NATIVE RESERVES POLICE FORCE TO BE ESTABLISHED.

Improved Status for the Tribal Retainers.

"DIRECT RULE" POLICY IN KENYA.

The proposal to turn the Tribal Retainers into a force to be known as Tribal Police did not find universal favour among the Unofficial Members of the Kenya Legislative Council when the Bill was introduced for its second reading on Thursday. The recently elected members for the Bill valley appeared to consider pretty bluntly as one of the chief suggestions of the Tribal Retainers and the absence of any special provisions for the discipline of the force did not impress the critics.

The second reading was presided over by the Acting Chief Native Commissioner, Mr. Dobbs, who explained that Tribal Retainers had been in existence for many years and administration would have been practically impossible without them. It was with the view to giving them proper protection in the execution of their duties that the Bill had been brought before the House. About two years ago the Police force in the reserves had been reduced by 1000 men and the result had been to show considerably heavier duties on the Tribal Retainers. It had become necessary to recruit them and put them on a better footing than they were before. "In the course of my service out here," said Mr. Dobbs, "I have heard a great many hard things said about Tribal Retainers. I do not think that they are much worse or better than police forces all over the world. The remark was made with laughter so the Acting C.N.C. added "Perhaps that is rather too much to say. There are abuses undoubtedly in all police forces and so long as human nature is human nature, there will be abuses but for their discipline and training and standing there are few not very many abuses among the Tribal Retainers as people make out."

Anticipating criticism, the Acting C.N.C. explained why Tribal police officers were being given powers to enter a hut without warrant, questioning the possibility of detecting cases of theft or of training stolen stock, known to be in a village, as practical examples of the value of the powers. He also explained why it was necessary in such cases as the conveyance of prisoners or cash, or the investigation of crimes, to permit such Tribal police officers to exercise their powers outside their own areas. No extra cost was at present contemplated but in the course of time when the tribal police had been properly organized, the Government would be asked to provide extra money.

The Attorney General seconded the motion.

The Member for West Kenya (Capt. Sir Hon. E. Vaughan Kennedy) said the first principle met was the divergence in policy from direct to indirect rule. They had no information from Government as to whether it was their intention at this stage to make that change in policy and he would like to see the Bill do not make possible the use of police of one tribe to serve in another district. He also queried the desirability of such an organization at all. He also considered that if the natives were to have a right to make police presentations in addition to their normal grievance, there should be a contribution from native funds towards the cost. He was opposed to the formation of this body until some one had been made out of the Bill.

Mr. F. W. Cobbs (Nairobi) also opposed the principle of the Bill. The temporary transfer of the Tribal Retainers system was now being given permanent force. He believed that to be a mistake policy and it was also a mistake to establish two different bodies. Whereas the ordinary police force must be given a disciplinary system, the Tribal Retainers were not engaged as drill sergeants. If they were going to have discipline and morale in this new force, then they must have officers. "The Tribal Retainers will be more than a licensed layer of blackmail. I have had frequent instances of where the Tribal Retainers have abused his power in a very scandalous manner," said Mr. Cobbs later. "If this undisciplined force is to be run about the country it is going to be a dangerous condition of affairs all over Kenya."

Mr. C. O. The Hon. C. G. Durban (Kiambu) stated he would support the Bill but he believed that the force should be brought more closely under discipline.

The Hon. Census Leakey (Nairobi) stated that the Member for Nairobi (Nairobi) said he had been asked by the Acting Chief Native Commissioner to watch the Bill. He was believed, for instance, that it might mean the giving of a chief and headman. He had discussed the matter with the Acting Chief Native Commissioner who assured him that nothing of the kind would happen and that it would really be to the benefit of Government headmen. Therefore (Census Leakey) saw no reason why he should not support a measure intended to carry out more effectively the work in the reserves. He believed, however, that the District Commissioners should have the police under his control. He believed that the ordinary police had a right to enter a reserve. Finally, Census Leakey said he agreed with a great deal of what Mr. Cobbs had said regarding the probable abuse of powers but that was inevitable whether the people concerned had tribal police or not. He was invariable with the African in his present stage.

The Hon. J. E. Schuster (Nairobi) said the Bill sent to a Select Committee.

The Hon. J. G. Kirkwood (Nairobi) supported the general principle of the Bill.

The Acting C.N.C. replying to the debate said the tribal Retainers were part and parcel of the Government's efforts to retain the principle of indirect rule in Kenya. They were domestic police acting in the native reserves under the authority largely of the headmen. "Our intention was to make the headmen of the different localities responsible for peace and good order in their localities and to carry out their duties. The tribal Retainers for the past and the tribal police of the future will carry them out." Mr. Dobbs said he had had a great deal of experience of the troubles arising when police men from one tribe carried out their duties in another and he could see nothing but trouble resulting if that was attempted as had been suggested. He did not think it was possible for the regular police to carry out the duties in the various reserves, provided that without success. Government does not forbid the police to enter a reserve in the course of their duties. All that one asks is that the District Commissioner should inform the D.C. so that he can co-operate. Speaking of training and discipline, Mr. Dobbs said that the tribal police would be trained in the duties of their office. He did not think they wanted such a force to be marching about presenting arms. Their duty was to arrest criminals and prevent crime in the reserves. There was no intention of allowing police to enter into the settled areas. The powers allowing them to go outside were only for exceptional circumstances. He added that those could not be given but he would like the Bill power was provided to meet such cases by very severe punishment but he would like the identity of the Superintendent, Mr. Dobbs said there was no intention to make the Tribal Retainers official. As rules made for the force would be made by the Bill, it was probable that the Governor would make the Chief Native Commissioner and the members of the Tribal Police. At the present time the Tribal Retainers were not a public servant and the Bill was intended to give this position to a man. Mr. E. B. Sherrington said the question of sending the Bill to a Select Committee would be considered by Government.

When the Tribal Police Bill was taken in committee at the Legislative Council on Friday, Mr. G. Durban (Nairobi) referred to the possibility of Government appointing the Chief Native Commissioner to be Superintendent of the Tribal Police. He submitted that that officer had too much to do already to take over the supervision of the force and suggested that the Superintendent should be a man who would devote the time to the force to carry out complete supervision and maintain discipline. He suggested that the appointment should be made by the Government. The Bill provided that this appointment shall be made by the Governor and it was suggested that this appointment shall be made by the Governor. Mr. F. W. Cobbs (Nairobi) said that the Bill to prevent tribal men from going outside the native reserves was not a mistake but that these men should not be free to roam about the country. The Chief Native Commissioner said they were aiming at cooperation with the natives. Mr. Cobbs's suggestion was adopted. It would mean a man, a policeman, would sit over a wall, out of the native reserve into a detailed area and he would be permitted to enter the area. He wanted to dispel the idea that in the reserves were divided into water-tight compartments. He wanted the reserves and in settled areas to be the preservation of law and order. He wanted the operation to be necessary. He was quite sure that the District Commissioners would not have the slightest desire to let their tribal retainers loose over neighbouring farms. They would have a lot to do looking after their own reserves.

How a Letter is Found

THE alphabetical division on the Guide gives the first key.

Is the name you are looking for here?
Yes!

Then you at once see the number of the folder which contains the correspondence, and your hand goes straight to it:

No!

Then if you have had any correspondence at all, it must be in the "Miscellaneous" Folder under the same Alphabetical Division.

Sample, Jan 1st 19

And much easier than referring to a more or less accurate Card Index for the number of the folder, or to a more or less correctly-kept collection of folders in which should be strictly alphabetical order.

Thus it will be seen that the calls for three operations only:

1. Open the Drawer.

BRITISH GOLF'S FAILURE.
A Retrospect of the Open Championship.
HAGEN, THE MASTER MIND.

