THE "FANYS" ARE NOW A MILITARY UNIT

Hundreds of Recruits Urgently Needed

RE-ENLISTMENT FOR DURATION

By regulations appearing in the Official Gazette this week, the FANYs are recognized as one of the Military Units of the East Africa Command. This recognition, as authorized by the Army Council, places the personnel of that Unit on a basis of complete equality with all other fighting units of the East Africa Command and privities, including the exceptional honor that their Officers will hold fully commissioned ranks, unlike the honorary commissions held by Officers in Women's Units. Recognition of the service already rendered by FANYs is formally granted by the fact that the establishment of the Unit is to date back to 1st September, 1939. W.T.S. up to date has been the only person to have been recruited to the FANYs since they were first formed. It is now being urged that the FANYs have done a vital job of work up to date in relation to the young men of the forces on urgently required for the imminent operations. They are needed now more than ever before to release the vast number of recruits who are being held back to maintain the strength of the British Expeditionary Force in France.

In his final engagement, according to an eyewitness, he was seen to shoot down an enemy fighter but was himself attacked by a second and his plane crashed.

"Bob" Pollard was of the type which is often called a "pilot's pilot" at the age of 17, he was a challenge over for being at his preparatory school in Canada and later at an elite school in the States. At the XV, capturing the latter in his last term at school, where he was not only popular with the boys but enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the staff.

DISSATISFACTION WITH BRITAIN'S WAR POLICY

Mounting Criticism In The Country

MILITARY INTERVENTION TO ASSIST RUSSIA?

London, Sept. 22.—The war has now entered its second year, and the public mind is beginning to feel the strain of the prolonged conflict. The Government's policy of fighting the war without direct military intervention to assist Russia has become a subject of increasing concern. Many people are beginning to feel that the British Government's policy is not only ineffective but also dangerous. The fact that the Russian army is being defeated in the East is a source of deep disappointment to many. It is felt that the British Government should have taken more decisive action to assist the Russian people. The fact that the British Government has refused to do so is a source of deep disappointment to many. Germans Capture A City In Ruins

NO PROGRESS AT ODESSA AND LENINGRAD

Sept. 22.—The Russian military communiqué merely stated: "During the night our troops engaged the enemy along the whole front." The fighting of Kiev was in German hands. After days of fierce fighting the Russian forces finally withdrew but before they could they made certain that the capture of Kiev would be the least possible value to the enemy. The Germans, who entered the city some days ago while their troops were still fighting at the outskirts of the city, said the Russian garrison was so small that Kiev had been taken intact. Their broadcast last night, however, proved how officially the Russians had completed the capture of the city. When the Germans marched into Kiev they found indescribable damage. All vital supplies had been removed, the public service had been broken down, and the city was a mass of rubble. The Russian communiqué asserts that the annihilation of the enemy is being completed. The capture of Kiev is a major step towards the capture of the city. The Russian communiqué asserts that the annihilation of the enemy is being completed. Passive Defence Not Enough September 22. President Roosevelt has called a formal conference of Congress leaders at the White House to discuss and emphasize the need for quick approval of the new Lend-Lease Administration bill.

Senator George, a former Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has denounced the proposal for modification of the neutrality act. He said: "Any proposal to modify the act is tantamount to an immediate step to cease support of the British Empire."

Senator George declared that he would oppose any attempt of the Senate to amend the Lend-Lease Administration bill by imposing a condition on aid to the British Union.

Many United States newspapers yesterday commented on the weakening of the isolationist movement.

The New York Times emphasizes the significance of the announcement of the Congress of the American League for fighting outside the United States if fighting was needed to defend the country.

"The Billingtons Don't wait for an outbreak of hostilities," says the League's program for the administration's foreign policy had virtually collapsed.

The President of Princeton University, Mr. H. W. Dodge, told a meeting of students that they must understand the probability of victory, defeat and then understand the meaning of that result and be ready if America were to survive. (Reuter).

When The Navy Takes To The Air

Observer's Graphic Story Of Enemy's Terrible Losses

During the Western Desert the first few days of the campaign were spent in making the sky hot for the fighters.

A message from Alexandria says that the first Axis air raid was the first single-engine fighter raid on the Barris because of its proximity to the coast. Many of the pilots on British command were the services in the desert carriers. British and German fighters were in the air.

