NO SURVIVORS OF COMET DISASTER

Mr. Chester Wilmot among passengers

STORY OF EXPLOSIONS

TEAMS of British and Italian experts arrived yesterday at the island of Elba to try to find out why the B.O.A.C. Comet—the one which opened the world's first jet-airliner service between London and Johannesburg 19 months ago—crashed into the sea half an hour after leaving Rome yesterday morning. The disaster was about 15 miles from the island.

Later yesterday help was given up of there being any survivors of the 29 passengers, seven of whom were children and its crew of six. The pilot, Mr. Chester Wilmot, the radio controller, and two correspondents. Fifteen bodies were recovered by fishermen yesterday, which put off from Elba's Portoferraio, and searched from Sunday afternoon until late at night.

When the search resumed yesterday morning, wreckage and fishing vessels encountered storm-whipped seas. During the night's three thunderstorms had lashed the area of the crash, and although just before dawn the storm driven away, seas were still running high.

The aircraft was seen in flames as it crashed into the sea. A destroyer, a mine-sweeper and two corvettes. Italian aircraft also helped.

Empire setback on development

U.K. MAY HALVE FUND ORIGINALLY PLANNED

BRITAIN may have to reduce by half the amount she schemes to contribute to investment in developing countries this year, according to financial officials in Sydney. The original sum was reported to be £100,000,000.

Britain's plans were to be discussed by the Commonwealth Finance Ministers meeting in London last week. The meeting was a detailed discussion of the sterling area trade and development prospects.

The overriding necessity now is to avoid a return to the inflationary control which was introduced in the Commonwealth two years ago. The inflation problem could have a dramatic effect on the British trade deficit and could nullify the progress since the last Commonwealth conference in London.

It costs money to keep bloodhounds!

How much does your "watchdog personal" cost you per hour? How much do you pay for the unproductive work of locating errors in the tapes of business machines? The more book-keeping, the more checking, the more use of your personnel as "bloodhounds" expensive for you.

You can save both the nerves of your employees and your own money by choosing FACTA, the new Swedish linking machine! With the Facta you increase both accuracy and speed. The Facta's extra-low, two-row keyboard, designed on the same principles as the world-famous Part II, gives the hand a more mental working position. Placement of the number keys in two rows permits you to use all the fingers of your hand; they find the keys easier. You need not look at the keys, you know where they are. An automatic operating key-rod so grouped that you can see the touch system with your left hand! Your right hand is free for checking, making notes, etc.

Ammunition charge: Officer fined £50

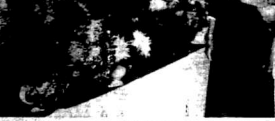

RECORD prices now being realised at the Mombasa Coffee Auctions are likely to continue through-out the season, say coffee experts here, and they admit surprise at the present prices.

Banganda native tobacco coffees have been bringing $400 per cwt. or 20/- over the average price of Mombasa. The reason for these prices is a drop in Brazilian production, a drop in French coffee, which has brought considerable returns, and a drop in the price of American tobacco.

New rules
Uganda's native producers are likely to make large profits on coffee this year. Few coffee to duty rules have been put into the Uganda Coffee Bill which is to market coffee freely, providing for the needs of producers and buyers.

For development
Uganda's Coffee Price Authority is likely to be set up to regulate the coffee market. The authority is to be financed by a 2.5% levy on coffee exports.

CRASH STILL MYSTERY

A TANGANYIKA African who fought off a wounded lion with a stick and knife when he attacked his European employer, has been awarded the George Medal. The award, for his courage and loyalty, was announced in the London Gazette yesterday.

The man, who has been employed by the late Mr. J. G. M. de Vries, a Dutch estate agent, was Mr. M. D. J. van der Merwe. He was 27 years old, and is now in the hospital at the London Zoo.

THE Comet jetliner has been grounded. This action of the R.O.C. is the result of one of its flying 120 passengers and crew of six. The reason for the crash is shrouded in mystery.

The decision also affects the South African Airways Comet service between London and Johannesburg, while Air France and the Union Aéromaritime de Transport French air companies operating the aircraft, have decided to ground them "for a few days."

THE R.O.C. and South African Airways have announced that they will substitute 40-aster Argonauts for the Comets at the moment. Meanwhile, a spokesman of the corporation, the chairman, Sir Miles Thomas, has decided "to devote himself almost exclusively to probing the mishap in a desire to retain the aircraft's good name."

Technicians began taking the grounded aircraft to pieces yesterday to make a minute examination.

The De Havilland Aircraft Corporation has been invited to participate in the dissection of the jetliner. The corporation has been invited to participate in the dissection of the jetliner. The corporation has been invited to participate in the dissection of the jetliner.

Single-handed Housewife

BY ROBINA WRIGHT

I've always done a great deal in the home and when we returned from long leaves to this troubled city of Nairobi we felt that view alone it would be better to dispense with servants.

