Ministry to license gold bullion imports to Kenya

Ministry of Commerce and Industries announced the following details regarding the licensing of gold bullion imports to Kenya:

(1) The importer shall keep a true and correct register which will disclose at any time to what extent and how the gold bullion which was imported by him has been utilized.

(2) The register will also show at any time the names and addresses and rates of any pay of artisans employed from the date of their engagement. This register will be open at any time for inspection by the director, assistant directors or trade officers of Department of Trade and Supplies.

(3) A goldsmith may apply for an allocation for each artisan fully employed by him, contingently from January 1, 1968, provided that the maximum number of artisans in any firm entitled to an allocation does not exceed the number in receipt of an allocation in 1967.

Applications for import licences from established goldsmiths must be submitted in the terms of Paragraph (3) of Regulation 2 of the Import, Exports and Essential Supplies Regulations so as to reach the Director of Trade and Supplies, P.O. Box 30430, Nairobi, not later than February 28.

The grant of a gold import licence merely entitles the recipient to import gold bullion to the limit stated. It does not relieve him of any responsibilities to which he may be subject under any other legislation.

Somali delegation in Nairobi

The leader of a delegation from the Somalia Chamber of Commerce currently visiting Kenya, Mr. A. Mahdi, said yesterday in Nairobi that it was encouraging to note the rapidly with which trade between the two countries continued to grow.

There existed wide areas of business co-operation in various commodities, he said, which, when fully exploited, would be of mutual benefit to the two countries.

His delegation had been greatly impressed with Kenya's development in all spheres after touring the country, he said, when fully exploited, would be of mutual benefit to the two countries.

Mr. Mahdi added that his mission would also discuss the possibility of establishing a joint tourist company between Kenya and Somalia.

The chairman of Kenya's Export Promotion Council, Mr. B. H. Hobson, said that in 1967 Kenya exported to Somalia goods worth £6,773 while Somalia imports to Kenya amounted to £13,385.

"During the eight months ending August, 1968, the export trade, including exports and re-exports, had jumped to a total of £26,462. It is expected to be about £300,000 for the whole of 1968 when the final figures come out," he said.

Earlier the president of the Kenya National Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Z. K. Gakuru, together with members of the governing council, had useful discussions with the visitors. The Somali delegation was requested to urge the Somali Government to consider the possibility of giving preference to Kenya goods.

Soviet plan for Middle-East peace under scrutiny

The Soviet Union's five-phase plan for a Middle East settlement, handed last week to the U.S., France, Britain and the U.S.S.R., was disclosed yesterday by the French weekly magazine L'Europe.

The magazine, which guaranteed that the plan would be published in its entirety, said it was a political document, not only on the part of the Soviet Union but also on the part of the other powers. It was agreed, according to the magazine, that the plan would be published in its entirety.

The Soviet document added: "The Soviet Union is also ready to guarantee that all the parties concerned will live in good faith and will not resort to force."

The Soviet document also stated that the plan was a result of a long and arduous process of negotiations between the Soviet Union and the other powers.

The plan was based on the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force.

The plan also provided for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the occupied territories.

The plan also provided for the establishment of a just and durable peace in the Middle East.

To implement this arrangement, the Soviets suggested the Security Council pass a resolution affirming the U.N. troops in accordance with the U.N. charter. It could also require freedom of navigation for ships of all countries in the Straits of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba.

The Security Council would then pass a resolution guaranteeing the presence of all bidders between Israel and the Arab states.

The United States on Wednesday rejected the Soviet proposals for a Middle East peace plan, a State Department spokesman, Mr. Robert McNamara, said in Washington yesterday.

While declining to give details of the reply, Mr. McNamara said the U.S. had asked for clarification of the Soviet plan.

The U.S. also said it was not prepared to accept the Soviet plan's demand for a complete withdrawal of Israeli troops from the occupied territories.

U.S. to spend more on defence

President Johnson has asked Congress to vote $81,545,000,000 for national defence in the Budget for the 1969-70 fiscal year beginning next July 1.

The plan is a rise of about $500,000,000 on defence spending in the current fiscal year, compared with an average annual rise of $400,000,000 in the three previous years.

President Johnson told Congress: "Outlays in support of South-East Asia are anticipated to drop for the first time in 1970, falling by $3,300,000,000 from 1969."

However, other Defence Department spending would increase by $4,600,000,000 "to provide selected areas with more equipment."

The President said that the U.S. should make greater efforts "to improve the cost-effectiveness of Nato forces" and "to reduce the costs of maintaining U.S. forces in Europe."

He said: "We also plan steps to increase the proficiency of our Nato forces and to protect them more effectively against surprise attacks."

Spending in South-East Asia, he said, would be $1,700,000,000 in the coming year. The reduction in the Vietnamese allocation was explained by changing patterns of combat activity and a need to concentrate resources on the Vietnam front.

The President also asked for a $75,000,000 allocation for overseas military aid, he said, would provide "for the direct support by the department of the allied forces in South-East Asia, for our military assistance missions and advisory groups, and for our share of the costs of Nato and international military headquarters."

SACKED ZAMBIAN JUSTICES RETURN

The Zambia High Court has taken swift measures to re-organise a district government dissolved by the opposition African National Congress (A.N.C.)

Justice of the Peace, Mr. Godfrey Mwaanga, said the High Court had also received reports from three other provinces, Luapula, Northern and Barotsche, that some of the district government offices had been closed for the same reason.

The District Governor of Choma in the southern Province, Mr. Jonathan Ndambo, said the court had also received reports from the same province.

Mr. Mwaanga said radio messages had been sent to the areas saying that officials who had ordered the court's closure had no such legal powers. Their action was illegal and unconstitutional, he added.