There could be nothing harder to find than solid evidence to support the claim of British golf that the championship at Muirfield last month was won by a master mind. It is a new spirit that had been born in the spirit of Muirfield. The intensity of the struggle had been completely overthrown. The genius of Hagen triumphed, despite the fact that it had done so in the previous year. Hagen had won the Open at Muirfield by its 10 and 11 hole later Hagen was the Open, and Hagen finished 22nd in the list. At Mer Par over 100 competitors defeated Hagen by 18 up and 17 to play a fortnight later Hagen won the championship.

In the early months at Muirfield Hagen qualified without distinction. In the championship proper he was a poor golfer on a perfect scoring day. Then came the thunder lightning and rain, and at the same time the real Hagen. He came home in 36, after taking 10 to go.

Where, in the matter of these triumphs on anything in the nature of a real course he found it secure there is then it is to be seen in the fact that the most of America's professionals were completely outwitted as the British. Take away Hagen's phenomenal score of 292 and the other stuff takes on a different and brighter look. Farrow finished 208; Diaper U.S.A. 206; Mitchell 200; Allen 200. Two strokes only separated them. Such formed separating them as Cranbrook, Darnley, Sargent, Adams, G. Trout, Macdonald, Smith, Horton, Smith and Melhous were beaten by the two British players, Mitchell and Allen.

The Margin of Success.
The margin of success in events like the open championship have never been larger. Hutchison won at St. Andrew's because Hutchison the amateur stepped on his ball in three of the other championship events. Such formed separating them as Cranbrook, Darnley, Sargent, Adams, G. Trout, Macdonald, Smith, Horton, Smith and Melhous were beaten by the two British players, Mitchell and Allen.

WORLD'S GOLF HISTORY.
Muirfield has once and for all established Hagen as the complete champion. In past seasons he has been identified as the player triumphant of short strokes against the odds created by his own golf. That was an impression which was killed at Sandwick, where he set a deliberate and calculated schedule of strokes. His 222 at Muirfield includes one of the most brilliant rounds ever seen in a championship, and 98 of the best golf ever played on a big occasion, taking weather and other circumstances together. Hagen's two 75s in the stormy conditions of the Friday and the first of them in particular when everything depended upon it may be confidently written into history as one of the greatest championship performances.

The Genius Rare.
Figures such as those given above and records proof that this is a case of the rare genius the genius has produced. The majority of the strokes he plays, or the degree of experience he brings to them would not in themselves add to his own apart from the help of his contemporaries in British or American golf. Behind his strokes there is a very busy and always in control, the master mind that brings out the best in him, but over other men's minds. He is a man of will power developed to the utmost degree, a man of unusual concentration and battling spirit. He is a man who has the will to win at his own risk and will go to prove.

Mitchell's Endgame.
If the recent open event went to show anything it proves that Mitchell has become a greater genius than ever. Just when he looked like winning or at least making a good thing of it he failed. He fought through he did along with Farry. He was a man for British golf and presented it from becoming a leading stroke.

The biggest failure in that crucial test was Diaper. The fine score he made did not hold out. He was out by the wind. Nevertheless, he proved that he was a new power in the game, and if he comes again in a month of Farrow's honors he will be a man to be watched.

The 'Old Story.'
For the eighth time in nine years the British golf has failed. It was on the putting green more than anywhere else that failure was crumpled up. Over and over again he has the old story "gone forth" to put, but the British mind is not at all to be held that waiting game in all probability and many of the other American leading players will be over again next year and if the title is to be restored from them, then that old slogan of the eye. The position must be re-echoed and re-echoed.

SPORTS CLUB FOR LIMURU DISTRICT.
Social Centre for the Settlers.
INAUGURAL MEETING.

The need for some place where the settlers of the Limuru district can meet during their leisure hours for the purpose of sport, both indoor and outdoor, and for general social intercourse, was contemplated by the members of the Highview Hotel on Sunday morning, as a result of which the Limuru Settlers' Social and Sports Club came into being.

The Club is starting in a small way on Friday by the first of them in particular when everything depended upon it may be confidently written into history as one of the greatest championship performances.

DEATH OF GENERAL BOOTH.

most a boyed my power to... In his seventeenth year in 1851 General Booth was made a Freeman of his native town, Halifax.

General Booth married in 1852 Florence, Eliza's sister, who became a notable leader and organizer particularly in the sphere of the Salvation Army's work among women.

On March 8, 1820 George and Brereton Booth reached the age of seventy, an age which in those days would be accounted old. It was said of him that in many respects he was as young as an optimist of outlook, he set an example to his youngest officer.

Under his leadership the Army spread throughout the country, and in 1870 was celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the first year of its work. Before William Booth passed away the organization was established in nearly sixty countries throughout the world.

General Booth found time to interview the spirit of the Salvation Army in a number of books. His "Edo and Monaco" affords many glimpses of a notable life which had "contact with some of the outstanding men and events of the time."

It is the closing days of this life of usefulness to his fellow men, how ever, were replete of the most kind peacefulness which should attend his last days. It is said that General Booth's life during the few months preceding his death was that of a disengaged man. The request made by the High Council of the Salvation Army last January that he should retire from the Generalship on the ground that he was physically unfit for the office was a blow from which the General did not recover. He insisted the High Council's decision in the High Court and public places to his officials "I will live long" and later engaged counsel to make a final plea to the High Council that he should continue as General.

In the lengthy resolution requesting General Booth to resign, the High Council said a tribute to his life and work but stated that as his advanced age it was unlikely that he could recover sufficiently to take up the burden under which he had laboured. Thus, Brereton Booth passed out of the organization in which he had devoted his whole life. It was a pathetic ending to a glorious career, but it was undoubtedly necessary if the great work in the development of which he had played a leading part for so long a time was to continue as he himself would have wished.

A Tribute.

WE KNOW OUR OWN FOLK. HIS DEATH IS A LOSS TO THE NATION. His officers, loved him for his warm, generous, gentlemanly nature, his deep knowledge of the Salvation Army, his high sense of duty, his successful work as an organizer, his strength of character, his ability to inspire his men, his unflinching courage, his unshakable faith, his unswerving loyalty, his unerring judgment, his unyielding integrity, his unimpaired health, his unbroken energy, his unrelenting industry, his unceasing devotion, his unending sacrifice, his unending love.

Visit to Japan.

How well I remember his coming to Japan during my term of service there. He was welcomed by ten thousand people. His presence raised the morale of the Japanese people. He was everywhere, and his words were everywhere. He was the embodiment of the Christian faith, and his life was a living example of the Christian ideal. He was the light of the world, and his death is a great loss to the world.

A Balling.

There is not one officer among us in Kenya but who looks up to him as a leader. He was a man of high character, and his life was a living example of the Christian ideal. He was the light of the world, and his death is a great loss to the world. He was the embodiment of the Christian faith, and his life was a living example of the Christian ideal.

The Royal Air Force in Afghanistan.

More than 800 airplanes were used and 35,000 miles flown with a loss of two machines, while 600 British subjects and foreigners were conveyed to safety without a single casualty.

Reasons of the King.

There was one exciting incident. The King, being with his personal staff, was seen at the starting line. He was seen to be in the best of health, and his presence raised the morale of the British troops.

His Majesty's great service.

As well as a public Great because of his goodness, his nobility, his abounding sympathy, his generosity, his courage, his strength, his wisdom, his justice, his mercy, his kindness, his love, his faith, his hope, his charity, his patience, his endurance, his perseverance, his industry, his diligence, his industry, his diligence, his industry, his diligence.

MOTHS ARE NOT MUSICAL.

ment is beyond my power to describe.

In his seventieth year in 1926 General Booth was made a Freeman of the Master Masons.

When, on March 8, 1926 General Booth reached the age of seventy, an echo which some men would regard as a warning of old age, it was said of him that in seventy he was in the zenith of his life.

Broken Health.

The closing days of this life of usefulness to his fellow men, however, were robbed of the content and peacefulness which should have been his just reward.

Some of us remember his daring action of 1860 on behalf of suffering workmen, to which he proved his willingness to go all lengths—in jail if necessary—that the youth of England might be protected.

had well nigh collapsed. Thus, Branswell Booth passed out of the organization as which he had devoted his whole life. It was a pathetic ending to a glorious career, but it was considered necessary for the great work in the development of which he had played a leading part for so many years to be continued as he himself would have wished.

