amateurs. In this respect, the combined interests of all those men, and that they are not only in the world, are maintained in International Radio Union, which, owing to the international nature of such work, is a very important factor in the combined interests of all amateurs.

radio communication with other parts of the world. Some of the work done in the past has been towards a world group. The League has a number of members in each zone, and it is intended to set up a number of stations in each zone, and it is intended to set up a number of stations in each zone, and it is intended to set up a number of stations in each zone.

HORTICULTURE

keep Kilgus grass in good condition, also you cannot rest it too often either. If you find it developing into long runners, trim these into short lengths, whether you are, and trim down with good soil and lawn or low parts of lawns or low parts may be filled in grasses with care adding more soil into the grass come through, thus eventually you obtain a good level surface.

After you have cut the grass on the edges of the paths and borders should be trimmed either with a edging shears or other means on a straight line heavy use of cord and/or by this, but if you keep a good deep cut edge this will not be necessary, for they can follow the old cut; if you keep to a routine weekly, they know what to do week-day whether you are there or not. Or, you can give them a little bit—that's a different thing it all depends. The best thing to do together is the best for the paths and drive, all this a preparation for the week-end.

If you keep the plants constantly going among the plants, they will keep down weeds, and will not open cracks up to leave up the material to the surface, some of the plants that you can use for this purpose, especially those which have small, narrow leaves, and which are not very water wick and shade, cut out all dead or diseased growth, also any covered with peats and it is best covered, generally in one and dead wood, there are vermin and such like. But dead foliage should be put into a pit along with the morning grass and rotted down for use in the garden. The grass generator plant, which kills anything which may be in the rubbish.

Keep up a supply of all things for replacement and use as seeds which you may require, rather planting these in wire trays labelling them. Do not keep the plants on till you are sure they are quite dry or they will rot, usually they are made. Any plants which you wish to propagate up by inserting cuttings, for often seedlings deteriorate by continual reproduction from seed. For instance, this season cut of any deep purple Petunia have turned red, so that I now reproduce from cuttings, but to be sure I have the colour I require for planting. Double petunias are increased by this too. Dahlias of any special variety may be increased quickly by cuttings, take a young one from near the base of the plant for best performance, or say short planted growth will grow more readily cut beneath the third or fourth pair of leaves from the base, and divide in a single pair, from either side of the base, and divide in a single pair, from either side of the base, or you may use a stem which will soon root, and with the aid of the roots, the stock will soon be raised.

Thyrses which have become dense clumps, should be dug up and divided, plant straight for best, either in rows, for cutting, or in clumps in the beds or borders. They will then make good spikes of wood, and continue for a season or two, without further attention. Hemerocallis also which, have become large clumps, should also be divided and replanted. Lilium Longiflorum should not be cut off when finished flowering; they should be left until they turn yellow at the base, when they should be examined for bulbs, and planted into a nursery bed to strike soil. A great many bulbs are lost by the boys using pots round them, distributing the young bulbs which eventually die, sometimes six to ten will be found at one plant. Mariposa too, like dividing her for when this is done, and they are planted, check the quality of the spike is improved, but at times they generally do better when undisturbed for a season or two. There are many few varieties now with a great variety of colours, prefer a perfect material to do with.