The local courts play an important part in the life of the Zambian people administering traditional justice and dealing with other matters as a duty.

The firm action by the High Court was seen in Lusaka as a sign of government policy to curb the growth of lawlessness and lawlessness.

After last month's general elections, in which the U.N.C.P. won 81 seats and the A.N.C. 23, President Kaunda appointed eight Cabinet Ministers to run the provinces with district governors serving under them.

He also said that in future it might be a subsidiary.

A South African official said he considered that the group had disbanded, but one of its members said this was not so.

The group had been formed to support the A.N.C. in the 1968 elections. It was disbanded after the A.N.C. won the elections.

BROADCASTING SCHOOL LEADS AFRICA

Larry Ruddock reports on growth of Kenya's pace-setting project.

In the making on a site near the Mombasa Road Drive-In in Nairobi is an educational institution which, when all its phases are completed, will make Kenya a key country in the field of training personnel in all forms of mass communications. Already there have been inquiries from other countries seeking to make use of its facilities.

The Kenya Institute of Mass Communications, which will become fully operational this year, is the result of six years of planning and hard work which has attracted only a modicum of publicity.

The basic idea was first mooted in 1961 when it was decided to establish a school to train all the technical staff in the then Kenya Broadcasting Service. The next year saw the formation of the Kenya Broadcasting Corporation and, in October, the start of television in Kenya.

In 1964 K.B.C. was nationalised under the title of the Voice of Kenya. During this time attempts to raise money to start the school were not successful.

Early in 1964 a Ministry of Information and Broadcasting development plan was prepared and included in the Government's Five-Year Development Plan and in it — at priority level — was the training school scheme.

The foundation stone for the existing building, which cost £20,000, was laid in 1967 and has not yet been officially opened although trains are already passing through it. All are citizens.

But let Mr. R. J. Davey, second-in-charge of the school as Acting Principal, take up the story. Mr. Davey, who until a short time ago used to be Chief Engineer with the Voice of Kenya, told me: "The initial staff for the first phase of the school are the principal and half a dozen clerical and general office people."

"We have an engineering and technical operations lecturing staff of six with the Head of the sections so that is seven. We have a head of product training and he has seven instructors."

"To back up the lecturing staff we have a permanent staff of technicians, engineers and some operators to man the facilities as tools for the producer. These number about 14."

"The school has got two main objects. Courses are a lot more important than the others but first of all it has to take in new entrants straight from school and give them training in one form or another of technical operations, production, news or information because this school covers the whole Ministry."

"These courses would run from as little as six weeks (an introduction course) to as much as three and a half years."

"This is partly to provide development staff for Ministry's projects over the last few years and the next five years and to replace the expatriates and non-citizens. This is just Phase One of the operation."

"The second part of the school's object is to take the existing staff, many of whom have not had the benefits of either condensed training or full-time training. We have at the moment about 700 people in the Ministry and less than half have yet to have any formal training."

"A good number of them have got to come out of operational service, be given a good top-up and then put back into the service."

"On the subject of the school's entrance qualifications, Mr. Davey said: "For the new intake there is no shortage of Cambridge School Certificate people and because of the shortness and the compressed form of training we give, we find that a Cambridge School Certificate is almost entirely necessary."

"There are some exceptions. In some of the technical operations grades we do not always insist upon it. We find it useful though. If we found a person who had the aptitudes, but did not have the piece of paper, we would not bar him for that."

Problem of old equipment

"Many of the requirements in broadcasting are artistic, rather than educational, and we are looking for these attributes sometimes, rather than the others. A person who, for example, has a hair for scenery does not necessarily have to have a school certificate."

"We have 13 courses. We hope eventually to get a lot of experts from other countries to help us because the existing staff and experts in their own field who are in the country."

"One of the problems of training is that in many schools students learn on equipment which is already out of date. So when they go out of the school they have a re-orientation period to go through to learn the handling of the new pieces of equipment. Although this may function in more or less the same manner, an operator, for instance, has to learn the positions of the knobs."

"From a technical point of view, particularly as equipment gets more and more complex, it is very advantageous to use the same equipment."

"We started training in 1963 with a temporary school near the Kenyatta Hospital, a converted wooden building. This was the best we could do while we discussed the financing of this building."

"We had to start it because it takes about three and a half years to train a person to a good standard, a technician of a fairly high capacity."

"If we had waited until this school was ready we would be starting now. As it is we have now had three years of classes, in engineering subjects."

"The first students have already gone out of the old school and are already in service, some in Nairobi, some in Mombasa and some in Kisumu. We started with a class of ten or 12 and as the years go by they get somewhat decimated."

"The last class ended up with seven."

"The more fact that they have Cambridge School Certificate and the spoken wish to become an engineer is not enough. You are careful with selection your wastage can be quite high."

"Generally speaking, television is accepted as being technically a bit more complicated, requires a bit more training. We give a broad-based general foundation in radio engineering and broadcasting practice. This includes radio and television."

"Some of the class of 1965 are already in service. They have been offered appointments in Government and they are already working, but the two best people in the class were considered good enough to go for further training."

"They were offered a bursary by the U.S. Government and they are now on a two-year course of study in America. They have now finished their first two terms in America and in the first term one of the students was top of the class and the other one was the only external student to get a distinction."

"This last term they were both top of the class and they received the headmaster's commendation."

"As soon as the facilities are complete — we only look over the building in November — and all the instructional staff available, I feel there will be some interest from neighbouring countries who

Geoffrey Gatugi of Kirinyaga checks the myriad of circuits contained in a Marconi television camera.