A Tribute.

HOW HIS OWN FOLK REGARDED HIM

We his officers loved him the warmer, given gentlemen—the moral ideal of the Salvation Army, whose lives he saved.

I remember him—and so do others working with me in Kenya with those earlier days when we were privileged to come into fairly close contact with General Booth.

There is not one officer among us in Kenya that turns the leaf of a book as well as a Leader. Transient as were his responsibilities, he always found time to read the reports of the needy, the afflicted, the sorrowful, and the helpless.

more recently years it had been our privilege to see the General personally, and one of these occasions was for our coming on the Missionary ship.

Always he has been a champion of the Missionary enterprise. But requests for money or people have not only reached his ear, but his heart was always ready to respond according as he was able.

Via to Japan.

How well I remember his coming to Japan during my term of service there. He was welcomed by ten thousand people.

For sixteen years he was an itinerant. Many of the young folk whom he helped and loved into the ways of righteousness have come to take place in the organization as he has done.

was hopelessly out of sympathy with their cause from the start, and even from the beginning.

More than 80 bombers were made and 85,000 miles flown with a loss of two machines, while 500 British subjects and foreigners were conveyed to safety without a single casualty.

Rescue of the King.

There was one exciting incident. The King being held by his captives, a mission to rescue him, the attempt being a desperate one.

There was a great service as well as a genius. Great because of his goodness.

For sixteen years he was an itinerant. Many of the young folk whom he helped and loved into the ways of righteousness have come to take place in the organization as he has done.

was taken in hand by the British. We had no soldiers, and no means of enforcing authority.

When the machines were in sight we made a signal to both armies to cease fire.

There is no doubt whatever that the Royal Air Force on this occasion by their valiant act only saved the city and the foreign legation from a terrible fate.

A Traffic Problem.

The police have many traffic problems at their disposal in Nairobi, but so far none has been quite so perplexing as that which faced the police chief at the Sixth Avenue-Government Road junction.

TWO MORE TO GO.

Last Moment Gift by Anonymous Donor.

A happy and excited party of twelve Kenya boys set down to tea at the home of Mr. Wade, the Acting Commissioner of the Boy Scouts in Kenya, yesterday afternoon.

These were the first of the boys to have been chosen to represent the Colony at the World Jamboree in London, to depart on Monday, June 12.

The boys met His Excellency the Acting Governor, Sir John Smith, who sent specially to see them to wish them a successful and happy adventure.

All the preliminary arrangements have been completed and to-day at 4 p.m. when the Kenyan train leaves Nairobi station the adventure will really start. Immediately on their arrival in London on Wednesday morning the party will embark on the s.s. "London Castle" on which boat they are to travel to Lourenço Marques.

At Lourenço Marques the boys will be met by an official party and will be accompanied by any necessary persons and will be in charge of the senior number, Troop Leader 1st Class Scout, A. E. Baines, 1st Nairobi.

THE BOOTLEGGERS OF PARANGU

120 Fines For Two Native Women.

A GROWING TRADE.

Fugals bootleggers or, in other words, those who are engaged in the business of selling illicit liquor which is supplied to various districts, filled the Resident Magistrate's Court yesterday when two female bootleggers were fined a total of 120 for the sale of illicit liquor.

During the hearing of the case, the Resident Magistrate, Mr. J. A. Cream, made an enquiry regarding the maximum fine in such cases and was informed that a penalty of £100 could be imposed.

Both the accused were women. The first, strongly counselled by the Court, pleaded guilty to the offence of selling illicit liquor.

The Court Prosecutor, Inspector Crisp, stated that the only way these offences could be stamped out was by the imposition of a fine of £100.

The Magistrate asked if there was much drunkenness in Parangau and was informed that there were about five cases of drunkenness from Parangau and Punjani before the Court that morning.

The Magistrate imposed a fine of £20 with the alternative of two months' imprisonment.

Practicable Business.

In the second case, the woman admitted a previous fine of £50 imposed in August, 1937, for being in possession of illicit liquor.

The Magistrate, addressing the Prosecutor—'Do you suggest that this is becoming an industry?'

The Prosecutor replied that it was becoming an industry and that there were about five cases of drunkenness from Parangau and Punjani before the Court that morning.

The Magistrate imposed a fine of £20 with the alternative of two months' imprisonment.

RYERY OBJECTS TO THE COFFEE INSTITUTE.

Protest Against Being Ranked into Decision.

INQUIRY ALTERNATIVE.

The Coffee Planters' Union, at a special meeting on the 21st instant proposed to discuss a resolution suggesting the establishment of a Coffee Institute to control the industry.

The Committee of the Mount Kenya Association, in a letter to the Secretary of the C. P. U. and to the "Standard," take strong exception to the proposal.

The letter reads: "The Committee of the Mount Kenya Association have only known today from the issue of the 'Best African Standard,' dated June 11th, that the Coffee Institute is being set up under Government Charter."

"The Committee consider that such a reaching effect of a resolution of the main industry of the country is entirely inadvisable. If the resolution is not withdrawn it should be strongly opposed."

"Every opportunity should be taken to bring the matter before the public in order to decide either for or against."

"While holding this view in regard to the resolution referred to, the Committee of the Mount Kenya Association recognize that there is ample room for material improvement in scientific research and practical application of the art of coffee production and would support a resolution providing for a Committee to thoroughly investigate and bring forward recommendations to the best means of solving these objects."

"When such report has been completed, before any further action is taken, the fullest opportunity should be given to all districts to carefully consider the recommendations or schemes for the advancement of the industry."

"In view of the urgent importance of all those engaged in the coffee industry realizing how ill it is sought to commit them, a copy of this letter is being forwarded to the Press and to the various newspapers for publication before the meeting on the 21st instant."

A RECORD DISPLAY OF ROSES.

Delights of the Flower Show.

THE PRIZE LIST.

The Memorial Hall, Nairobi, was converted from the solemn Legislative Council Chamber to a room of new beauty and variety of the flower show.

Outstanding amongst all sections were the roses and the carnations. Never before has such a magnificent display of roses been shown in Nairobi, and that is saying much for the quality of the roses.

The carnations were particularly fine. The best rose in the show was a magnificent 'Mrs. Henry Moore,' which amongst other varieties included several special attention were some beautiful 'F. J. Harrison' and 'The Success' roses.

KENNEL NOTES

Margaret Collyer

Miss Collyer, Gt. Ill., to whom all correspondence, in connection with "Kennel Notes," should be addressed, does not hold herself responsible for accuracy of statements made by her which are, in the main, based on information supplied by her correspondents.

I will first answer Miss Anderson's letter as she seems to be in trouble with her dog. I thank her very much for her contribution to my fund; it will help find the way to Mr. Sidney Walker, Hon. Sec. It was just as well to have the puppy put down as he had developed the, it would in all probability have had cholera which is fatal. Although the puppy may have had tick-fever as a secondary ailment, the real trouble was cholera. It has been determined. All the symptoms point to this. The violent diarrhoea, the vomiting, the loss of the dog's strength, the loss of the dog's appetite, the loss of the dog's ability to walk, the loss of the dog's ability to stand, the loss of the dog's ability to see, the loss of the dog's ability to hear, the loss of the dog's ability to smell, the loss of the dog's ability to taste, the loss of the dog's ability to feel, the loss of the dog's ability to think, the loss of the dog's ability to love, the loss of the dog's ability to live.

I have had several letters within the last few weeks asking for a remedy for hook-worm, and I must confess last week the "Indian Kennel Gazette" sent me by Mr. McEwen. These letters I have received a copy of the "Indian Kennel Gazette" and I quote a paragraph from it on the subject of hook-worm. "We have on two or three occasions had to do with hook-worm, which is common in some parts of the country, and particularly so in Burma. Dr. Evelyn A. Bider writes—"It is not generally known that Carbon Tetrachloride is very efficacious as hook-worm, and causes the animal to shed very little, if any worm. This drug is sold under the trade name Nemo. Consult, by Farnes Davis and Co. We were sure our Native Reserves Police Force to be Established.

