IF any man ever made a sauce that was as good as LEA & PERDINS, you can be sure he would as well as the appearance of his name. Yes, practically every "Worcestershire" sauce you buy is a copy of the original. The key fact that it has to contain the Lea & Perrin label and bottle, and that for all that, thousands of people who buy it for their own "Lea & Perrin's" do so because they know it is the "Worcestershire" when they mean "Lea & Perrin's." ZIMBABWE. It is ordinarily observed that it appeared that the walls of the fort were made of the ancient ruins of Rhodesia, in the shape of the wall of the fort, which was not part of the original construction. This is borne out by the fact that the wall is of a different shape to that of the original wall. It is also noted that the wall is of a different shape to that of the original wall.

HOW GERMANY PREPARED. The German merchant ships had been ordered to the last detail for an intended voyage to some coast at least, but were down in the sea. The German merchant ships had been ordered to the last detail for an intended voyage to some coast at least, but were down in the sea.

RUSSIAN ARMY REFORMS. Writing in the Times Russian correspondent, Mr. Lavat France writes upon the reforms which have taken place in the Russian army. Perhaps nothing has struck British observers more than the abundant proofs of the reforms effected in the Russian army since the days of the Japanese war. It is felt that the lessons of that great conflict have been fully learned, and that the Russian army has undergone a complete re-education during the last decade.

ZEBRUG SHELLED BY NIGHT. Zebraug was heavily shelled in the moonlight one evening in April. The British opened fire at 9.30, and the shelling continued until 11.30. The coast batteries answered irregularly. It was an awe-inspiring scene in the peaceful moonlight sky. The inferno of shells burst every few seconds, and the mounds of smoke were rising to dead and through the mist.