A student from the Coast, John Randu, makes a note of his findings in a laboratory experiment using a voltmeter.

The Institute's mast is no mere dummy for training only. It is possible to transmit a programme from the school (rear) to Broadcasting House for retransmission to the public.

Our early night flights to London miss out on an awful lot.

Every day some 50,000 people fly in and out of London's Heathrow. By taking a BOAC night flight you give most of them a miss. At the passport control only your passport gets stamped upon. And at the customs you'll notice none of the customary queues.

Catch the early bird and you miss out on something else: all those awful London rush-hour traffic jams.

And so by eight o'clock you're in London with all the day ahead of you.

There is one thing night fliers don't miss, and that's connections. Your flight lands well before the peak period for international and domestic flights begins.

You'll even have time to take a leisurely breakfast in a quiet, uncrowded airport restaurant. (That's if you've got room for another one.) Take a BOAC early night flight to London and you'll miss out on a thing or two.

But not your dinner in Nairobi.

For people who only know the VW as a beetle, here is a surprise.

On August 7th, 1966, Quarter Huber from Austria was only 2 minutes on 12 miles, slower round the circuit than world champion driver Brad Pitt on 12 1/2 miles. He is now at Nairobi, that's why we've got the VW Formula as the special of twenty different models of Volkswagen cars. Yes, some of them are special drivers, but you can always arrange that for you - end supply service and repair at 22 different places in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania.

Johnson urges U.S. to stand firm on vital Vietnam objective

President Johnson yesterday expressed his determination at an agreement on opening the Paris talks on Vietnam, but emphasized that the United States must be firm in pursuing its "vital" objectives.

"They should also be confident that an honourable peace is possible," he said in a statement read out in Washington by the White House spokesman.

The statement added: "Mr. Harriman stressed that the agreement was 'not a compromise.' He said: 'It is a decision which all could agree to. It will not go into details but it was quite satisfactory to all participants in the conference.'

Despite the round table, he said South Vietnam from being considered by force and to give the South Vietnamese people the right to choose their own future."

whoever they wish to bring South Vietnam, as ally of the United States. We look upon the conference as a discussion of two issues. They look upon it any way they want to."

"They can call it a four-delegation conference and it does not affect the work of the conference."

Mr. Harriman continued: "It is very clear that we do not recognize the National Liberation Front as an independent political entity, and therefore we shall never consider the conference as having anything more than two sides."

He said the American delegation was "very much gratified, particularly for President Johnson, because he was satisfied to have the meeting closed this far. We are not moving further, but we are sorry if things are on the way."

North Vietnam has indicated that it has not abandoned its desire for a South Vietnamese "peace cabinet" that would replace the Saigon Government and take its place at the Vietnam conference.

The deputy chief of the United States Mission in Hanoi, Mr. Philip H. Franks, who had just returned from a speech to a rally in Hanoi, said the full-scale conference would be left to reach a political settlement in future negotiations.

Mr. Tran Binh Kien, chairman of the National Liberation Front, who addressed the rally, said the full-scale conference would be left to reach a political settlement in future negotiations.

Third, we should be confident that an honourable peace is possible if we begin to home remain steady."

Mr. Johnson added that there had been "no crises" in the Paris negotiations since they opened on the 13th. "There is no place for a bombing cessation procedure for the talks."

"In each conference, firmness and firmness achieved a satisfactory result," Mr. Johnson declared.

He went on: "I will pursue this path as diligently as we have fought against it. And this year we made steady progress toward the peace in South East Asia."

"I deeply believe that if only we remain united and stay together on this path we will achieve an honourable peace in South East Asia."

The outgoing head of the United States delegation to the Vietnam talks, Mr. Averell Harriman, said yesterday he believes both Hanoi and the Vietnamese desire a negotiated peace.

He said he was "very much delighted by the agreement which will permit the opening of the peace talks with all four delegations attending today."

Asked whether he thought the agreement represented a "victory" for the U.S. and South Vietnam, Mr. Harriman said one should not

Jews protest against French arms embargo

About 1,000 Jews staged a three-hour demonstration outside the French Embassy in New York in protest against President de Gaulle's ban on French arms exports to Israel.

The demonstrators, belonging to the Jewish Defence Committee, carried placards reading "Vive la France, Shame on de Gaulle" and "Schedule 69, Rixens out, 'No Aviv in'".

"Raviv must live" and "Israel must live" were also written on the placards.

A delegation led by the American Jewish Congress Vice-President, Mr. Stanley Lowell, was received by French Ambassador Jean de Laubard and delivered a letter to the French people and press for their support for Israel in the wake of the arms embargo.

The message asked President de Gaulle to submit his Middle East policy to a referendum and urged France to use its prestige to bring peace to the region.

Afterwards, Mr. Lowell said that he reported feeling that General de Gaulle has joined the ranks of the anti-Zionists. "If he really wants to secure the peace in the Middle East, Rhodesia, they would do well to show by their example that majority African rule does not automatically imply the suppression of the democratic rights of any opposition party, and the expulsion of any racial minority which is commercially successful."

Observing what is now happening in neighbouring African countries, the Europeans in Rhodesia cannot be blamed for thinking that they are being invited to commit political and economic suicide."

Rhodesians 'asked to commit suicide'

Europeans in Rhodesia could not be blamed for thinking they were being invited to commit "political and economic suicide," Mr. Dudley Sandys, Conservative M.P., said in a statement yesterday.

Mr. Sandys is a former Colonial Secretary.

"African leaders have condemned the Fairless proposals and have said they would seek a motion of emergency for a further three months."