That the Bill appeared to make it possible for a tribal policeman to enter a European's house, if he thought it to be a resort of disorderly characters. He did not require that a tribal policeman could only go outside his district under certain circumstances.

Some amendment was considered over a proposed amendment to the last clause giving the Governor power to make rules. Captain the Hon. E. Vaughan Kennedy (West Kenya) suggested that the Bill should be substituted for Governor.

The amendment being put, His Excellency declared carried. The Attorney General thereupon called for a division. The modified Members voted for the amendment and all the Official Members opposed it. The Member for West Kenya asked that before the count was taken, His Excellency's vote should be recorded. The Acting Governor voted with the Elected Members.

The motion was lost by 12 votes to 9. The Bill with relatively unimportant amendments was reported to Council, read a third time and passed.

hot water bottles pulled her round again for a short time but at the third collapse she died in a few minutes. My notion is that the bitch had harboured both tape and hook-worm for sometime and eventually the intestines were perforated by these parasites causing death. By the time she reached me it was too late to do anything but try to restore some strength. Evidently the mischief had already taken place. As far as my knowledge goes nothing could have saved her. Poor Mrs. Grahame has not only lost a valuable dog, but a charming and faithful little friend. The mate of this little bitch came here with her—a really lovely specimen of the smaller West Highland terrier. He won in England before coming to Kenya and both these terriers came from the "Cooches" Kempta. I much hope that disappointment will not prevent Mrs. Grahame from shortly importing another, wife from "Cooches" Kempta. These terriers are much in demand.

ROAD vs. RAIL BILL POSTPONED.

Country Given a Month to Consider Problem.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT DISCLOSED.

Late Sir C. Felling's Exposition of the Railway's Position.

Government has postponed consideration of the Road Traffic Control Bill until July to enable the public to consider the situation.

When the Report of the Roads and Traffic Committee was published yesterday, it was accompanied by a memorandum prepared by the late Sir C. Felling in April last year.

He strongly advocated control on the lines which have since been proposed, giving the competition on the Nairobi-Mombasa road as the example of the importance of deciding the question before the situation developed too much.

The Committee believes that an increase in the rates for export of low value crops made necessary to cover losses caused by road competition would be detrimental to the Colony.

PARAMOUNT CONSIDERATION OF "PUBLIC INTEREST".

In the Legislative Council yesterday the Colonial Secretary said he wished to make a brief announcement in respect of the Motor Services Bill. This Bill was directed to the Fourth Report of the Roads and Traffic Committee, which report had been laid on the table that morning.

The following outline has been made of the Bill. The Government was held up to press the measure and was fully alive to the effect of it if it was proceeded with.

For these reasons the Government did not propose to proceed with the Bill until the next session of the Council on July 1. This would give time for various opinions to be collected including those of the Governments of Uganda and Tanganyika Territory.

Committee's Report.

The following extracts are taken from the Roads and Traffic Committee's Report upon which the Government has acted. The Committee was asked by Government on November 11, 1927, to consider the subject, but some delay occurred until enquiries had been made in other countries as to the policy adopted there.

The problem is one which has arisen in recent years in most countries and has proved difficult to solve to date. Briefly stated, the establishment of motor services has been a serious obstacle to the conveyance of goods along roads parallel to railways, inasmuch as the latter are the main arteries of transport.

EXEMPTION OF MUTHAGA FROM MUNICIPALITY.

Town Council Opposed to Petition.

FINANCIAL COMMITTEES.

Must be Shared by Outlying Areas.

"To be or not to be," has been a thought long troubling the Town Council of Muthaga, as to whether Muthaga should be exempt from the new Municipal Area or not. At the present juncture a Sub-Committee has been appointed by the Legislative Council to deal with a petition on the matter from the residents of Muthaga asking for exemption.

Townsmen Not Considered.

In speaking to his motion, Councilor Eddell said the question was one which must receive serious consideration. A petition had been presented to the Council by the townsmen of Muthaga, asking for exemption from the new Municipal Area or not. At the present juncture a Sub-Committee has been appointed by the Legislative Council to deal with a petition on the matter from the residents of Muthaga asking for exemption.

Burden of Expenditure.

Consequently on the adoption of the Petition Report, the Council had now to provide their own means of expenditure, and the Council had to take into account the fact that the Government had to provide the main objects aimed at, and the Council had to take into account the fact that the Government had to provide the main objects aimed at.

The Kenya Petition.

The Committee is of the opinion that on some roads in the Colony, goods and passengers are being conveyed by road vehicles, and that the effect is already seriously injurious to the interests of the Colony, and that the effect is already seriously injurious to the interests of the Colony.

Question of Roads.

Again, they must not forget that the question of roads is a question of roads, and that the question of roads is a question of roads, and that the question of roads is a question of roads.

NATIVE RIOTS AT DURBAN.

Result of Communist Activities.

Heavy Casualty List.

(THROUGH LETTERS' AGENCY.) Durban, June 18. Five native riots broke out today in the centre of the city in which attacks were made on Europeans. One European and four natives were killed and 10 Europeans and 41 natives were seriously injured.

Communist Activities.

(STANDARD CORRESPONDENT.) Maritzburg, June 19. Rioting broke out in "Pretoria" yesterday afternoon, and the result of Communist activities. Natives charged police, and Europeans came to the assistance of the police, some being revolvers. The European was killed and many were injured while there was a large number of native casualties, four being killed outright.

Ministerial Appointment.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND.

(BY WIRELESS.) Wellington, June 17. The King has approved of the appointment of Mr. John Charles Watson, K.C., to be Solicitor-General for Scotland. Mr. Watson is a member of the Scottish Bar and is a member of the Scottish Bar.

An Amendment.

While agreeing that there was much in the arguments of the speaker, Councilor Sheehy expressed the view that the Government should be before them before making a definite decision. With regard to the question of case must be met and dealt with on the merits.

 Nyeri, June 14.
 The annual Nyeri Lawn Tennis Open Championships were held on June 8, 9, and 10 under perfect weather conditions. This was only the second year of the tournament and it proved an unequalled success. Entries were even better than last year, six clubs being represented, but owing to the indefatigable labour of the referee, honorary secretary, and tennis committee, and to the loan of courts by Mr. Maxwell and the Outspan Hotel, all events were played off in good time leaving only two semi-finals and the final for last day.

There were some very good matches, notably in the finals of the men's and the ladies' events.

Only two semi-finals and the final for last day.
 There were some very good matches, notably in the finals of the men's and the ladies' events. The men's singles ran to five sets, Dunoon (Parklands) finally obtaining the victory after a hard battle with Simpson (Kiambu).
 Apart from the individual trophies a shield was presented by the Nyeri coffee planters, to be held by the Club with the greatest aggregate of points, those being played by winners of rounds, semi-finals, and finals. Last year's holders, Kiambu, failed to retain their title and Nyeri holds the shield with Kampiro as runner-up. The Club deserved this victory as it had members to every final excepting the men's singles. Parklands, with only three representatives, made a very good showing for third place.

At the close of play Mrs. Ilmorwidge of the Provincial Commissioner, very kindly presented the cups to the winners.
 Owing to the work of Mr. le Tour French and the Provincial Commissioner, and his staff, the Club courts showed a marked improvement on last year. We were unfortunate in losing Mr. le Poer French who had been nominated referee but was called away at the last moment on important business. His place, however, was adequately filled by Mr. H. H. Lyons who performed the duties of referee most efficiently. His work was made easier by the members of outside clubs who offered their services as umpires.

A dance was held at the Club on Saturday night. Sid Zigler's band performing, and on Monday night Nyeri celebrated its victory at the Outspan Hotel.

Topics for the Motorist.

