THIS WEEK'S LEADERS

RUSSIA

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1942.

So great was the reputation built up by the German armistice and their mechanized divisions by the rapidity of the conquest of the Low Countries and France in 1940, and so depressing has been the long sequence of reverses in the East, that the Russian people were almost ready to give way even to the day of their coming.

It was only in recent weeks that there has been encouragement in the masses. The Russian people are encouraged by the fact that they can deal with the invaders this year has had an effect on the Russian people. The Russian people are encouraged by the fact that they can deal with the invaders this year has had an effect on the Russian people. The Russian people are encouraged by the fact that they can deal with the invaders this year has had an effect on the Russian people.

EMPIRE DAY

MONDAY, MAY 25, 1942.

Not so many years before the war, Empire Day was a very neglected date in the British calendar. It had its place overseas where the normal method of observing it was by military parades and addresses to school boys about the Flag on which the Sun never sets. But by many people who thought of Empire Day as it was dismissed as a second front. Italy is today one of the weakest and one of the most tempting spots in the Axis.

THE SAILORS' FUND

WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1942.

Half of Sailors' Week is over but the enthusiasm for the fund will exceed twenty thousand pounds before the week is done. The subscription list alone will exceed twenty thousand pounds before the week is done and there is much money to come in from the country districts from the many special entertainments in town and out and from the African people. And on Saturday night, the great country-wide Empire Day just to bring the week to an end. But Saturday, though the end of Sailors' Week is not the end of the fund.

It will develop from the Kharkov battle into victory along the front. The Kharkov battle, which has already brought the Germans to change their tactics, suggests even at this early stage that the German army will not be able to win. The Russian people are encouraged by the fact that they can deal with the invaders this year has had an effect on the Russian people.

period from 1940 to 1948, the Empire with its Allies fought, and to mount a lot to the Empire and to the world but nobody should make the mistake of taking it for granted.

Between those two wars the Empire changed. The principle of self-government was extended to almost all the territories which had been gradually and cautiously centralised, and from what had been a dependent country developed the Commonwealth of Nations. The strain upon the Commonwealth has been even greater in this war than it was in the last.

So many years before the war, Empire Day was a very neglected date in the British calendar. It had its place overseas where the normal method of observing it was by military parades and addresses to school boys about the Flag on which the Sun never sets. But by many people who thought of Empire Day as it was dismissed as a second front. Italy is today one of the weakest and one of the most tempting spots in the Axis.

say what will be best for the sailors of many Allied races, but we believe we can express plain opinion aright when we suggest that expenditure on stone and mortar (even if building could be undertaken today at a tremendous cost of all building in the world) is not the idea of the majority about the use to which the money should be put.

EMPIRE DAY MESSAGE

On Empire Day, Lord Cranborne, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, marked the occasion with a special message to the Colonies, thanking for their wholehearted support. The message reads:

"I am glad to say that the year that has passed since Empire Day 1941 has seen many dangers and some grievous losses. But there has also been great exertion and a steady mounting of the power and resources of the Allied nations, and we have brought to a stage where we can not only stand firm, but perhaps as yet only fairly and in our own way, but we have shown and are sharing in full measure."

It is an article published yesterday which he followed. We hope by others, an account was given of one of the many processes of education going on continuously in the East African Colonies. There is a wide variety on the part of the public to believe that Africa, for the time being, East Africa has not been the scene of battles, the people are employed in the most part on routine tasks and garrison duties only, and that Africa is a very peaceful, monotonous but not very dull, life. There is a large and steadily growing force of Africans and almost every African has some knowledge of the English language. There are courses in an almost unbelievable variety of subjects all of them with a direct bearing on the efficiency of the Empire. Some indication of the scope of the opportunity, as well as the nature of the obligation, may be gathered from the preliminary article which reminds you that the Committee consists of Officers and M.G.O.s who come to the Colonies from Britain and who have recently been in the East African Colonies to help with their surroundings, but most important, to make the proper contact with the African people, and with whom they will have to consult on the future of the Empire. THE CHICKEN RUN

WET WEATHER

Heavy rain, such as we are now having, will specify that every week, and after a heavy fall, it is essential to make a count of the price to see that it is right.

A flock may have become stopped by a fall of earth, and so an efficient obstacle to the free movement of water.

A count of a corrugated run roof may have become raised by a rammed native, causing the rain to beat in on the corrugations.

Wet weather affects all birds, or even chills the most plump. Some birds appear to enjoy the rain and will peck about after insects and will take on hard driving home.

It is not good to have the birds in a state of stress, and if they get wet they should be dried and put in a warm state of the kitchen to avoid a bad cough almost certain death of a turkey chick before it has "shot the red."

This wet weather is not a good time to raise chicks, therefore take the opportunity to rest the brooding coops away from the rain.

As a wonderful cleansing medium, in any runs which can be raised, and left to the weather, will be in prime condition when one starts rearing up the price again. A.M.S.

