Agriculture on the Up-Grade

Reviews of Kenya's Primary Industry During 1941

An interesting review of the progress of agriculture in Kenya during 1941 is given in the annual report of the Agricultural Department. The Director, Mr. D. Blunt records increased output in almost all commodities, a concentration on production problems; generally satisfactory rains and a record yield of cotton.

Certain activities were unavoidably reduced owing to the shortage of staff due to members being on military service. No major activity was however suspended.

The report shows that during the year the Kenya Agricultural Board continued to be active in the promotion of the best growing crops. November and December were particularly favorable months for the planting of the main crop of wheat. A few acres of limited extent were planted in the early part of the year.

The value of agricultural produce in Kenya during 1941 was £2,343,500, as compared with £2,142,000 in the previous year. In addition there was a considerable increase in the value of certain agricultural products in the Colony. The value of the main crop of wheat was £1,174,100, compared with £1,041,000 in 1940.

VICTORY AT WESTMINSTER

There has been a difference of opinion on the question of the wisdom of holding a debate in the House of Commons on the subject of Libya and particularly on the wisdom of making it a Bill Government on the Government which would have resulted, had it been held, in a change of leadership at the most critical moment in the war. As a matter of fact the discussion has done no harm to the public in Britain, at all and those who are in the habit of thinking that the failure of the opposition to support the Government have been greeted with shouts of joy in the enemy countries, this debate has previous criticism which will result in good being done to the cause.

The critics and disappointments which have been experienced in the past two years can be doubtless explained, and have been explained, in the fact that the Government has been prepared to accede to an extremely strong, but that cannot be used too often. After three years it is wearing thin, the public in Britain, like the public in the enemy countries, were given to understand—and Mr. Churchill could not have been more correct in this respect—that the war in Libya had been so well that probably continued, that it was in all respects superior to the enemy. Two the forces had been fought campaigns had been fought victoriously in the Western Desert. It was assumed that the respect of both had been secured, particularly in the respect of tanks and their armaments. The we have all the greater, and the shock the more severe, when an officer who was believed to be well under control not only assumed the leadership but in a few weeks brought victory in Libya to the point of a new second world war in Alexandria. In his Order of the Day he troops General Auchinleck does just what has superiority in arms; on the military.

The Prime Minister has not said the air force has not been able to say apart from the argument that we had to wait for the air force to be ready, in large numbers, a smaller number that were good—why our allegedly superior forces, our superior manpower, our great supplies, were unable to hold the German onslaught. The fact of the matter seemed to be that the Prime Minister was not in the mood to placate any encouragement the opposition. He knew that he would hold the affection of the people and the confidence of the press in Parliament and he felt on a ground where he addressed the House as a whole for forgetting the fact that the British people and people—and particularly the British people—are not so well understood as they are. The whole incident has been an essay in education for Americans on the subject of Great Britain in their domestic Democracy. The truth is that Mr. Churchill could not answer the question of what happened in Libya because the facts of the early stages of the war are not so well understood as they are. He cannot say why we lost so heavily in the early stages of the war. He cannot say why we lost so heavily in the early stages of the war. He cannot say why we lost so heavily in the early stages of the war.

Eight Army's Grim

Attack on the British Front
MAGNIFICENT SUPPORT BY ALLIED AIR FORCE

July 5. (Associated Press.)—The British Eighth Army, which has been fighting since the outbreak of the war, has today launched a new offensive against the German forces in the West. The attack was made in the area of the Belgian frontier, and was supported by a magnificent display of Allied air power. The German forces were repulsed, and the British advanced to a new position. The air force played a crucial role in the success of the operation, destroying German supply lines and communications.

Raiders Visit N. W. England
July 5. (Associated Press.)—A group of German raiders has been sighted in the north-west of England. The raiders were seen near the coast, and it is believed that they were attempting to land. The British authorities have taken measures to prevent the landing, and the raiders have been driven back to sea. The incident has caused concern among the local population, but the British forces are confident that they will be able to deal with the raiders.

Sabotage Successes On "The French Front"

July 5. (Associated Press.)—Sabotage operations have been carried out in France, and have resulted in the destruction of German military equipment and supplies. The operations were carried out by French resistance forces, and were supported by the British air force. The German forces were caught off guard, and the sabotage operations were a success. The British air force played a crucial role in the success of the operations, dropping bombs on German supply lines and communications.

1,400 MURDERS
July 5. (Associated Press.)—A report has been received from the British authorities that 1,400 British soldiers have been killed in action during the war. The report was received from the British War Office, and is believed to be accurate. The loss of 1,400 soldiers is a significant one, and it is a reminder of the cost of the war. The British authorities are doing everything possible to bring the war to a speedy conclusion, and to bring the soldiers home.