DRIVING A SOLO OR SIDECAR MACHINE.

HINTS TO THE NOVICE ON TAKING OVER THE NEW MOUNT.

Two Groups Governing Control Mechanism.

To learn to drive a motor cycle is to-day very easy indeed. But to impart this knowledge is a more difficult task than it used to be. In the days when I learned to ride a motor cycle I was "punched off" by two friends, after being told to open the throttle lever when I wanted to go quicker and to raise the exhaust lever when I wanted to stop. There was no gear or clutch, and no brake worth mentioning. The motor "went" or "stopped."

The things I have learned. The modern motor cycle has become a more complicated thing, because it has been made easier to ride anywhere and of differing size. It has become more simple in control even though it is more complicated, always providing the rider fully understands the functions of the various controls and differences between those levers which regulate the "going" and the "stopping" and those which change the efficiency and performance of the machine.

Retainments Later!

Now I have divided the controls into these groups so that the beginner may have the advantage of learning to drive in the very simplest terms—namely of starting and stopping, as in the old and distant days, and then the refinements of control may be added later.

A Similar System of Control.

In general, the recruit to the realm of motor cycles will find that all machines, with one or two not very great exceptions, have a similar system of control. To a pedal cyclist these controls may appear to be very mysterious, for in (as we will see) used only for two handle-bar brake levers, or perhaps, one lever and a coaster brake, and, in some cases, a three-speed control. The cyclist who has used a three-speed hub will be much more at home with a motor cycle than one who has not.

The first step in learning to ride a motor cycle should be undertaken at home, and can be done even before the machine is acquired if one has access to a control plan such as those in some makers' catalogues. Through familiarity with the controls before the machine is taken on the road, the driver's knowledge becomes more certain. Most modern motor cycles conform to the following essential control plan, but the absolute beginner should be given a thorough understanding of the various functions, divide the control mechanism into two groups, and (3) the essential running controls for going and stopping, and (4) the controls for increasing efficiency.

The Two Control Groups.

In group (a) I place:

- (1) The clutch control—on a vertical lever on the left handle-bar.
- (2) The throttle control—a small lever or twist-grip on the right handle-bar.
- (3) The brake control—a pedal near one of the footrests, front or rear (usually inverted) on the right handle-bar. Controls in the second group are:
- (4) The gear change—a lever on the right hand side of the tank, controlling the gear. This comes into special use for climbing steep hills or running extra slowly in traffic.
- (5) Ignition control—a small lever on the left handle-bar for adjusting the spark timing to increase maximum speed or to improve smooth running at very low speed.

Additional to the foregoing there are three extra controls used only for starting, they are:

- (6) The kick-start—a pedal on the left hand side for rotating the crankshaft.
- (7) The exhaust lever—a lever (usually inverted) on the left handle-bar for releasing the compression in the cylinder while the kick-start is in use.
- (8) Extra air—a small lever on the right handle-bar (mounted with the throttle lever) which the throttle is lever controlled) used to ensure a rich starting "mixture," and also for adjusting the mixture to give maximum economy.

By doing this you will find that the machine will move slowly for starting, but will be "up" to the rests when the clutch is fully engaged the balancing of the machine will be quite instinctive as in the case of a pedal cycle, and the weight will not be felt—so long as the machine is kept in position on which the available pedal cyclist may have misgivings.

First Step.

Running quietly in low gear, practice steering an unweaving machine as a gentle speed, just fast enough to give automatic balance to the machine. And immediately begin to learn how to stop in emergency.

When pulling up for a moment, remember that the engine is to be kept running for immediate use, so it were, at the same time as the brake (or brakes) are applied, use the "disconnector" (usually, thereby allowing the engine to run free. Practice a considerable number of stops in this way, remaining in bottom gear.

In order to go more quickly we bring the second group of controls into play—the efficiency, or (B) group. Only in top gear shall we obtain the maximum speed on the level, and the process of learning to drive in the very simplest terms—namely of starting and stopping, as in the old and distant days, and then the refinements of control may be added later.

Getting Away.

The student in engine or for coupling up the lever or the new wheel. When the clutch is "up," the engine will run free, and when it is "in" the engine will drive the machine. When the clutch is pulled out the gear lever may be moved safely from neutral and the machine will be moved. De-clutch, therefore, and move the gear lever from "neutral" to the low gear notch. Now the machine is ready to go; and to go smoothly from rest the rider must do two things simultaneously. The clutch lever must be released not so slowly; and the throttle must simultaneously be gently opened.

Quaker Oats
 Essentials to health

change is to be made, leaving the throttle lever unopened, pull the clutch out for a moment, and then "rev up" for a moment, and then make the gear lever in and release the clutch.

When climbing hills do not wait until the engine has slowed right down, but change down at the speed which experience tells you is best. Be happy.

After the "revving" of the engine at the next low gear, and practice stopping some more!

A few changes of procedure—or of method, rather—will be demanded if the machine has a side-car attached. Control of engine, gear box, and brakes will be the same, except that the braking force must be greater and the gear box must be used more frequently; speed control may also be needed more, depending on the type of machine.

To anyone who has only ridden a solo motor cycle or a pedal cycle the handling of a "side-car" will feel curious at first, to say the least of it, for the instinctive attempt to "balance" will result in steering towards the right. Solo riding must be mastered first.

Ride on the machine and let it run slowly. Keep only a light hold on the handle-bar, and practice use, over-correction of the left hand, and the right hand, and finally, in a violent reverse to the right. Choose a wide, unobstructed road, and practice the same manoeuvre and still an expert driver at last. But remember, above all, to have only a light hand on the bars.

Cornering Without Steering.

As soon as straight steering has been mastered try corner, slowly, by leaning the body. A fairly strong pull to the right, but a left corner will call for much less pull. As speed has been increased slightly, experiment with leaning and acceleration as an aid to cornering. A side-car becomes almost self-steering when proper leaning is used. As the right hand is approached fast and then rear brake is used and the throttle closed, the side-car will lean towards the left. As the left hand is approached slowly and then taken with increasing acceleration all the way round, the side-car will lean towards the right. When these trials have been mastered, the driving of a side-car will be found so easy and effortless that the learner will be amazed that he ever experienced any difficulty at all.

The difficulty, of course, is a purely subconscious one, due to the instinctive balancing to which the solo rider or cyclist is accustomed.—(H. Donald in "The Motor Cycle.")

NAVIGATION OF KAGERA RIVER. Colonial Office Approval of Scheme. TO COST ABOUT £250,000.

Opening up of New Areas for Trade Development.

The Colonial Office has approved a scheme put forward by Sir William Gowers, Governor of Uganda, for the spending of some £250,000 on the construction of roads in order to facilitate the establishment of navigation on the Kagera River.

It is stated that credit for this scheme, which should result in considerable development of trade, is chiefly due to the energy of Sir William Gowers, while the Uganda Chamber of Commerce and the East African section of the London Chamber are active in the matter.

CREDIT DUE TO SIR WILLIAM GOWERS.

With reference to the Colonial Office approval of Sir William Gowers' scheme to spend over £250,000 of the Uganda Government surplus on roads in Ankole and the establishment of navigation on the Kagera River, Mr. Humphrey Leggett informs me that he made it clear to the Uganda Chamber of Commerce that he was very active and interested in the scheme, and finally to the East African section of the London Chamber which had long urged the Government to approve of the scheme.

The decision is one of the first acts of the new Colonial Minister. It is the best scheme apparently that has been proposed by the Uganda Chamber of Commerce in its history. The cost will be £250,000, or thereabouts, and will be taken from the Uganda Government surplus of £250,000.

THREE MONTHS NOTICE. Chamber's Recommendation to Government. (STANDARD CORRESPONDENT.)

At a well-attended meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon Mr. C. P. Davis, the Vice-President, read the Chamber's recommendation to Government.