I had the safety of my little daughter and her friends and the best of Africa came in open to individuals of the best of Africa. Things meant to be done and done in the best of Africa. I had no one to help me and I had no one to help me.

Daubers

I've heard many women say they don't like to wash their own clothes but wonder where they really could find a good dauber. I have tried several and I found that the best one was the one that was made of wood and had a handle that was made of wood.

JAMAICA HOLD A 70-RUN LEAD

Interesting finish possible

JAMAICA led the M.C.C. tourists by 70 runs and six wickets at their second innings on Monday at Kingston. M.C.C. were all out for 283 shortly after Jamaica's fast bowling total of 187. At stumps, Jamaica were 100 for three in their second innings.

The tourists therefore must have lost at least six wickets in quick time and their bowlers of the required quality were not to be seen in reply to Jamaica. They were hit by an innings and 17 runs in the earlier test.

Travellers postponed

The last five M.C.C. visitors left for their respective homes on Saturday. The last of the group to leave was the batsman, who was hit by an innings and 17 runs in the earlier test. The group to leave was the batsman, who was hit by an innings and 17 runs in the earlier test.

MUNSTER XV TIPPED TO BEAT ALL-BLACKS TODAY

An Irish team with a reputation

HAVING come within seconds of beating the Australian All-Blacks in 1948 and running the Springboks to 1952 it is widely thought that the Irish team has built up such a reputation against overseas tourists that a third time they will be tipped to beat the New Zealand All-Blacks today at Cork.

The Irish team is expected to be a very strong one and they will be better than the first time they were in Ireland.

Monahan's best pack Munster this season scored one of their best victories over Ulster at Ravenhill then had the better of a scorching draw with Leinster and finally, through a combination of confidence, rain, mud and wind at Galway, lost most excitingly to Humble Coughlin.

STEADY YEAR FOR EAST AFRICAN SISAL GROWERS

Greater production — but costs still too high

REASONABLY settled markets, without any pronounced boom or slump, have been the distinguishing features with regard to prices, according to a review by the London firm of Wigmore and Co. Ltd. Referring to East African sisal, the review states that prices have been stable, although efforts have failed to secure any reduction costs to be commensurate with the prices in vogue.

Generally, rates provided a marked contrast during the past year with the violent fall at the close of 1935. The last 18 months had indeed shown some stability with increasing export markets and without any pronounced boom or slump.

The absence of major political disturbances, the further extension of the sisal area in place of other commodities, the steady supply of sisal, the near completion of sisal processing, the relaxation of export restrictions and constant quotations of importers that made their contribution.

No. 1. PRICE UP £5

AFTER remaining steady in December, 1935, the price per ton has shown an upward trend. The following prices per ton are currently in effect:

| No. 1 | £22 0/0 |
| No. 2 | £20 0/0 |
| No. 3 | £18 0/0 |

| No. 5 | £14 0/0 |
| No. 6 | £12 0/0 |

Cheapest fibre

With an average price little over £20 in c.i.f. production, the sort of fibre today is the cheapest imported. It is also the most desirable for developing countries as it is made of existing output.

It is noted that the British East Africa to the United States ports is the most desirable for developing countries as it is made of existing output.

Brazilian diposal

A depressing influence on prices has been the somewhat unwelcome accumulation of Brazilian wool brought to the market by the Bank of Brazil, which has since cut its price.

It is noted that the Brazilian wool has since cut its price.

'RIGHT TRADE LEVEL' PROBLEM OF JAPAN

Holding up payments agreement

From Our Correspondent, London

THE recent statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. A. Butler, that one of the problems of the sterling area-Japanese payments is to establish the "right level" of trade, is the first official statement of the Government in concluding a new payments agreement.

When the Anglo-Japanese payments agreement was signed in London on December 3, the British Government stated that it was a new agreement, without the end of the world. But now, after five weeks of almost daily meetings, it is impossible to say even an unofficial forecast of when the talks will conclude.

'PLOTTERS' WERE TOO CONVINCING FOR SCOUTS

DURING A Scout's tour at Embu it was arranged that a mock "group of plotters" should be organized by the Scouts to test the speed with which they reported the matter. But the "plotter" so elaborated the simple story they had been given that the Scouts thought they had unearthed a plot to remove the Scoutmaster from the area.

The "plot" was so convincing that it was reported to the Scoutmaster, who then called the Scoutmaster and the Scoutmaster's wife to the office of the present Scoutmaster on African Hill in the district.

"Twenty-three Scouts and their leaders from all the schools in Embu, attended the meeting. One who was expected to be present remained on African Hill in the district."

At this meeting the Scoutmaster for Mbari Hill, Mr. Andrew Taylor, the Scoutmaster for Embu, Mr. Andrew Taylor, and the Scoutmaster for Embu, Mr. Andrew Taylor, were present.