SOIL CONSERVATION II:

Maintaining The Land's Fertility

By D. L. BLUNT

(Director of Agriculture, Kenya)

In considering measures that can be taken to prevent deterioration of land and to increase fertility under present conditions, it is first necessary to consider the nature of the soil...

The soil conservation measures for the maintenance of fertility can be taken in two ways: first, by preventing the loss of soil fertility...

Secondly, the possibility is the use of manure, and here there is a vast field for improvement. The use of manure is one of the most important factors in maintaining the fertility of the soil...

THIS WEEK'S LEADERS

SPENDING THE MONEY

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1942

We believe it will be generally agreed that the Central Government, formed a month ago mainly for the purpose of preparing, launching and directing the very successful Appeal for Funds for the men of the Royal Navy and the Merchant Fleet, has acted wisely in making this a special fund. There are so many competing claims, so many admirable suggestions, so many wise warnings about what the author wants, that the Central Government, sitting in Nairobi, would have been very unwise in attempting at this stage to have decided upon a list of objects, as a problem presented by the sudden injection of thousands of dollars at a port disaffected to deal with them, are so complicated that they can only be approached with a very faint, but accurate knowledge of what the author himself wants when he comes ashore, and what is practicable within the limits available.

What can be done is also governed by the necessities imposed by the conditions of the port and the nature of the community and the requirements of the services. Moreover, there is no credit. Many Indian and other seamen from the East and elsewhere are among the large number of men who are using Mombasa and in addition to the Natives and the few Europeans of our Allies. We have an obligation to them all, and will need all our generosity from now till the end of the war to discharge our duty as a community in this respect. The amount already raised is a very substantial start but without careful planning and a sound interpretation of practical requirements, it would be very easy to dissipate it. The "Satara Fund" may have one of our personal list to have one of the regular objects of our generosity.

While the care of a successful programme related to the welfare of the men is undoubtedly the provision of accommodation for rest and recreation, which there is a homely atmosphere, and such accommodation must be on a generous scale, even if only temporary in character, there is room for some imagination. Holiday and convalescent camps up-country are worthy of consideration, recreations and sports can have a place, and a community centre, an open air cinema, there are many in the north) might be an admirable addition to the limited amenities of Mombasa. Friendly hospitality is clearly important. We should all be able readily to appreciate what it means both to the men and men to enjoy so completely and welcome a change that they return to the family atmosphere provided. But to be successful, hospitality must be limited, and as Mombasa provides the most suitable Colony, it will

BACK TO ITALY

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1942

It is not surprising that ten thousand Italian women and children, and a few men beyond military age or physically unfit for service, were evacuated from the British-occupied islands in Somalia. They boarded Italian ships sent by their own Government and they are now on their way back to Italy. Their departure closes not only a chapter in their own lives, but a chapter in the story of their country. Their arrival in Italy among their friends will bring home to many circles in the Fascist State the fact that Ethiopia has been lost to the Italian Empire and that as a consequence of its fall thousands of the wives of the Duce have forfeited the homes which they laboriously built in the Promised Land, the businesses they created, the farms and the industries they started and all their worldly possessions except the paper currency they were able to take with them. If it is any consolation to them, they will know that by their departure a wrong has been righted: a country has been restored by the British Government to its people. The fruit of aggression gathered with such stultifying satisfaction only six years ago, has been reaped.

How complete has been the reaction which the war has wrought in the lives of the Italian civilian population of Ethiopia may be gathered by the normal reaction of those who left Mombasa recently were equal in numbers to half the present-day Kenya and equal to the whole civilian population of the Colony at the end of the last war. For many of the Italian civilians, life in Ethiopia in the latter stages of colonization is a far more attractive and considerably higher than that they would have enjoyed in Italy and a condition of society much more agreeable. Some of them have been returned and held in deference will share the privilege. The war has also presented an urgent problem in the solution of which they will assist by providing for them on the spot during the emergency. And we feel sure that the Auxiliary Administration will be glad to have any suggestions they may have to the Central Committee or to the Executive Committee of the importance of setting aside a reserve from which at least a portion of the post-war requirements can be met.

what the fortune of war and the stupidity of Mussolini and his ranting Fascists have brought upon them. Some have merely been bewildered. But there are many who are bitterly resentful—not against Britain, but against their own Government—since sentiment is going to linger with them long after the excitement of return to Italy has passed.

The lack of moving them to the extent of their kind ever undertaken in this part of Africa and it has been discharged with happy success by the Occupied Territories Administration. It became clear when the Emperor returned to Ethiopia that the continued presence of a large enemy population was not only an embarrassment but a source of danger both to Ethiopia and to the Italians. The Emperor, conscious of the usefulness of the women of the useful, purpose which many Italian keepers, artisans and technicians was willing that some provision remain, but the British Government considered, and probably rightly, that the protection of many Italian was an unfair burden on the British Empire. Those who had been brought to Ethiopia after British troops had been withdrawn. A large number of the Italian women with their families, have remained in the British-occupied territories as the operation of power stations which they were previously employed.