On the question of the Protective Tariff and preferential rates, Mr. Davis, in the absence of the Hon. E. D. Jones, M.L.C., presided over the meeting, attending the meetings of the Associated Chambers of Commerce. The Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon Mr. C. P. Davis, the Vice-President, read the Chamber's recommendation to Government.

Not Satisfactory. These reports did not seem to be in accordance with the meeting yesterday. Kenya has had nearly seven years of the protective tariff and it is not clear why it is still not satisfied.

A Previous Objection. In 1912 a similar proposal was made by the Kenya Chamber of Commerce, but it was not adopted at that time.

Legal Costs. A notice of motion was filed at the meeting of the Kenya Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon.

Opportunity. What is apparently desired is an opportunity to take a new step in the development of Kenya.

Suspense. A notice was filed by the Kenya Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon.

Government. The Government has been informed of the Chamber's recommendation to Government.

Reflections on the Plateau Golf Championship.

NO CONSISTENCY TO MARK THE PLAY.

Grant Hay's Good Record Ruled.

(By a Special Correspondent.)

The Plateau Golf Championship has come and gone, and for the first time since it was instituted in 1925, an Elders' player has won. One popular voter could have been found than Grant Hay, who in his year of office as captain of the Elders' team, was distinguished by recording an initial victory in the tournament. In the five years of the championship has been played not once has Elders' succeeded in claiming victory until 1930, when first inaugurated in 1925, the winner, J. Tennant, came from the East Uganda. In the two following years, Captain Allan Gilson, Gilbey, scored successive victories, and last year Horwood of Kisumu established the cup in the field. By a curious coincidence, Horwood's win was at the expense of a fourteen handicap man. This year, the victory was claimed from a man who two months ago was, fifteen, and now stands at ten. The merit of his performance must be judged with an attention to these facts. In something like eight or nine weeks he improved his game by five strokes, then, from the position of a rank outsider, came up like a real "dark horse" to contest the final.

Golfing Psychology.

Golf is a notoriously funny game. The difficulty is not so much the strokes one plays as the maintenance of a degree of consistency. There are the factors of nerve strain, the psychology of meeting a player who consistently out-drives, out-putts, or wears one down by a series of brilliant shots. Again, there is the question of temperament. Some players are not fitted with the necessary balance to play to big golf, or under the eyes of a numerous audience. These latter factors have been the undoing of more than one otherwise superlative player.

A Lack of Consistency.

All these factors were apparent in the course of the recent championship meeting. Grant Hay succeeded in maintaining anything approaching a steady game. A good round was invariably followed by a bad, or at least a moderate half. From a player of the ability and past performance of Grant Hay it is but natural to expect better than that at times more than one. He failed in the final over thirty-six. The conditions were sufficient to warrant it, a grueling heat, tempered only by the heavy dew, and a wind which failed to bring the comfort expected from it, added to which there was the usual state. When a man is expected to do his best, it is in a mental handicap, heaviest of all, because failure must mean a certain degree of loss. That he pulled through in the end was testimony to his ability for a championship final, but in reality severe. Again, he had an opponent to meet, who stuck stickily to him, and who was not letting up.

Saturday a High Standard.

If there was a high standard of golf, it was that apparent on the morning of the second day. The comfortable margin which had held mostly to the end of the Friday was not out. The first round of the matches was taken up to the sixteenth green. It was up until 7. Williams was two up on Horwood. The golf in this round was really good. The leader touched the turn in two over par, but his figure was not so good, little being left by only two strokes. There came an up-beat. Horwood struck a bright patch, and took five holes in succession. Matters went well at the seventeenth, and the last green heaved.

Williams had a pretty shot, but he got there, and on the difficult of the second hole, he has failed to take his opponent to the last green, he got in, but in the nature of an accident, that he should had the same to him on this occasion.

Self Representative.

In the tie between Hay and Roberts, the latter, who was opposed to a man who gives and with it, the biggest.

The real sensation of the championship was with the dismissal of Gilson, the joint favourite in the third round. Once again it was a tale of poor work on the town. Neither played golf to the standard expected of them. Wilson was not too accurate on the tee, and his approach was weak, but it was within eight or ten yards of the hole that his shortcomings were most apparent. On the other hand, he played moderately throughout. Lack of practice as was the case with a good many more, was his besetting sin. Yet he succeeded in bringing out some of his best towards the close of the game and Gilson. All square at the turn, he struck a putting well, and his opponent's error in his department, the end was seen at the fourteenth hole. The latter of the five holes were one over 4. That brought practice to the finish. Stitt's failed to materialize in the final. It was a case of the best being on the job. Gray was the putter, and Stitt the failure. Time and again the long hand-icapper sent his ball down the line of the putted dead to the hole. Never was a situation more clearly defined. It putting hot Horwood had match with Hay. Their golf was good, representing three very heavy for Horwood, and one more in the case of Hay.

Hay, the Elter.

Throughout the whole tournament, there was one over-pressing feature, and that was the tremendous driving of Grant Hay. In that respect he was the equal of his opponent. Even Horwood, long driver as he is, in this respect had to give him a run for his money for the most. Nor was Hay ever wild. Straight down the pretty sailed the ball on every occasion, excepting, perhaps, in two instances. Here was an instance of a good shot of the game. There are those who would say that the drive is better that the long hit but true. The advantage of that drive is not, because the opponent is fighting to play as good a second. Yet, there must be something unsetting to an opponent who invariably finds himself out-driven by eighty and a hundred yards. The second hole, 102 yards. Hay was playing approaches of little more than sixty or seventy yards with momentum regularly. The eighth, 200 yards, over a hour, was being over-driven, he was escorted to an end. These things and more, under more an opponent's morale. Yet Gray stuck manfully to the end. From six down he pulled his opponent back to two, but into that lead he would not succumb. Gray's shot appeared likely to take the match to very near the same goal, but he struck a bright spot, and the end came sooner than any of the spectators had expected. Gray had fought an uphill battle all through; he came with the wind against him, and that he lasted out as he did, speaks highly of his temperament and his consistency.

A Round of Festivities.

It was a most enjoyable championship. Indeed, more of a gathering of old sportsmen, than a contest for a challenge trophy. But that is just as things should be. The spirit of emulation is good, so long as it is sponsored and governed by the old spirit of sportsmanship. The spirit of emulation is good, so long as it is sponsored and governed by the old spirit of sportsmanship. The spirit of emulation is good, so long as it is sponsored and governed by the old spirit of sportsmanship.

BRITISH RELATIONS WITH AMERICA. Result of Conversations at Forres. PLACED ON SOUND FOUNDATION. Views of Mr. Macdonald, Mr. Henderson & General Dawes.

Following the informal conversations at Forres, in Scotland, between Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, the general Dawes, the newly appointed American Ambassador, the question of the relations between the two countries was discussed by both speakers in subsequent speeches, which were given simultaneously.

Both speakers emphasized the existence of a cordial understanding, particularly in regard to the question of naval disarmament. These conversations had prepared a way for further discussions on the subject, by all nations concerned.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, the British Foreign Secretary during the course of a speech at the dinner at which General Dawes was the guest, dealt with the world-wide demand for peace, and paid a tribute to the work of General Dawes in his post-war efforts towards international reconstruction.

DISARMAMENT PROBLEMS. (THROUGH BUREAU AGENT.) London, June 18. Mr. Macdonald made a speech at a dinner given by the London Municipal Committee in his honor referring to his country's attitude towards disarmament.

He said that the Labour Government had lost no time in coming into harness. "I made it clear before and during the election," he said, "that I would put our relations with the United States on a new basis."

He then to other nations. "We did not meet to threaten other nations," he said, "but to discuss the possibility of a better world."

THE FUTURE OF PEACE. (BY WIRELESS.) London, June 18. Mr. Arthur Henderson, the British Foreign Secretary, proposed the idea of General Dawes, the new American Ambassador, at the dinner given at Forres.

MR. SASTRI'S FINAL APPEAL TO KENYA.
Safeguards Offered in Commonwealth Bill.
DISAPPOINTED ADVOCATE.