Dry and sunny in Kenya and Uganda

THERE has been little change in the general situation and there are no indications of any impending changes. The East African Meteorological Department reports as to its weather forecast for the week ending January 23. The Inter-Territorial Convergence Zone has almost wholly south of Tanganyika.

Although its northern boundary may affect the Southern Province.

The westerly boundary is expected only to affect the Western Province and the Southern Highlands. Weather over Kenya and Uganda is expected to remain dry and sunny, with fairly widespread showers in Uganda in Tanganyika there will be scattered showers but with long sunny periods in the Southern Highlands.

KENYA

All East African reports of wind are from the coast.

WESTERN PROVINCE

Kenya: Fairly variable, with occasional showers, mainly in the morning.

VAUXHALL value with economy and endurance

The two models are alike in dimensions and appearance, different in purpose and appeal. The Vauxhall with its 21-horse, six-cylinder engine, offers really outstanding performance, coupled with a surprising degree of economy.

The Vauxhall with its four-cylinder, four-cylinder, offers really outstanding economy in a roomy car capable of a flexibility which makes it suitable for the harshest and roughest conditions.

Think of a quality you value in modern car design—good looks... five-passenger room and comfort... the facility... road holding... all-around view... simple, business-like, high performance without fuss... reliability... in peace and operation—whatever it is, the new Vauxhall has it.

Troop wins portrait of Chief Scout

The Chief Commissioner, Sir Godfrey Rhodes, has received a letter from Sir Philip Mitchell thanking a pleasant Christmas card sent to him by the Scouts and Guides of Subukia.

An extract from his letter is as follows: "They arrived with a little, but good order. They were beautifully turned out and a pleasure to look at. They sang good songs and chanted, having a very good Christmas card and their names and addresses written on them. They seemed to be very happy and certainly gave much hope for the future of the Scouts and Guides in the East African Territory."

GROWTH OF THE WAKAMBA SISAL INDUSTRY

BY ANTHONY LAVERS

TURNING a barren and unproductive piece of Africa into a money-spinner normally means spending several million pounds. But in one Kenya district a tough, spiky plant spells prosperity for 50,000 African farmers and the scheme cost only a few thousand.

The plant, of course, is sisal, which is a long, hard fibre that makes, among other things, the world's best binder twine. At the present price of £28 a ton it shows a nice profit to producers.

In the Machakos district of east Kenya the Government of Kenya is helping a group of 500 African farmers from both the production and export of sisal. Known as the Machakos African Sisal Scheme and run by the local African District Council, it buys sisal from African farmers, processes it at a modern factory and sells it overseas under its own name, with the profit going to betterment schemes for the Wakamba people.

One of the best Government officers in the district is Mr. Hugh Fraser, Parliamentary Secretary to the Cabinet Secretary, who visited Machakos when he visited the sisal processing factory. This, using the present Wakamba production of about 36 hows a month, has achieved several years' worth of sisal export in 1955. Yet it is only the beginning of a much larger prospect — a sisal plantation of 10,000 acres at present, unutilised.

Sisal is sowing now to the Wakamba. As long ago as 1939 the trustees were ordered by the District Council to use it as a boundary marker on every farm and small-holding. As a result, the houses, hills, or sheep-pen of sisal were of the sisal plants that look like giant porcupine legs.

The boundary markers are supplemented by small plantations of sisal, making a total of some 15,000 acres under African fibre production. When sisal rose in the recent years, the boundary markers proved to be the wrong place for the sisal. The Government factory opened at Machakos, it had to be imported from Europe. Sisal estates in the district, but only under the sisal, have been sowing.

White people were still high in the Machakos African District.

If the Wakamba wanted to sell their sisal, they would have to process and market it properly. When the factory opened at Machakos it has already contracted to buy Wakamba fibre in the high boom years, with the result that it made a trading loss of several thousand pounds in 1951. In 1952 it maintained a good output of high quality sisal which has gained an excellent reputation in the world market and is bringing in a profit of some £200 a month.

Although the factory's part in washing and cleaning the fibre helped to raise the quality substantially, the Wakamba growers themselves had to be taught proper methods of de-certificating — removing the fibre from the sisal leaves — says Mr. Furgan. "We covered thousands of miles visiting Wakamba farmers and explaining the whole thing over and over again."

"De-certificating machinery is

Council — the elected body of Africans which governs the district — decided to put the industry on a sound financial and business footing. They set up a sisal marketing organisation and hired premises for a temporary factory to clean the sisal. African growers still for the Government appointed Mr. J. Furgan, one of the trustees to supervise the scheme.

With the help of the Government and managers of several sisal estates in Kenya, there is very little that still has to be done. Next does not know about sisal planting.

"The main reason why I took this job," says Mr. Furgan, "is because I believe that the Wakamba industry is going to be a very big thing indeed. We could make Machakos one of the wealthiest districts in the country."