It will be the seventeenth extension since Rhodesia's Governor, Sir Humphrey Gibbs, acting on the advice of Mr. Smith, declared that a state of emergency existed.

Shortly afterwards, on November 11, 1965, Mr. Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain and his Government repudiated Sir Humphrey's support.

Since then, extensions to the emergency have been signed by the Officer Administering the Government, Mr. Clifford Dupont.

"At the United Nations, U Thant is waiting for replies from several Western governments to a request for information about their consular trade offices in Rhodesia, diplomatic sources said."

The office has been maintained despite sanctions imposed by the Security Council.

Johnson urges U.S. to stop Vietnam objective

That Johnson yesterday expressed his disapproval at the agreement in Paris to open the door to a U.S. military presence in South Vietnam, but emphasized that the United States must be firm in pursuing its "vital" objectives.

They would also be confident that "an honourable peace" was possible, he said in a statement issued in Washington by the White House spokesman.

The statement read: "We are all pleased that certain basic procedural problems in Paris have been solved and new talks on the substance of peace in South East Asia can open.

"There are three lessons of our experience since March 31. "First, we must be clear and firm in pursuing with our allies the limited but vital objectives we seek in South East Asia.

"Second, we must be patient and face the hard fact that fighting is likely to continue as the negotiations are carried forward.

"Third, we should be confident that an honourable peace is possible if we here at home remain steady."

Johnson recalled that there had been "three crises" in the Paris negotiations since they opened last month ago — on the subject of the terms for a bombing halt and procedure for the ceasefire.

In each case, patience, firmness and good sense achieved a "fruitful result," Mr. Johnson said.

He said: "We must pursue this patiently as we have found in the past. And this year we are making progress toward our goal of all devolving any responsibility to the South Vietnamese."

The outgoing head of the United States delegation to the Vietnam talks, Mr. Averell Harriman, said yesterday he believes both Hanoi and Washington desire a quick peace.

He said he was "very much delighted" by the agreement which will permit the opening of the peace talks with all other delegations attending today.

Asked whether he thought the agreement represented a victory for the U.S. and South Vietnam, Mr. Harriman said one should not think in terms of victory but of the objective to be reached.

The chief delegate, who was speaking to reporters outside the American Embassy in Paris, said it was also in terms of these objectives that one should view the work of the conference over the last weekend.

He said the objective of the U.S. had always been to prevent South Vietnam from being overrun by forces and to give the South Vietnamese people the right to choose their own future.

Mr. Harriman stressed that the agreement was "not a compromise." He said "a decision which all could agree to, I will not go into details, but it was quite sufficient to all participants in the conference."

Despite the round table, he said plans for the conference reflected the "strongly shared views of the four sides" formula. It was "not a side by side agreement," he said at far as we are concerned, we look across the table and we see Hanoi and their colleagues.

In Luaka the Zimbabwe African National Union yesterday accused African leaders of taking a soft line on Rhodesia at the Commonwealth conference in London.

Zanu said: "As far as Rhodesia is concerned, African leaders behaved like a bunch of docile puppets."

They went through the discredited routine of merely protesting against Britain's policy on Rhodesia by leaving Mr. Wilson free to implement his reactionary Farrel deal with Smith — a deal

City traffic congestion

As Nairobi's city centre becomes more and more built up, traffic congestion increases and the encroachment on open spaces drives motorists further away to find all-day parking places.

Over the next five years, the City Council expects to spend almost £1,250,000 on providing car park facilities, besides the multi-storied garages built by private enterprise. It is a continuing struggle to keep traffic moving, especially at peak periods, and provide parking spaces convenient for shopping and other business taking thousands of people daily in and out of Nairobi.

Some years ago, the argument was that the existing and planned peripheral car parks would be sufficient to meet all needs. What used to be, at one time, semi-peripheral have been turned into central car parks.

The City Council has scheduled a Red Area in the city centre where fees will be charged for all-day parking on parks which are at present free and many more meters are to be installed so that from March, tolls will be charged for stopping briefly in most of the streets.

When fees are charged for the scheduled parks, the public will expect the long demanded security precautions to be applied. Not only should the self appointed juvenile "champions" be kept clear, but inspectors ought to be posted to protect cars and their contents from thieves. It is not always effective to obey the police instruction to "lock doors, windows and the boot. Indeed, taking these precautions often leads to cars being damaged when thieves force open locks and smash vent windows.

If a national sports stadium is to be built at Langata and arrangements made to serve the airport and Jamhuri Park, there is the nucleus of a suburban rail system which could be coordinated with the removal of Nairobi's present station to a more convenient site. Increased bus services or an electric suburban railway, or both, will have to be provided if a permanent remedy is to be found for a "boom city" getting congested with traffic and overcrowded with pedestrians.

What can Nairobi do to avoid being choked by the traffic? What can Nairobi do to enable workers to get to their offices and shops without having to walk a mile or two there and back morning, noon and evening in the broiling sunshine or beating rain?

Metered bays will cater for shoppers, who do not have to stay more than an hour or two in the central streets. They will grumble about the cost of shilling-in-the-set parking, but this is a motoring hazard in almost every modern city and does not seriously affect anybody's pocket for a day or two, twice weekly visit to town.

Nairobi's chief worry area is to keep the city centre free to avoid a scramble for parking spaces used by people who drive to work, and then to provide adequate internal public transport. A great many more people travel in by car from the suburbs than would be the case if additional bus services were run, the frequency of services improved and routes extended. Moreover, once people leave their cars, they have to walk to their places of work, because there is no internal, and relatively few "cross city" bus services.

Older countries have suburban railways to transport commuters to and from the cities. If electric railcars are to Nairobi from places such as Limuru, Thika, Kiambu, Langata and Karen, the morning and evening road rush would be relieved.

