Forestry Vote - 1909-10

You tel. 27 Jan. re estimating savings at £20000 fact of necessity for third Supply Estimate of £5810 was taken into account. otherwise savings would have been estimated at £236.

Mr. Read

We must of course accept this as though it is still difficult to understand why the supplementary estimate and that the latest of the three was ~~shown~~ hidden away as a deduction from anticipated savings while the other two were clearly displayed on the liabilities side of the statement.

This being so, I think we may agree <sup>by telegraph</sup> to savings on subheads of the Forestry Vote <sup>in the current year</sup> being reallocated among other subheads of the same Vote.

Amended 6.5.1910

confirm by despatch, saying that this consent has been given in reliance on the assurance, which is implicit in this telegram, that none of the savings so reallocated are required to meet the expenditure proposed in the three supplementary estimates.

(This is not meant nastily. But, if there were any mistake, we should have to shew the Treasury that it was not to any slackness here).