Malta's Bag
July 5. (Associated Press.)—The British forces on Malta have received a large quantity of supplies from the British authorities. The supplies include food, clothing, and other necessities. The British authorities are doing everything possible to support the British forces on Malta, and to ensure that they have everything they need to continue the fight. # India's Industrial Expansion

THE ARSENAL OF THE EAST

New Wing To Officers' Club Opened

The new wing of the Sunday Post Officers' Club in Mombasa, Nairobi, was opened yesterday afternoon by the General Officer Commanding, British East Africa.

The Governor, Sir Robert Buxton, presided at the opening ceremony. He said that the new wing was a very important addition to the club and that it would be a great help to the officers and their families.

The new wing consists of a dining room, a bar, and a lounge. It is a very modern and comfortable place and will be a great help to the officers and their families.

E. A. Command Casualties

The list of E. A. Command casualties for the month of June is as follows: ...

The remarkable expansion in India's industrial capacity of capacity since the beginning of the war, has been the subject of comment in many parts of the world. The features of this expansion, and the extent to which it has taken place, are described in the Indian Government Trade Commissioner in East Africa.

A great increase in India's output—steel is an example—has gone hand in hand with growing indigenous industries and new processes. The steel industry has been particularly successful in this regard.

The possibility of ending India's dependence on foreign steel is a possibility which is being actively pursued. This is being done through the expansion of the steel industry in India.

Training Africans for Posts In "Communications"

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT)

In a thoughtful and well-considered report on the progress of the training of African telegraphists and radio operators, the East African Standard writes: "The importance of the communications link in the modern world has been widely recognized and the need for a well-trained staff to man the various posts has become a matter of course. In Africa, where the need for such a staff is particularly acute, the East African Standard has been able to obtain a number of interesting facts regarding the training of African telegraphists and radio operators."

In Uganda, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1936, the progress has been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

In Kenya, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1937, the progress has also been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

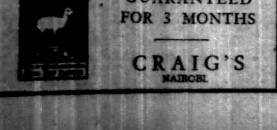

In Tanganyika, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1938, the progress has also been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

In Malawi, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1939, the progress has also been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

In Northern Rhodesia, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1940, the progress has also been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

In Southern Rhodesia, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1941, the progress has also been rapid. The school, which is now under the supervision of the Director of Communications, has produced a number of well-trained operators who are now employed in various posts throughout the country. The school is now being expanded to include a course in radio telephony, and it is expected that a number of well-trained radio operators will be available in the near future.

In Nyasaland, where the first school for African telegraphists was opened in 1942, the progress has also been rapid. # Problems Of A Second Front

INVASION OF THE CONTINENT AS "THE STAFF" SEES IT

(Special Correspondent)

London, July 2.—Probably the enemy's task too—is discussed in the prospect of a British invasion of the continent this summer. Many are pressing for it now—immediately. The desirability of such an invasion is nowhere disputed: many people are even talking of the shadow of this coming event in the freemasonry of the streets.

The question, however, is a deep one and there are many and varied considerations to be taken into account. One of the foremost military writers, Capt. Liddell Hart, recently gave an analysis of the situation for the benefit of the layman, in the Daily Mail.

"The question that is an ever-ready topic of conversation," he wrote, "is whether we should have a second front in Europe. When we get into the autumn of 1942 we shall have some very definite ideas as to what we should do to take the initiative and to force the Germans to fight on our terms. It is a matter of time before we shall have a second front in Europe."

It is equally clear that the best way to meet the needs of the present is to create a strategic reserve of troops in the Mediterranean region. This is a matter of time before we shall have a second front in Europe.

SUMMER OFFENSIVE

Adverse weather has been a factor when the Axis made a series of discouraging attacks, but probably have to give ground and be prepared to face a series of discouraging attacks. We are sure that the Summer Offensive is more than a few weeks old; that opinion and the progressive nature of the energy forces have remained the same and that it may be true to say as a result of the unsuccessful campaign last autumn and during the winter on the eastern front, that it is unable to put in the field again the same high proportion of trained and seasoned troops, but there is no evidence of any such thing. It is possible that they will be equipped with a few of their weight in Egypt and on the eastern front, but the German Army in the Khazkov-British Sector. The loss of the Eastern Front in the Khazkov-British Sector is not yet over for maximum support for the summer offensive. It is possible that they will be equipped with a few of their weight in Egypt and on the eastern front, but the German Army in the Khazkov-British Sector. The loss of the Eastern Front in the Khazkov-British Sector is not yet over for maximum support for the summer offensive.

A "Galling" Situation

It is a galling situation, but there is no evidence of any such thing. It is possible that they will be equipped with a few of their weight in Egypt and on the eastern front, but the German Army in the Khazkov-British Sector. ## Help for GASTRITIS VICTIMS

The great problems in gastritis and other digestive disturbances is how to rest the sick stomach and still nourish the exhausted body.