The construction of suburban railways, with stations or halts where passengers could be picked up or set down, has often been discussed. Probably the plans exist, but nothing has been accomplished primarily because of costs reckoned to be prohibitive. The difficulties have increased with the passing years, not only because costs rise higher but more and more land is becoming enclosed. Soon Nairobi will be landlocked, a built-in city in the sun.

If a national sports stadium is to be built at Langata and arrangements made to serve the airport and Jamhuri Park, there is the nucleus of a suburban rail system which could be coordinated with the removal of Nairobi's present station to a more convenient site. Increased bus services or an electric suburban railway, or both, will have to be provided if a permanent remedy is to be found for a "boom city" getting congested with traffic and overcrowded with pedestrians.

The sea-bed and the ocean floor constitute nearly three-quarters of the land area for the earth. International law encourages the appropriation of this vast area by those who have the technical competence to exploit it.

The known resources of the sea-bed and the ocean floor are also of immense strategic importance. Some countries are tempted to use their technical competence to achieve dominance in the sea-bed and the ocean floor, which means a contest over the wealth, will and power of the world's nations with technical competence combined with the political will to assert their jurisdiction over selected areas of the ocean.

The process has started and will lead to a scramble for ownership rights over the land underlying the world's seas and oceans, surpassing in magnitude and in its implications the last century's colonial scramble for territory in Asia and Africa.

The consequences will be very grave: at the least, a dramatic escalation of the arms race, but also by the intolerably increasing number of nations, the plurality of the world's resources will reach unprecedented levels.

Between the very dominant nations, the competition will be through trade, through radio-tele-visual and other pollution.

These are the proposals that the world faces, not in a remote future, but as an immediate consequence of forces and pressures already at work.

If an effective international regime over the sea-bed and the ocean floor, beyond a clearly defined national jurisdiction, is to be established, it must give adequate rights to the immense areas of land under the ocean, which will be exploited with many different purposes. The regime must also take account of the many different and weak countries, which are being created through an international regime.

At least the deep sea floor will be used exclusively for peaceful purposes and there will be strictly exploitation of its resources.

Nearly 100 years ago, an expedition discovered evidence of phosphoric and manganese deposits—commonly called nodules—in the ocean floor.

Manganese nodules are irregularly spherical in shape, like potatoes, ranging from 25 cm in diameter, and are commonly found on the surface of the sea floor at a depth of between 1,500 and 6,000 metres.

About 20 per cent of the surface of the Pacific Ocean floor is covered by these nodules, some of which are of the incredible concentration of 50 lb per square metre.

PATELS BEG IN CLOSING SHOPS IN ZAMBIA

A few years ago a popular conversation topic was the success of the Indian and Asian cricket team which set a world record. All players had the surname of Patel.

The Patels of Zambia are in the new again, but for a different reason. Many shops on which the bulk of the built-up 100,000 Asians depend closed down in the New Year because licences were not renewed for them as a part of President Kaunda's economic policy.

He ordered municipal authorities not to renew licences for the shops of non-Zambians except in certain special cases.

The object of this and other reforms was to give Zambians a much bigger share in an economy overwhelmingly dominated by European and Asian foreigners.

It pains me that three and a half years after independence, there is not a single Zambian-owned business in Chro Road Lusaka's main commercial street, or any business other than that of a Zambian market in Cairo Road, President Kaunda said.

He suggested businessmen whose licences were not going to be renewed this year should "find a way out of their shops". Alternatively, of course, and this is the more desirable course, they should be Zambians themselves.

He made this announcement eight months ago, last April.

For two reasons, about 800 Asian shops kept their shutters up in the New Year, eight months after his announcement.

Firstly, few Asians were granted licences, despite a "pink slip" for citizenship before and after the announcement. Some Asians claim they applied in 1966 for citizenship, but have had no response to their applications. About 250 Asians have successfully applied for Zambian citizenship.

Secondly, few Asians sold shops to Zambians. Asians claimed they tried to do so, but Zambians lacked financial backing and offered absurdly low prices, such as £10 for a store in its stock.

Government officials deny this and say that the Asians offered their shops for sale to Zambians soon after President Kaunda's announcement. They have not been given fair prices.

Much confusion has arisen and municipal councils were unable to cope with the licensing changes.

by Christopher Parker

so by the New Year no licences had been issued in Lusaka to anybody.

The Times of Zambia commented: "The inefficient local public authorities are partly responsible for causing the innocent public confusion, but they have their own part to play in this regard. The closing of stores, including about 800 shops, is a disaster known as Lusaka's second-class trading area." It is a disaster known as Lusaka's second-class trading area.

MALTESE WANT TO STAY AT HOME

To Malta, whose 317,000 inhabitants make it one of the most densely populated countries in the world, emigration has always been a safe valley.

Since the beginning of this century, Maltese have gone abroad to seek a better future for their families in such countries as Italy, Tripoli, Tunis, Corfu and Egypt, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and elsewhere.

Whatever prospects these countries offered, Maltese have left in emigration — family attachments were strong — but they were never enough jobs for the island's labour force to drop down from the British to the Maltese.

The years immediately after the end of the war saw an exodus of skilled workers and their families as jobs grew scarcer. Britain was unable to absorb the large number of Maltese who had left in emigration.

The Maltese Government made emigration their mainstay and only and ship itself carried about a thousand a month.

But now, when there are some 100,000 Maltese and their dependants in Australia, always regarded by the Maltese as a land of opportunity, another 30,000 have returned to Malta from the end of gradually by the end of the year. By the New Year there had been no rush for air tickets or other means of departure.

