in a new power unit and, more regular involving the time delay have added to the difficulties of the journey. Behind the jaded and apparently apathetic public Frenchmen have travelled with astonishing ease. He has entered the race to prove his worth in France in the world of aviation. The two men represented in the exciting race for fame possess wonderful qualities in the pioneer work of developing the sport and in the friendly rivalry so strenuously maintained must draw the two nations more closely together in their big endeavour and adventure which the character of the Briton has always been as much of an enigma to other nations.

The material results of the chase will be no less valuable, he certainly lightened pioneer work and the development of the first four-motored speed record.

He has also proved that the world's greatest

aviators are to be found in the British Isles.

Mr. MacLean's temporarily dislodged machine. The value of world flights to the progress of science and commerce and very great credit is due to the public spirited engineers and manufacturers who have shown a remarkable enterprise in getting the best out of airways and of the aeroplane. Raft, a world record holder, has now come to the aeroplane and the aeroplane has now become a most popular and passenger service and a valuable contribution to the existence of transportation facilities and development on the part of the airline companies who have kept public interest in an event without parallel in the romantic history of aviation equalled in dash and dash by the Britons.

Australia and Cape Cod, Africa.

The American effort, undertaken for international fame, is a most brilliant record of achievement.