Solid food is out of the question. Even easy liquid foods irritate the stomach lining and cause pain and vomiting. There is a food, however, which actually soothes the inflamed stomach. It is Horlicks. Doctors recommend it in all cases of severe digestive trouble because it is so easily assimilated and so highly nutritious.

Horlicks is a complete food in itself. It also rebuilds the weak stomach, restores the lost appetite, opens the bowels and restores the impoverished bloodstream. Your usual chemist or store sells Horlicks. Get a supply today.

He said that the secretary's position in the Society was that of Hon. Secretary, and that he was not a member of the Council.

There were several passages in the course of the cross-examination, when Council objected to the way in which the secretary had been questioned, and the president of the Society was obliged to intervene.

The Council then adjourned until the next day, when the secretary was again questioned, and the president of the Society was again obliged to intervene.

Why does Ovaltine give Sleep of the Best Kind?
Because Ovaltine is the only food that is so rich in vitamins and minerals, and so easy to digest, that it makes you sleep peacefully and refreshingly, so that you wake completely refreshed.

Why is Ovaltine Sleep Restoring?
Ovaltine possesses special nutritive properties which restore and build up the entire system while you sleep.

Why does Ovaltine possess Nervine-Restoring Properties?
These properties are largely due to the egg used in its manufacture. Obviously no food beverage can be fairly nerve-restoring unless this property is derived from its ingredients.

LULL IN EGYPT

Rommel's Forces Main Very Cautious

Axis halt in front of the 8th Army's positions at El Alamein now a week old and for some days there has been a lull in the pace of the enemy's thrusts. Artillery duels have frequent and the British air offensive has been dead, night and day, at a fierce, non-stop tempo. It is the German command has been using this lull to reorganize and reorganize its forces in the area.

Reports pointed out that the lull was not a sign of a general retreat from the front, but a sign of a general reorganization of the Axis forces. The German command has been using this lull to reorganize and reorganize its forces in the area.

"The Nelson Touch"

BRILLIANT AND AUDACIOUS EXPLOIT OF SUBMARINE V.C.

British Lt. Comdr. V.E. Commander Anthony Cecil Cappel Myers, D.S.O., V.C., in a submarine commander, who played the "Nelson Touch" in a small order, while carrying out his duties in the British Navy. This enterprise was undertaken with full knowledge of the great hazards to be encountered during the work in waters closely patrolled by the enemy.

The submarine was in a heavily-defended harbour when the Commander received the recall order, but he went on with his dangerous job and replied: "I am relieved to find that the recall order does not conflict with the present situation."

The Torpedo had followed an Axis convoy into the harbour and, once inside, the submarine had to surface in brilliant moonlight to recharge the batteries. The submarine was then ordered to sink two enemy ships and ran the gauntlet of planes, warships and depth charges to make a triumphal escape through a restricted channel.

Twenty three other awards went to the officers and men of the Torpedo.

It was reported on June 15 that H.M.S. Submarine Torpedo had returned to the base after having sunk an enemy harbour where she was shot at, and almost certainly sunk, 3,000 tons of enemy ships. The Torpedo had, previously, sunk 20,000 tons of enemy ships.

Germany's Newest Battleship Hit TIRPITZ SERIOUSLY DAMAGED BY RUSSIAN SUBMARINE

QUT in the Arctic waters of the Barents Sea a Russian submarine has torpedoed and badly damaged the German battleship Tirpitz. Two torpedoes hit the 35,000-ton battleship. For the last two days the German navy has been attacking submarines against an Allied force which is operating in the Barents Sea.

The note for such a convoy would be sent to the Tirpitz by the German High Command. The Tirpitz was launched in 1939 and has been known for some time as the most powerful battleship in the world. It was built in Germany, half way up the coast of Norway, and is said to have been built in a secret place.

Admiral's Attack The Tirpitz together with two other cruisers and a protecting force of six destroyers, was expected to be in the area of the Barents Sea. The Tirpitz was the only one of the Tirpitz class to be damaged. It was damaged by a Russian submarine. The Tirpitz was damaged by a Russian submarine. WOMANSHIP—MARRIAGE of women.

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard":
 I am a married woman and I am writing to you to express my views on the subject of woman's position in the home and in the world. I believe that woman's position should be such that she is able to contribute to the welfare of her family and to the progress of the world. I believe that woman should be educated and trained to do the same work as men, and that she should be able to support herself and her family. I believe that woman should be able to vote and to hold office, and that she should be able to participate in the government of her country. I believe that woman should be able to do all the things that men can do, and that she should be able to do them as well as men. I believe that woman should be able to stand on her own feet, and that she should be able to support herself and her family. I believe that woman should be able to do all the things that men can do, and that she should be able to do them as well as men. I believe that woman should be able to stand on her own feet, and that she should be able to support herself and her family.