The first days of January many Asians could be seen preparing to visit President Kaunda first at a late stage ticket and allow them to re-open their doors about the time of the shutters up. When asked about their decision they replied: "We are waiting to see."

Out of 10,000 Asians more than 9,000 have returned to their homes in their own district, Surul, Bombay Province, and other parts of the same class, long of small-time shopkeepers known in India as Patels.

The first to arrive in Lusaka was Mr. Robert Gatt, who had left his village — a straggle of tin shanties and rough unplastered buildings; gradually by the end of the year. By the New Year there had been no rush for air tickets or other means of departure.

SCRAMBLE FOR THE SEA-BED-1

This is the first of two articles on the mineral wealth lying under the ocean.

The sea-bed and the ocean floor constitute nearly three-quarters of the land area of our earth. International law encourages the appropriation of this vast area by those who have the technical competence to exploit it.

The known resources of the sea-bed and the ocean floor are greater than the resources known to exist on dry land and may become commercially exploitable, affecting the prices of several minerals and the exports of many countries.

The sea-bed and the ocean floor are also of immense strategic importance. Several countries may be tempted to apply their technical competence to achieve dominance over the sea-bed and the ocean floor. This may result in a scramble for wealth, which will impact countries as far as the remotest of a small island.

Nairobi's chief worries are to keep the city centre free from the thousands of cars used by people who drive to work, and then to provide adequate internal public transport. A great many more people travel in by car from the suburbs than would be the case if additional buses were run, the frequency of services improved and routes extended.

Older countries have suburban railways to transport commuters to and from the cities. If electric railways, for example, were built to Nairobi from places such as Limuru, Thika, Kiambu, Langata and Karen, the morning and evening road traffic would be relieved.

The construction of suburban railways, with stations or halts where passengers could be picked up or set down, has often been discussed. Probably the plans exist, but nothing has been accomplished, primarily because of costs reckoned to be prohibitive. The difficulties have increased with the passing years, not only because costs rise higher but more and more land is becoming enclosed. Some Nairobi will be landlocked—a built-in city in the sun.

If national sports stadium is to be built at Langata and arrangements made to serve the airport and Jamhuri Park, there is the nucleus of a suburban rail system which could be co-ordinated with the removal of Nairobi's present station to a more convenient site. An electric suburban railway, or both, will have to be provided if a permanent remedy is to be found for a "boom city" getting congested with traffic and overcrowded with pedestrians.

Riches from the Seabed

Mineral-bearing nodules abound on seabed. NODULES CONTAIN Manganese, Titanium, Vanadium, Nickel, Cobalt, and Copper.

Table with columns: MINERAL, DEPOSIT (Tons), POTENTIAL SUPPLY (SEA, LAND). Rows include Aluminium, Manganese, Copper, Nickel, and Cobalt.

International rivalry for underseas wealth

These nodules have been estimated to contain 25 billion tons of manganese, 10 billion tons of aluminium, 20 billion tons of titanium, 10 billion tons of vanadium, 10 billion tons of nickel, and 10 billion tons of cobalt.

They also contain (known land reserves) 400,000 tons of manganese, 10 billion tons of copper, 6,000 tons of nickel, and 10 billion tons of cobalt.

TWO REPORTS ON IMMIGRATION

A few years ago a popular conversation topic was sundown time in Zambia. An Asian cricket team which set a world record. All players had the surname of Patel.

The Patels of Zambia are in the news again, but for a different reason. Many shops on the outskirts of the built-up areas of 10,000 Asians closed down because of the New Year holidays were not renewed for them as part of renewed Kaunda's ethnic reforms.

He ordered municipal authorities to close the shops of non-Zambians, except in certain specified areas, as an interim reform. The object of this and other reforms was to give Zambians a much bigger share in an economy overwhelmingly dominated by European and Asian foreigners.

'Man-in-the-middle' of film dispute leaving

Mr. M. J. (Miller) Bazhali, who was for some months the man-in-the-middle in the dispute between the K.F.C. and the M.P.E.A. is to leave Kenya soon for a new post in Beirut.

At present he is managing director for the Kenya Film Organisation in East Africa and Organisation in the Middle and Near East.

Mr. Bazhali said that whatever arguments there had been between the K.F.C. and overseas film companies had been entirely commercial.

The negotiations were all handled most ably by the representative of the then largest distribution outfit on the island, John B. Harris.

To Malia, whose 317,000 inhabitants make it one of the densely populated countries in the world, emigration was always a safety valve.

City traffic congestion

As Nairobi's city centre becomes more and more built up, traffic congestion increases and the encroachment on open spaces drives motorists further away to find all-day parking places.

Over the next five years, the City Council expects to spend almost £1,250,000 on providing car park facilities, besides the multi-storied parks built by private enterprise.

When fees are charged for the scheduled parks, the public will expect the long demanded security precautions to be applied. Not only should the self appointed juvenile "attendants" be kept clear but inspectors ought to be posted to protect cars and their contents from thieves.

For the present, the new or extended peripheral car parks will have sufficient capacity to cope with the droves of vehicles which have to be left all day, and all morning and afternoon.

New vessel for Inshore Fisheries MOMBASA EVENT

Standard Staff Reporter, Mombasa.

Since its formation a year ago, Kenya Inshore Fisheries had doubled production and increased its market by 75 per cent. The Mombasa District Commissioner, Mr. Njenga, said when he handed over a new vessel, M. V. Salama, at a ceremony in Mombasa Old Town.

Nobody could afford to employ methods from the past in a competitive world if the economy was to survive, he said, and companies had to be able to compete with their neighbours, but also to offer countries.