The fighters are said to be the latest planes in the Western Desert and although the operations have not been so intense as they were in the past, the whole story is being told in the air.

Whispered sailors would look carefully at planes in the sky. The British and German fighters were in the air.

WAR AT SEA

Blows In The Mediterranean

We do not make enough of our success. Casually fitted into the news reports is the unacknowledged announcement that our submarines operating in the Mediterranean have successfully attacked a heavily protected Italian convoy of three large liners, sunk two of them and damaged the third. The shipping losses to Italy, in terms of tonnage, represent nearly fifty thousand tons for three big ships alone. That is an achievement of no mean order. It has other and more far-reaching consequences.

WAR AT SEA

Blows In The Mediterranean

The first British submarine to be sunk in the Mediterranean was the "HMS Thetis" on September 21. The first British submarine to be sunk in the Mediterranean was the "HMS Thetis" on September 21.

WAR AT SEA

Blows In The Mediterranean

The first British submarine to be sunk in the Mediterranean was the "HMS Thetis" on September 21. The first British submarine to be sunk in the Mediterranean was the "HMS Thetis" on September 21.

Benghazi and Tripoli and ports in Sicily and southern Italy are constantly battered and across the energy land line Tobruk where the garrison holds out not merely defiantly but with great cheerfulness.

Axis losses in shipping in the Mediterranean have been heavy. To what extent Italy and Germany have been able to replace the losses in Libya seriously may be gathered from the inability or unwillingness of the British and Germans to start any large-scale offensive, and from such curious happenings as the forced landing of a German plane by Italian aircraft short of Tripoli, sent off on a job with their size, were on an unusually important mission. The Axis has been trying desperately to reinforce Libya for many months, prepared for the coming of the cool season and no doubt anticipating a revival of activity. These large vessels were probably trooping. The conditions of a submarine attack do not permit close observation but we shall hear more of the exact nature of the loss if they were troopships the loss of two of them is a serious setback in them to Axis plans to reinforce Libya and on Tripoli. There is no doubt that Italian shipping disasters are becoming so serious that they will very soon at the present rate have an important and probably decisive influence on the Libyan situation and may compel the Axis power to give up the Libyan campaign.

interpreted public opinion when it petitioned the Governor of Kenya to take steps to avoid a General Election for the Legislative Council in the present circumstances. His Excellency has also in the petition published this morning indicated that he has referred the question of amending the Regulations to the Secretary of State for the Colonies and that an early official announcement may be expected. From the tenor of His Excellency's reply we may assume that he has supported the request to continue the life of the Council.

The proposal made by the Executive of the Convention was for the reasons set forth—no doubt for other reasons well known to the Executive but unnecessary to stress or mention—the European Executive desires that the extension of the life of the Council should be subject to review every year and should only be on a yearly basis, from the terms of the Executive's reply and its reference to the "duration of the war" it is not quite clear whether it should be whether in fact the Governor has referred the matter to the Secretary of State.

TOEING THE LINE

WHEN a man has spent a few years within a stone's throw of the Equator—say between 5° North and 11° South—he begins to pride himself on his sound practical knowledge of there and how to treat them. That explains why the use of Rose's Lime Juice has spread through Kenya, Tanganyika with the speed of a new broom through the Stock Exchange. Why?

Well, Rose's happens to be the genuine juice of fresh limes, Rose's grow these limes themselves, so they ought to know. Every bottle of Rose's knows its family tree, and there are no synthetic chemicals lurking in its branches. Because it is pure, Rose's must always cost you just a little extra, but you do know that you're getting the real thing. And so sell your guests, when they sample your cocktails and long cool drinks.

Your complexion made vital and lovely by Pears' Tonic Action

Today every start of Britain's "Tanks for Russia" week. The Russian Ambassador in London, M. Malink, has issued a special message to tank workers. He says: "We need tanks, more tanks and yet more tanks. We produce more ourselves, but our losses on the 2,000 mile front are great. Your urgent help is needed to reinforce our own efforts. Your tanks will not be wasted; they will go out to battle at once. We know how to use them against our common enemy. The best testimony is the great fight the Soviet forces and the British tankmen people have put up during the last three months. We require more tanks than ever before. The sooner you send us tanks and the greater their number, the earlier will the Nazis be defeated. We wish with you one common front. Send immediately your tank reinforcements to that section of the front which at present is bearing the brunt of the attack and which needs the most help."
