Difficulties the Farmer Has on Copra With

TOWN MOTS

It is generally known that the copra trade in Kenya is a very important one, and that the farmer has to contend with many difficulties. The most serious of these is the difficulty of getting the copra to market. The copra is a bulky commodity, and it is difficult to transport it to the coast. The farmer has to pay a high price for the transport, and he has to pay a high price for the copra itself. The result is that the farmer is often at a loss to know how to get his copra to market.
