Heavy losses were also made in America.

PRODUCER'S HISTORY

Mr. Coulson, according to statements made in his preliminary examination, began business as a producer of entertainments about twenty-five years ago. He obtained his discharge in 1907, but he had two years' suspension. All the details under that failure, with the exception of a few small errors, have been paid.

His business was successful until 1920, when he secured a twenty-year licence of the Oxford Theatre. He undertook to spend £25,000 on reconstruction and renovation, but owing to industrial conditions and owing to accident to the building the actual expenditure in current was £28,045.

He was taken ill while the work was in progress. The delay in reconstructing the Oxford theatre to the cost of the revival "The League of Nations," which he had arranged to produce prior to his illness. The losses he had incurred necessitated the borrowing of money at a high rate of interest.

Mr. Coulson estimated his total value at about £20,000. The value of his assets, consisting of shares in theatrical companies, has not yet been ascertained.

CLEANER MILK.

According to a report which appeared in our columns yesterday, a native employed by a firm of milk vendors was reported on a charge of adulterating milk under particularly odious circumstances. He was given two hotel and, well detected, had made extra money by selling part of the milk to a native woman in Gwary Road, therefore making good the deficit from the waters of the Nairobi River.

The dangerous consequences of this practice are so very real that we regret that we feel the public have a right to demand immediate action on the part of the authorities. The milk supply to Nairobi comes from numerous sources, and it is evident from the story revealed in the "Times" that there is no safety in this regard under the present uncontrolled circumstances of supply. Milk, like butter and honey and other items of daily consumption, must not be cheap in Nairobi, and it is further urged that the Government should take steps to ensure that the primary safety of public health is not neglected. We would not want the whole subject to be regarded as a mere matter of convenience by the Medical Department and the fact of regulations are being enforced. When they will be enforced, we have no means of ascertaining, but we suggest that it is impossible to see to provide against a repetition of the case in which we have reported, leaving the details of the submission and the investigation of dairy premises to be dealt with at a later date when the legislation has been drafted.

THE EAST AFRICAN STANDARD.

Monday Times & Uganda Argus.

TUESDAY, OCT. 21, 1936.

CLEANER MILK.

There are three essentials we believe cannot be dispensed with in a compulsory scheme of milk supply: (1) Compulsory testing of milk by a method which is proof against interference by dishonest vendors; (2) compulsory registration of all milk vendors; and (3) inspection of whatever raw, and (4) disinfection upon sterilization by an approved method of all bottles and containers.

We have sufficient danger to public health in Nairobi already without the discovery of adulterated milk under particularly odious circumstances. The report of the adulteration of milk under such circumstances is not only a disgrace to the authorities, but it is also a warning to the public that the milk supply in Nairobi is not safe.

The Government should take steps to ensure that the primary safety of public health is not neglected. We would not want the whole subject to be regarded as a mere matter of convenience by the Medical Department and the fact of regulations are being enforced. When they will be enforced, we have no means of ascertaining, but we suggest that it is impossible to see to provide against a repetition of the case in which we have reported, leaving the details of the submission and the investigation of dairy premises to be dealt with at a later date when the legislation has been drafted.

BROKE THE BANK THREE TIMES.

"How I Won £243,000 in a Day at Monte Carlo"