(STANDARD CORRESPONDENT.)
Mombasa.

The Hon. Mr. Sastri, P.O., in his final public address in Kenya delivered at Mombasa, set out clearly his views on the racial situation in the Colony and stressed particularly his faith in the efficacy of the Common Roll as the course of his speech Mr. Sastri said:

Now that I am about to leave the country I have been asked, and very properly too, what I have been doing and what I have finally to say. I have, as has been already said, been here to represent the case of the Indian community to Sir Samuel Wilson. The unfortunate delay of a week in my arrival in this country has had one consequence. The Indian Congress appointed a strong deputation to visit upon Sir Samuel Wilson and chose my colleague and friend, Pundit Kuntur, to represent their case. He has therefore been the main spokesman of the Indian community and I have sat aside watching the proceedings and helping, so far as I may, from behind. It was thus left to me to stay at Nairobi and do anything that might be possible to bring about better understanding between the European and the Indian. I have found the task by no means easy. It is not my object to apportion blame. Perhaps another could have done better, but I would say this: that I have found the situation very difficult indeed. If a man with far greater presence and ability to understand the various aspects of the question stayed here several months he might be able to make some impression. As it is, ladies and gentlemen, I may not claim more than that I have tried my best to understand. I have seen as many people as I could and I have established what, in modern phraseology, is called "personal contact" with several influential gentlemen. Whether these personal contacts are going to be of use in the future is more than I at present can say. I hope they will be of use to the hands of a more fortunate representative of the India Government, and it is in that hope that I leave.

The Common Roll.
Now, ladies and gentlemen, that is not a very encouraging account, but I have nothing better and I do not deceive anybody, by saying that they may expect great things. Not. We have, I mean the Indian community have, for some time past, concentrated their attention on the political sphere on a common electoral roll. This has been done by the European community with all their strength and great influence. This question, as you know, came into great prominence as a result of the report of the Hilton Young Commission which in 1919 was commended as an ideal to be aimed at and with regard to which preliminary enquiries should be started by the High Commissioner whom they proposed that the Government should appoint. There is no doubt that the hopes of the Indian community were raised considerably on the subject and it seems to me that they were on the whole quite just and should be treated in the proper light. My endeavor was to the extent that lay in my power, but I have been disappointed at the initiation of the Common Roll to the European community.

Safeguards.
I am altogether on the side of the common roll (Applause). I know by experience in Indian law, unfortunately the consequences of a communal roll have been, and if I have any regard for the welfare of Kenya I should throw all the weight of my influence upon the side of a common roll in this country. I recognize to the full how dear to the heart of the Indian community the common roll is. Yet in order to reassure the European community they have been willing that the common roll should not be employed in its pure and unadorned form. They have been quite willing to introduce into the roll safeguards upon its operation that any fears that the European community may entertain should be removed. To secure this the Indian community have been willing for many years that the franchise in this colony should be a "franchise franchise" as it is called, if need be of a property and educational qualification. You will realize what a great sacrifice it means when you remember that quite recently the adult franchise was conferred on the Indian community almost without their asking for it, that they should now be willing to surrender it, if need be, in order that their voting strength should be brought within a small compass which need not alarm the European community in comparison with their voting strength. They are willing to do that which seems to me a distinct step towards establishing their good faith and moderation. But they have not been content even with that and agreed to the provision that after their voting strength has been so restricted, their number of representatives on the Legislative Council should be considerably less than the number of representatives allotted to the European community upon nearly the same voting strength.

Now these two concessions to the Indian people to make it absolutely irrefutable that the Indian representation of the common roll is not based merely upon selfish considerations when it has induced them to see that every concession is taken so that under it the political balance of this country may not be upset. Since 1921 a strong contention has been put forward on behalf of the European community for which, however, I have in spite of my research been unable to find much justification—that the object of the Indian community is somehow or other, by some subtle of underground process, to get control of the political Government of this colony on the Indian lines for the exclusive benefit of Indians, and with the object of suppressing the power of the Britisher.

Now it seems to me that such a contention is absolutely ungrounded to the fact. We have tried repeatedly to contradict these statements, but unfortunately the means of publicity that the Indian community command, whether here or in England, are by no means so strong as the means at the disposal of the European community, and for that reason truth has had, strange to say, to seek the corner. (Laughter.)

Believe me, ladies and gentlemen, if other reasonable safeguards are required—mean reasonable safeguards, the Indian community would not be unwilling to consider them, such as the importance they attach to the common roll that they wish they attach such importance to the common roll. So far as I have been able to understand it is not that they think the common roll will bring them any extraordinary blessings denied to the other community, but because they are fully persuaded that, in the circumstances of this colony the common roll, leading to a common citizenship, is the only means of securing its steady progress and prosperity.

When the Constitution is first laid down, the Indian people here are particularly anxious that it should be laid properly, and that is why, before anything should get into their hands, they have had their hands and obtained from the Legislative Council in order that they might do nothing to prejudice their case, but that they should keep alive and constantly before the authorities in order to convince them of their earnest desire not to do the wrong thing, but if possible to do the right thing from the very beginning. Their hands at least shall be clean; if the common roll disfigures the public institutions of this country and stands in the way of a future common citizenship, the responsibility shall not lie on the shoulders of the Indian.

Equal Citizenship.
I cannot approve, nor will the Government of India allow, that by any arrangements in this colony there would be two degrees or orders of citizenship, one higher and the other lower, the Indian to be assigned to the lower; that is an impossible arrangement. There is no sacrifice that the Indian community will not bear, if called upon to do so, in the realization of the first order, and it would be a calamity not to them or to the Indian community unless it were a calamity which would not leave the European community untouched when it falls upon the Indian community, for as are the two communities bound together in this colony that I am really surprised that any serious minded persons should go on proposing at this hour of the day that the European should occupy one level, but I find quite another. So a colony can never be built up; so people can never grow into faith and prosperity.

Now that a Labour Government in power in England, not even whaling in power, you will not be surprised that the Indian community should be so keenly, so warmly a prominent labour statesman gave his undertaking that if his party were in power, there should be only one citizenship in Kenya. It is therefore not unatural that we should have such some expectancy on the first handling of this question by Mr. Sidney Webb. Therefore do not be annoyed if we seek to influence the new Government in England to exert their power to see that the destinies of Kenya are from the first given a proper shaping. Thus things in the meantime can wait. It is not, however, the Indian community only that is waiting, as it were, on Mr. Sidney Webb's first attempt at the handling of Kenya's affairs. In my talks at Nairobi to the European community that point of view was taken. One gentleman, whom I may not name, but who wishes I believe, very great influence in Kenya especially told me: "What is the good of our discussing this problem seriously and knocking our heads together if all this labour will be lost and the present Government upsets all our calculations?" It is the European community, therefore, corresponding to the hope of the Indian community, there is a certain amount of uncertainty, and even apprehension. The question must accordingly wait for a time, and I am by no means sorry that this breathing time is given, so

Not.
Then if you have had any correspondence at all, it must be in the Miscellaneous Folder under the same Alphabetical Division.
Simple, isn't it?
And much easier than referring to a more or less accurate Card Index for the number of the folder, or to a more or less correctly kept collection of folders in what should be strictly alphabetical order.
Thus it will be seen that the Roneo Numeralpha System calls for three operations only:
1. Open the Drawer.

It is the fashion in certain quarters to talk about the motorist's manners. It is a pity that the motorist's manners are not so much a subject of conversation as they should be.

There is another point about driving in formation which is apt to be overlooked. It is that the driver of the leading car has to stop very quickly to avoid some obstacle.

What the Critics Ignore.

Of course, in a sense, driving is difficult. That is what makes it so remarkable that the standard of no one could have imagined that motor cars would be placed on the road in great numbers with any degree of safety.

Obviously, the greater the number of cars, the greater must be the number of accidents. It is the proportion of accidents to the number of miles run which counts, exactly as a prominent railway official pointed out not long ago when he took pains to ally the outcry consequent on a railway tragedy, by the way, that railways were really quite blameless organizations; it was the homical motor car which ought to be dealt with drastically by legislation.