While the temporary factory got under way, the District Council was busy putting up a £250,000. And their confidence was well justified. From 1951 to £30 a ton. Soon there was a market for sisal and the big estate would no longer be per-capita only.

But Mr. Furgan is now busy on plans to put a big area of sisal land under the banks of the Athi River under sisal. The sisal plantations are for an estate on the slopes of a high commercial plantation starting with a sisal scheme of 5,000 acres, bringing in over £500,000 a year at present rates.

Machakos contains some of the most fertile land in Kenya but most of the crops is just food and domestic. The sisal production is high. The sisal most planted and sown in the district is sisal. It is in this part of African agriculture that holds the greatest hope for the district's 200,000 people.

Money for the estate scheme will probably come from the £3,000,000 gift from Britain to further African agriculture in the Colony. The plans are still in the embryo stage, but Mr. Furgan is convinced that, given the money, and the qualified staff, the scheme is sure of success.

"After six or seven years," he says, "the only biggest wave of development will be sisal. When Nature says sisal crops won't grow unless a sisal market exists, money says sisal crops won't grow unless you have an answer to our population problem in Kenya."

HOMES AND GARDENS OF KENYA

HIGHLY individual a house built for highly individual people, is that belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Kaplan on the way to Imuru. The architect was Ernest May and the house is built in the Spanish style and painted in the typical shades of pink often seen in that country. It also shows touches of Mrs. Kaplan's native English county of Cornwall.

His high stone overmantel, the design for which came from all parts of Kenya. It again is in original stone. There is a book and ornament niche at the end of the fireplace built in the most rare piece of red brick.

Probably the most rare piece of red brick in a house in Kenya is the material used in the fireplace, made by an Austrian furniture designer who built furniture for the Prince Consort. An original miniature by Baxter—an English artist who became a painter and is known as Baxter—is a reproduction of a painting of a woman and a child, made by Mrs. Kaplan's father's collection.

The living-room floor is covered in a beautiful, multi-colored satin braided fabric in a matching carpet, and rust velvet curtains. A picture lampshade and a pouffe are also in this attractive color. Mrs. Kaplan's blue has a particular fondness for two old brass-tudded Arab chairs. At the far end of the room is a music cabinet, and a copy of the "Singsong" album, with a handsome book, and a copy of the artist's impression of St. Paul, from Mrs. Kaplan's collection, is naturally one of her treasured possessions.

The dining-room colour scheme is wine and sage, and covered benches are in an old Spanish table with tortoise shell inlay and other red and green.

A small insect room is decorated in coral and green, and other in coral and green. The dining room is in the same part of the house and has the fish-wood stairs, stained in a wrought-iron railing, painted in coral, a glass-topped window and an old Arab rug standing on a rug. A striking Moorish reproduction of "The Young Warrior," by Baxter, is in the room. Mrs. Kaplan's study, carpeted in royal blue, has a certain of the same shade and its favorite articles of rich red velvet. A picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall. A bookcase and a picture of a young man in a blue suit are on the wall. A picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall.

Standing at the head of the long passage connecting the rooms is an old stained light

I entered a small, cozy bar-room, carpeted with a heavy grey and white check. The bar is in the middle of the room, and is the light shade. Gray with music, sport, stage, etc. On one wall is a painting by Percy Moore of Mrs. Kaplan, a pastel, one of this artist's earliest pictures of an adult.

Off the passage is a small dressing-room with a mirror before looking across the balcony to Lamuru. An original between which has printed them curtains and a turquoise blue carpet. Two very old, Spanish style chairs are on the wall, and a picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall. A picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall.

A most individual piece of furniture is the wide, deep Spanish terrace across to which is gained from the study. Its walls are rough-hewn in pink stone, its decorative cream stone. A top of the exterior of the walls was most revealing. In the small porch I found growing a rare shrub, whose fruiting is one of Mrs. Kaplan's pride. Writers and Virginia together make a magnificent point, one which neither architect nor owner would ever guess. The latter, indeed, I have ever seen dashed setting close by and on it are carved family members of the garden. Mrs. Kaplan led me to what is not truly blue. It is the family as "God's Point," about 1870. It is a picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall. A picture of a young man in a blue suit is on the wall.

Quicker ironing — and safer too!

OPRIM IRONING MACHINE

To those growing numbers of East African women who are ever more generally consulting the naming of their homes independent of outside help, the OPRIM ironing machine provides a decisive answer.

By its means confined to the ironing of flat articles, the OPRIM will iron shirts and neckties, with minor adjustments, shirts, frocks, collars—in fact any garment large or small. Its 20-ton roller is operated by an industry variable switch. Thus it is possible to iron even the most delicate garments with its damage of burning. OPRIM saves valuable ironing—and safer too.