LESS RISKY THAN FARMING
The chief de-partie rose to his feet. He looked flushed. Play at the table had stopped. "I had won there was no more money. I had broken the bank three times."
In those days Mr. Arthur de Combs Brown, who was recently dead in London for drinking till he was an absolute brute in the Casino-negre neighbourhood, described how he won £243,000 at Monte Carlo in one day, when he broke the bank three times.
"I went to Monte Carlo," he said, "with the intention of breaking the bank. I had perfected my system after thirty years' experience of the game in South America and elsewhere. I took £27,000 with me."
"I played two hours in the afternoon and two in the evening. The sums were substantial. I was in the bank. I had broken the bank three times."
"I always made it a habit and fast rule never to take my winnings out of the bank, and I had reached the maximum, and I stood by it. It was the evening."
"I had one assistant already. I counted the money, and applied for a loan which I felt sure was due."
"I shall never forget the moment when I came."
"I counted my assistants with £4,000 each and gave them their instructions. I was quite satisfied. I lost steadily."
"Then came a revival, and I won back most of my losses. I rushed to Cro's to have a drink and think things over. I decided the time had come to throw all my weight against the bank."
"I went back to the Casino and took my seat. My assistants following my cue played in unison, and we won time and again, until we had money in heaps beside us. My month began to go dry as a bone. But I dare not leave the table, for I knew a critical moment was near. It soon came."
"NO STOPPING ME."
"After I broke the bank for the first time, there was no stopping me. More money was brought. One after I won until there was some left. I had broken the bank for the second time!"
"By that time the atmosphere in the Casino was electric. I was surrounded by a crowd of people who expected me to stop playing for fear my luck would turn."
"But I had trust in my system. More money was brought. I started play again. And in an hour and ten minutes I broke the bank for the third time in one day, something never done before."
"I have never played since, except as a pastime."

POULTRY NOTES.
HEARING CHICKS
Hearing of chicks by hand is simple, but requires patience and skill. The principal rule is to feed little and often. Do not put down the chicks to bed the whole day. They require feeding every two hours to start with, and only reduce their meals for the time being when they are well. All surplus should be removed from their stomachs by the first two days in the morning, and the last food meal at night. After the first week, the chicks give four-hour meals. After the chicks are four weeks old, three meals a day are sufficient.
As to the feeding of young chicks, experience is very useful. Provided the food is nourishing and wholesome and nicely digested, the farmer can use his own discretion.
HARD BOILED EGG.
Personally I always set hard boiled eggs in the boiler for the first few days. This is one of the many food questions over which there has been much controversy. Some breeders contend that chickens should be reared as much as possible on natural food, and that hence should not supply chicks with hard-boiled eggs. If this is the true argument, it upsets the whole system of poultry farming. Fowls have been domesticated by many years back to all intents and purposes, they have lost their wild instincts and depend on man for their sustenance.
Fowls are well adapted for artificial rearing and feeding because the success which has attended even such drastic measures on intensive poultry farming.
Blink or run range, or even on the semi-free range, will obtain a certain amount of natural food which will lighten the work of feeding, but beyond that fact they are equally good results when their entire food is given artificially. This fact is very evident when one sees the uniformity obtained by the "yard" poultry keepers at home.

The fowl is a newly hatched chick in this country are hatched from egg, outside; male meal, raw pudding with egg in it and towel, animal, and cracked wheat. All soft food should be mixed with water and changed green food given daily. Some give oil mixed with the soft food on the third day in a preventative of bowel trouble.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
Nyro: Will you let me know the correct age of cockerel for producing strong healthy chicks? I have a pure bred cockerel, one month old. What age pullets must I mate with him to produce strong chicks? I may say he is a beautiful vigorous bird.
Answer: The cockerel is on the young side for mating to pullets. Pullets will do better with a bird a year or more old. If it is necessary to use pullets, use them when starting their second clutch of eggs or at about the middle of the outbreak.
Bumari: (A) Is it a bad thing to set pullet eggs, or in other words the very first eggs a pullet lays?
Answer: It is not advisable to set the first few eggs a pullet lays, unless she is well matured. Some eggs will probably be infertile others with weak germ.

(B) What age should chickens be when the mother is taken away? Is it a good thing to separate the mother as early as possible or to leave her with them as long as possible?
Answer: Chicks can be taken away at the mother hen at a month old, but it is much less trouble to leave them with the hen until she gives them up. Almost invariably, the hen leaves the chicks when she nears starting laying again.
(C) At what age should a pullet start to lay?
Answer: A pullet should not be allowed to lay until she is seven months old. If she shows signs before that time, she should be moved to fresh ground. If the pullet's eggs do not set from the time she starts laying, it is advisable to retard the start as long as possible. A.M.B.