What is important is that accidents should be avoided at all costs. One would imagine that this would be the first thought in everybody's mind, but the point which strikes me forcibly in connection with the modern motorist

ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURE OF £400,000.

Supplementary Estimates Discussed by the Legislature.

ELECTED MEMBERS PLEAD ECONOMY.

Official Statements on Famine Relief, Closer Settlement and the Colony's Finance.

Additional expenditure of £400,000 has been sanctioned by the Legislative Council in the form of Supplementary Estimates. The money is for a large variety of requirements and includes the re-voting of considerable sums previously authorised by the Council but which have not been spent.

During the discussion several of the Elected Members expressed upon Government the very great importance of economy at the present time when conditions in the country were difficult.

The Member for Nairobi North expressed the view that the Government did not see eye to eye with the Elected Members regarding the degree of economy called for.

In the course of a reply the Treasurer laid stress on the fact that the financial position was satisfactory and mentioned that heads of Departments had been requested in view of locust and famine expenditure to reduce their requirements as much as possible.

The Director of Agriculture defended the Government's famine relief measures against a charge that they had been largely unnecessary.

The Colonial Secretary explained that out of the apparently large sum for supplementary estimates the re-voles of money already sanctioned accounted for £318,000. New services were only being allotted £84,745.

QUARTERLY REPORTS ON LAND DEALS.

Various amendments to the supplementary estimates are generally drafted by the select Committee appointed by the Legislative Council last week.

On the military vote of £10,007, the Select Committee recommended that the question of employing European Drivers on African horses should be investigated with a view to economising present time did not justify the inclusion of supplementary estimates. The provision for the construction of the Klaimo to Kisumu telephone line, estimated to cost £40,000.

Reference to the construction of the Kisumu to Kisumu telephone line, estimated to cost £40,000. The Select Committee was of the opinion that further consideration should be given to the question of the selection of a site for the purpose of essential work in animal husbandry.

In connection with the expenses of clear statements the amounting to £2,600, an assurance was given by the Acting Commissioner for Local Government Lands and Settlement that no expenditure would be incurred on the survey of farms for the purpose of closer settlement.

It was pointed out that the amounting to £2,600, an assurance was given by the Acting Commissioner for Local Government Lands and Settlement that no expenditure would be incurred on the survey of farms for the purpose of closer settlement.

The question was raised of substituting the Legislative Council every three months a statement showing transactions pending and transactions completed in the settlement of Crown land. The Select Committee recommended that such statements should be made and His Excellency gave instructions that statements giving such information should be published every three months in the Official Gazette.

As it is now probable that greater progress will be made in work on Eldoret roads and drains than was originally anticipated the Committee recommended that the expected savings of £2,000 in connection with this work be removed from Estimates.

The total Supplementary Estimates, voted and to be voted, including the amounts approved by motions in the Legislative Council on the 18th June, and with the amendment proposed by the Select Committee (Kisumu-Kisumu telephone line) total £576,767. The savings of £180,400 shown on the Estimates reducing the net excess to £396,367.

Mr. E. M. V. Kennedy (West Kenya) opposed the provision to meet the loss of money from Nairobi by theft. He also opposed a provision to meet the cost of current revenue from the Maasi from current revenue.

The Debate. A curious situation arose in the Legislative Council on Tuesday afternoon the Colonial Secretary had moved the suspension of Standing Orders to permit of the introduction of the motion regarding the report on the first Supplementary Estimates.

That the amount of the Select Committee on first Supplementary Estimates, 1920, be approved, and that the Council approve the first Supplementary Estimates, 1921, with the amendments proposed to the Select Committee.

Road and Rail.

The Editor, "E. A. Standard" writes: The present sitting of the Legislative Council is dealing with proposed legislation to limit the freedom of use of the roads. It is a matter which should have the most careful consideration of every member of the East African Community.

In the "Official Gazette" the chief reason advanced for the proposed bill is that the railroad must be able to protect its traffic against the competition of road transport in those districts of freight on which the present railway rates are exorbitant rates charged by the railway. In order that it may continue to carry the shippers of the farms at a rate admitted to be unbusinesslike.

Can we not, for once, take a little time to consider the question which realizes that the progress and prosperity of each individual, be he farmer, merchant, employee, or Government servant, is solely dependent upon the prosperity of the Territory as a whole. The granting of a less-than-cost transport rate to the farmer does not automatically fill his coffers at the expense of other members of the community. True, he receives a temporary benefit through a very slightly higher return for his produce but he must at once give this up in higher prices for his everyday wants.

Good roads paralleling the rail road are just as essential as feeder roads. It is in along the railroad that development frequently has to arise in competition.

To one who has watched Colonial development in many parts of the world it is with a sense of amazement that one views the spectacle of East Africa with its wealth of climate and soil endeavoring so happily to "middle through" in success despite the truth that the roads and quarters to which in our unregardful humor we give the name of roads.

I recall that the members of our Legislative Council might be afforded the luxury of a trip through the Belgian Congo. There in that most inaccessible part of the Central African continent there were works of magnificent highways which would be no diagram to the present condition of East Africa. They are well recognized as to grade and alignment, their surface is "all-weather" and is the result of the judicious use of suitable local materials which can be found in abundance along Africa. They are of adequate width without being extravagant in width and are well drained. The result is that one meets every where convoys of six to a dozen heavy or four-ton lorries with trailers behind, operating on regular schedules at intervals while they would not compare with a railroad, are yet sufficiently low to make the development of that territory profitable. I understand that over one million bales of cotton were brought out of that section were brought out of that section were brought out of that section were brought out of that section.

CORRESPONDENCE.

COFFEE INSTITUTE.

To the Editor, "E. A. Standard": Sir—May I ask for space in your paper to reply to the letter from the Committee of the Mount Kenya Association? Notice of our Special General Meeting on the 21st was posted to all members of the Union three weeks before that date. Similar notice was sent to the Hon. Secretaries of all branches of the Union. The Mount Kenya branch and no notice was sent to any Farmers Association as such. The Secretary of the Mount Kenya Association informs me that he is attending our meeting on 21st and he will then learn the source of action which our Council proposes. For the benefit of other Associations interested in all Associations in coffee growing districts and to inform them that the subject will be again discussed at another meeting of the Institute to which they are requested to send delegates. The second meeting will probably be held at Nakuru as being equally convenient to all districts. The dates of all planters' members of the Union will be sent to you.

By the regularity of service its stability of organization and its capacity to carry the shippers of the land the secondary over road transport, even under the best of management we open the way to end-to-end service and give a tremendous incentive to investment and development. With that in force we shall then be satisfied that since transport will be improved along the roads paralleling the railroad there is therefore no objection in improving those roads to the extent available for years to come.

Consider the effect on the prosperity of the country and the revenue in traffic which would result to the railroads through the building of first class roads to all of standing heavy traffic through the interior. For instance, Cherangani, Sika, the foothills of the Aberdares, the highlands of western Utepe to the northern slopes of Kilimanjaro and Meru, and the highlands of Tanganyika. Will the assurance of rapid, moderate cost road transport to the nearest railroad station, large increase in imports to provide the equipment and material to hold development of the farmer.

I shall be sure that the rail will cost far too much more and it can only say that if a road and speed motor and plant of a class a good road system built alongside and feeder to the railroad will still prosper. As in the case of the plant by the community an extra rapid development of that road and feeder to the railroad will still prosper. As in the case of the plant by the community an extra rapid development of that road and feeder to the railroad will still prosper.

I trust that nothing I have said with regard to the present condition of our road systems will be taken as a thrust at our Public Works Departments who in the last few years have done so much with the scanty funds allotted to them. My object is to endeavor to make the danger that threatens them in the proposed case, to be aware of and to give for to how they are to improve our transportation in the development of any territory.

Let us begin less of Road and Rail and more of Road and Rail and more of Road and Rail.