Of one thing we may be certain. The Italian propagandists may attempt to exploit these unhappy people on their return to Italy, and their German model may associate them with allegations reflecting on the British Administration. Should the Italian propagandists be given the freedom to print and circulate their lies before they are given the lie by the reality of the facts, they should be carefully protected from avoidable abuse. If the women who have been working voluntarily in the East Africa Protectorate as a result of their patriotic who sailed from their homes, have been so well treated, they should be given the same consideration. It would be a mistake if prospective candidates for enrolment sought admission light-heartedly. In the belief that a few hard-pressed soldiers in Air Force or military units, or a few women with the considerable experience that has been acquired by the R.E.O.F. in facing women in employment, the risk that the new unit will be used to do the work of those who are in a position to undertake full-time military or civil work but are reluctant to do so, has been greatly lessened. It is a great means of bringing to book those who under the pretence of a few hours' voluntary work a month, would have their consciences smothered by their responsibilities. Despite the excellent part played by women in the Colony, there still remains the knowledge that the burden has not been evenly distributed and the fullest, nor most appropriate use been made of the woman power available.

AUXILIARY UNIT FOR WOMEN

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1942

There is a serious shortage of women in Kenya to meet the requirements of the daily work of the Services, but of the Government and the civilian population. That shortage is exaggerated in its effect on the difficulty of getting it, by the absence of adequate accommodation in and around Nairobi for working women on small salaries. The problem was discussed by the President of the Kenya Women's Emergency Organisation in a recent interview was brought by the East African Standard from Nairobi, and the Mayor of Nairobi, as a civic problem, earlier this month. So long as the problem is pressing and must be solved by the Government, it is well worth announcing any measurable progress towards an early start of it.

General Smuts said at during his recent visit that South Africa would not provide any more women for the north. The simple reason is that the Union needs her full working strength for her own great share in the war. On the other hand, there are still numbers of women in Tanganyika, Uganda and in the country districts of Kenya, but unless this problem of accommodation is solved, they cannot be brought to Nairobi, that without much delay, there is no useful purpose to be served in inducing these women to come to Kenya.

Obviously, it is to this whole question, as the announcement made at the end of last week that the K.W.E.O. is to form an to meet the attack, even if it means withdrawing from other fields, surely needed aircraft for the purpose.

There is no single angle from which these devastating bombing attacks can be viewed, which does not augment the sense of Britain's own growing mastery of the air. Consider the raids as an operation. That is great attacking force can attack such heavily defended targets as Cologne and Essen, and if ever such strongly protected areas at such low costs in lives and machines, is a spectacular achievement. To the mind that the almost incredible triumph of organisation which launches over a thousand bombers on a single strong diversionary force, more than a score of scattered bomber command aeroplanes in England to meet with little precision before a single objective, three hundred miles away. The concentration was so great at Cologne that a pilot flying at 10,000 feet, while "as if driving a car during the period of the Blitz" was "as if driving a car during the period of the Blitz".

Only British machines were used in these raids. The significance of this statement lies in the evidence that the British factories not only to provide large numbers of aircraft for the other theatres of war, notably for Russia, but to provide the same type of aircraft striking force to threaten the centres in their most vital centres.

Not only does this most impressive feat of arms in Britain as a constant menace that may descend without warning upon any of our industrial centres of Germany was produced, but there is also the vast potential air power of the United States rapidly coming into full production. The prospect of this further danger can be seen in the fact that the population of the Ruhr, now being living in daily terror of visitation.

The emigration reported from the Ruhr is only responsible for the ability of the German people to resist in the face of air bombardment which was displayed by the British people in the Battle of Britain and which enabled Mr. Churchill to make reference to Britain's proud history and to claim that this was their finest hour.

Heartening as is the news of the air, it is also a reminder of the promise at least of offensive action this is no time for wishful thinking. The enemy forces are powerful and they are still being made to suffer. The task calls for unflinching determination and unhesitating effort. Bombers in Cologne are but breaks in the clouds and give promise of better times to come.

SOIL CONSERVATION

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1942

In another column we published the first of two articles by the Hon. D. I. Blunt, Director of Agriculture, Kenya, on the problems raised by the heavy demands for the supply of essential foodstuffs for war purposes grown on Kenya soils. Increased production—indeed, an intensification of our present efforts—is an essential factor in the economy of the Middle East area. The greater the contribution of the more effective will be the Colony's part in the defeat of the common enemy, but this important task must not be carried out at the avoidable cost of misapplying the future prospects.

It is not surprising that the other two devastating blows at Germany's war industry and upon her people's morale have been delivered with the promise of a more complete blow of such a shattering nature cannot be sustained indefinitely and Germany's war industry will be forced to surrender.