Mr. Njenga said there was no aspect of the story. The new company was in the throes of extending its factory and it had chosen a plot in Lamu for this purpose. The company was also planning to take up a licence for fish exchange.

Israel's Foreign Minister, Mr. Eban, has in effect told Franco and the big powers not to meddle in Middle Eastern affairs. He said at Great Bresser, near Tel Aviv, that the Middle East will be settled by the course of the region and not by the big powers, who have in this region only interests of secondary importance.

Commenting on the French call for a conference of four of the United Nations Permanent Security Council powers, Mr. Eban said, "No plan could be valid which the inhabitants of this region did not agree to. No peace plan which starts, like the Soviet and French plans, from the idea that Israel was the aggressor in June, 1967, could lead to anything if it would completely aim at restoring the situation in existence before this so-called aggression."

FRENCH PLAN STILL BEING STUDIED

British, U.S. and Soviet leaders are still studying the French proposal that the U.N. representatives of the four major powers should get together within the next 14 days to seek a Middle East settlement.

France, in Notes to the three other powers on the 15-month-old crisis, suggested that in liaison with the U.N. Secretary-General they should seek "means through which they could contribute towards establishing a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

This could be before France said, "Especially by defining conditions for implementation of the November 22, 1967, Security Council resolution" which called for, among other things, Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

The latest initiative comes after a year of fruitless efforts by U. Thant's personal envoy, Mr. Gunnar Jarring, to bring about a settlement between Israel and the Arabs.

British officials would say nothing except that the proposal was being studied, but it is thought Britain would welcome a French move, which is in line with the British view that any talks to settle the conflict in the line of the November 1967 resolution should be held in New York, where the special competence of the big four permanent members of the Security Council.

France's deputy U.N. delegate, M. Claude Chey, called on U. Thant in Paris to discuss the French proposal with him.

In its statement announcing the other three permanent members of the Security Council, the French Government has proposed that their representatives on the council should meet in order to seek, in liaison with the U.N. Secretary-General, the means through which their governments could contribute to establishing a just and durable peace in the Middle East, especially by defining conditions for the implementation of the resolution of November 22, 1967, and by facilitating — to the same end — the future work of the Security Council.

The statement did not mention any time for the proposal together, but the U.S. State Department in its comment that it would study the proposal, said the French note had proposed a "formal inter-power meeting of the U.N. representatives at the end of January to consider the proposal."

The French statement also ignored the fifth permanent member of the Security Council, Nationalist China, by referring to "the other three members."

It is thought that the big powers will discuss the proposal in the form of a series of bilateral conferences among themselves, continually exchanging points of view and suggestions.

The U.S. delegation would be in close contact with the Israeli delegation, while the French and Soviet delegations would keep the Arab representatives in touch with what was going on.

The British Government was preparing to follow the United States in sending off a provisional reply to the Soviet memorandum of the Security Council resolution.

Surprise move by the U.S.

The U.S. Secretary of State, Mr. Dean Rusk, has handed the Soviet Chargé d'Affaires in Washington, Mr. Yuri Chernyskov, a list of American proposals aimed at bringing peace to the Middle East.

The proposals were reportedly sent in an American diplomatic Note last Wednesday, which replied to the Soviet communication on December 30, putting forward the Soviet Union's peace proposals.

The existence of the American proposals came as a surprise as it was thought that the Johnson administration was planning to leave the Middle East question to the incoming regime.

Canal may still be blocked at centenary

London talks 'example of hypocrisy' says Mr.

Rhodesia's Prime Minister, Mr. Smith, said of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference that nowhere in the world had there been a better example of hypocrisy and double standards.

He said: "We have witnessed at this conference an example of governments who have democracy and all the basic freedoms and standards of decency that the Commonwealth once stood for."

He said that the delegates from those countries were the loudest in their condemnation of Britain and added: "But perhaps after all there is hope that such good will come."

POLICE ARREST 17 AFTER MURDERS

Police investigating the murder of two members of the militant Black Panther organization arrested 17 people in Los Angeles to prevent their avenging the Vietnam.

The two victims, both students, were killed when unidentified persons opened fire during a Black Panther group meeting at California University campus in Los Angeles.

The police named as John Huggins, 31, and Alvin Carter, 28, as both men died instantly.

Police said none of the 17 arrested were suspects. All of them were released on $10,000 bail.

The police said the mission, consisting of two Army colonels and six Air Force paratroopers, was to discuss the question of France helping the Lebanese to recover its defenses in the face of further similar attacks.

French authorities have, however, denied that the mission is to help the Lebanese to recover its defenses in the face of further similar attacks.

Drought to be ended by bombing glaciers

Argentine authorities are considering bombing the snow-capped Central Andes mountains near Mendoza in an effort to bring relief to the Western Argentine Province, crippled by severe drought for several months.

Federal authorities in Buenos Aires have contracted a private company to report on water potential accumulated in mountain glaciers, provincial officials said.

Experts have already flown over the area and a decision on whether to bomb the glaciers to bring the ice down the mountain sides will be taken after the survey has been completed.

The flow of local rivers dropped this year, to unprecedented levels because of lack of winter snows.

The lowlands in Mendoza Province, 680 miles from Buenos Aires, are among Argentina's driest regions. The mountain range blocks the eastward path of damp air from the Pacific Ocean.

Immigration to Britain falls

The number of immigrants entering Britain from Commonwealth countries and dependencies last November fell by more than 28 per cent from the previous month's total, according to figures published in the Daily Telegraph.

Some 4,283 Commonwealth citizens entered Britain during October compared with 5,936 in the corresponding month of the previous year.

The figure includes 338 immigrants from East Africa.

The paper stated that dependants accounted for 3,361 of the immigrants, the remainder are self-employed workers. A further 372 were admitted for settlement for various reasons.

Israel tests big powers to stop meddling

Israel's Foreign Minister, Mr. Eban, has in effect told France and the big powers not to meddle in Middle Eastern affairs. He said at Givat Brenner, near Tel Aviv, "The fate of the Middle East will be settled by the countries of this region and not by the big powers, who have in this region only interests of secondary importance."

Commenting on the French call for a conference of four of the United Nations Permanent Security Council powers, Mr. Eban said, "No plan could be valid if the inhabitants of this region did not agree to it. No peace plan which starts, like the Soviet and French plans, from the idea that Israel was the aggressor in June, 1967, could lead to anything for it would completely ignore the situation in its entirety before this so-called agreement."

FRENCH PLAN STILL BEING STUDIED

British, U.S. and Soviet leaders are still studying the French proposal that the U.N. representatives of the four major powers should meet together within the next 14 days to seek a Middle East settlement. France, in Notes to the three other powers on the 18-month-old crisis, suggested that in liaison with the U.N. Secretary-General they should seek "means through which they could contribute towards establishing a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

The latest initiative comes after a year of frustrated efforts by U.N. Secretary-General Mr. Gunnar Jarring to bring about a settlement between Israel and the Arabs. British officials would say nothing except that the proposal was being studied, but it is thought that a settlement in line with the French proposal is still being considered on the lines of the 1957-58 settlement which was held in New York because of the absence of permanent members of the Security Council.

France's deputy U.N. delegate, Mr. Claude Chavet, called on U.N. Secretary-General Mr. Jarring in his statement announcing the proposal, the French Foreign Ministry said. "The French Government believes that the Middle East crisis, far from showing evidence of abating, is becoming alarmingly aggravated. "So it has said before, the United States, France, Britain and the Soviet Union, which have permanent seats on the Security Council, should act together to facilitate implementation of the resolution of November 22, 1967."

"Such a joint action by the four powers obviously means preliminary negotiations and discussions. The object of these must be to pave the way for a settlement in which all the parties concerned would be closely associated. "For this reason, the French Government has proposed to the other three permanent members of the Security Council that their representatives on the council should meet in order to seek, in liaison with the U.N. Secretary-General, the means through which their governments could contribute to establishing a just and durable peace in the Middle East, especially by defining conditions for the implementation of the resolution of November 22, 1967, and by facilitating — to the same end — the work of the Security Council." The statement did not mention any time for the proposed get-together, but the U.S. State Department, in its comment that it would study the proposal, said the French Note had proposed a "normal four-power meeting of the U.N. representatives at the end of January to consider the Middle East situation." The French statement also ignored the 1957-58 settlement which the Security Council, Nationalist China, and the United States, among other members, had agreed to.

Surprise move by the U.S.

The U.S. Secretary of State, Mr. Dean Rusk, has handed the Soviet Charge d'Affaires in Washington, Mr. Yuri Chernomyr, a list of American proposals aimed at bringing peace to the Middle East. The proposals were reportedly sent in an American diplomatic Note last Wednesday, which reached the Soviet communication on December 30, putting forward the Soviet Union's peace proposal. The extension of the American proposal comes as a surprise as it was thought that the Johnson administration was planning to leave the Middle East question to the incoming President.

Canal may be blocked at century

Hopes are dimming in Egypt that the Suez Canal, blocked since the 1967 war, can be reopened in time for its 100th birthday this year. As the great powers continue diplomatic manoeuvres to end the Middle East conflict and reopen the canal, the twin town of Suez, perched vulnerably on a small scrap of land at the end of a narrow causeway, the silent, dusty main street is like the setting for a Western. The picturesque wooden-balconied shops are shuttered up — litter blows about 50,000 essential workers are left to run the oil refineries, fertilizer plants and the docks. The 50 of the 200 oil storage tanks and 300 of the 400 workers are only working at 80 per cent capacity.

The canal, built by the French engineer Ferdinand de Lesseps, wrecks from the June war still lie where they settled and bargains are growing a foot thick on the lips of 15 ships stranded since 1967 along the waterway. Suez looks like a city digging in for a long siege. More and more earth-topped shelters are being dug in the near-deserted squares. Workmen blasted another course of bricks on the top of blast walls already 20 feet high around the Governorate building, and soldiers with automatic guns squat on the roofs of houses.

London talks 'example of hypocrisy' says Mr. S

Rhodesia's Prime Minister, Mr. Smith, said of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference that nowhere in the world had there been a better example of hypocrisy and double standards.

He said: "We have witnessed at this conference an example of governments who have democracy and all the basic freedoms and standards of decency that the Commonwealth once stood for."

He said that the delegates from those countries were the loudest in their condemnation of Britain and added: "But perhaps after all there is hope that some good will come out of this and that the British people will see the error of their ways."

Drought to be ended by bombing glaciers

Argentine authorities are considering bombing the snow-capped Central Andes mountains near Mendoza in an effort to bring relief to the Western Argentine Province crippled by severe drought for several months.

Federal authorities in Buenos Aires have contracted a private company to report on the water potential accumulated in mountain glaciers, provincial officials said. Experts have already flown over the area and a decision on whether to bomb the glaciers to bring the ice down the mountains has been taken after the survey has been completed.

The flow of local rivers dropped this year to unprecedented levels because of lack of winter snows. The lowlands in Mendoza Province, 600 miles from Buenos Aires, are among Argentina's driest because the Andes mountain range blocks the eastward path of damp air from the Pacific Ocean.
