Kenya bans a betting shops from today

Leading bookmakers in Nairobi and other towns were last night arranging to close their offices and lay off workers. Some indicated that they might have to close down altogether, as it would not be economical to operate only on two or three Kenya race meetings a month.

Another gambling ban came into force last night since gaming machines in private clubs and other premises throughout the country had to cease operations in accordance with an earlier Government decision.

Many clubs reported a last-minute rush of customers, seeking to win the jackpot from the "one armed bandits" before they were removed from the premises.

It is stated yesterday on the betting shops ban, Mr. Mutai said that a few businessmen in large towns had become prosperous from the shops.

The Government's "ban on licences means that bookmakers may now only operate on race courses in Kenya. They will conduct no business in their offices which will be closed to the public — and will have no further interest in overseas racing.

Until now, the bulk of bookmakers' business has been concerned with overseas racing, mainly in Britain.

Painters spend their last day at a Nairobi betting shop. In future they will have to go to race meetings if they want to bet on a horse.

Federal Nigeria strips Red Cross of relief role in war

The Nigerian Federal Government yesterday stripped the International Committee of the Red Cross of its co-ordinating role in helping victims of the civil war and laid down strict new rules for all relief agencies operating in Nigeria.

But the all-Swiss committee depends entirely on Nigeria, since its planes, which had not flown to Biafra for nearly three weeks, were to fly through Nigerian airspace.

Mr. Enahoro accused the Biafrans of hoarding arms under the cover of mercy flights.

Mr. Enahoro warned: "Unless relief agencies can control their functions who engage in political publicity, it will be impossible to re-organise relief supplies on a basis satisfactory to the Federal Government."

Mr. Tshombe dies in detention 'HEART ATTACK'

The former Congolese Premier, Moïse Tshombe, aged 49, died of a heart attack on Sunday night in a secret residence somewhere near Algiers it was announced yesterday.

Announcing his death, the Algerian Press service quoted a medical statement which said Mr. Tshombe, who was under restriction by the Algerian authorities, appeared to have died in his sleep.

Mr. Tshombe died precisely two years after the charter plane in which he was flying to Rome was whisked over the Mediterranean and forced to land at Algiers.

Mr. Tshombe's abduction there had been a number of acts of sabotage in various parts of the Congo and in the Congo Government.

Mr. Tshombe had set up a break-away State between 1960 and 1963. He was arrested in the Congo shortly after the U.N. troops took over the key towns in Katanga in January, 1963. He returned to the Congo in 1964, to become Prime Minister of the Congo with responsibility for foreign affairs, planning, foreign trade and information.

After elections in April, 1965, in which all the Congolese Government was subsequently proved, Mr. Tshombe's Government was dissolved by President Kasavubu in October, 1965, and replaced by an administration headed by Mr. Lumumba.

Mr. Tshombe had left the Congo shortly after the U.N. troops took over the key towns in Katanga in January, 1963. He returned to the Congo in 1964, to become Prime Minister of the Congo with responsibility for foreign affairs, planning, foreign trade and information.

Mr. Tshombe was arrested when he was travelling but was subsequently released. He was later arrested again and held in detention.

The picture shows the committee chairman, Mr. Martin Agunda (right), making the cheque presentation to the national executive officer of the council, Mr. Z. Otieno. Also in the picture is the acting principal of Embu Institute of Agriculture, Mr. Peter Kamau, who collected the TV set. The presentations were made at Salvation Army headquarters, Nairobi.

Three years for stabbing over money

A man who stabbed another man after he had refused to give him money to buy tea was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by a Nairobi magistrate, Mr. F. E. Nichols, yesterday for assault causing bodily harm. It was alleged that on June 8, at Pumwani, Nairobi, Haji Ngabo assaulted Mr. Talib Mohamed by stabbing him three times with a knife. Mr. Mohamed told the court he went into a hotel and while he was there, Ngabo came in and asked him to go out, as he had something to tell him. Mr. Mohamed refused and told Ngabo to tell him in the hotel. Ngabo demanded some money to buy tea, because we are both Muslims and you can help me as nobody else is here. When Mr. Mohamed replied that he had no money, Ngabo became very angry and struck him on the head with a stick. Mr. Mohamed got hold of the stick and Ngabo took a knife from his coat pocket and started stabbing Mr. Mohamed on the neck, chest and abdomen. When he saw Mr. Mohamed bleeding, he ran away but was chased and caught by people. In his judgment, Mr. Nichols said there was no reason to doubt Mr. Mohamed on the question of who struck the first blow. He appeared to be a truthful witness and he accepted his version of what occurred and that he used Ngabo's stick to defend himself. He added that there might have been an element of provocation, but this was not a defence and the matter could be taken into account in mitigation. In mitigation, Ngabo said he was married with six children and he was the only supporter of the family. He claimed that Mr. Mohamed struck him first. He never had any intention of assaulting him but was only defending himself.

EDUCATIONAL NEED STRESSED

Students had that energy which development needed. Immediate reference would be to that which some had called "student power". They were capable of wielding that "power" if they were organized, with a sense of purpose. The paper advised: "Indeed, it may be noted in passing that most of the concerted efforts which students have hitherto made failed because the students have never clearly conceived the implications of their vocation to society." They had not given sufficient thought to the necessity to analyse society and to plan their actions in the context of that analysis.

Standard Staff Reporter: Money to fill man's pocket. One more factor is required — and that is human solidarity or brotherhood," the paper says.

Another paper on "The role of African students in the struggle for development", states that, given the preconditions of a critical awareness of society, students would become better placed to involve themselves in the development struggle.

The paper says that man also needs education so that he might see the importance of maintaining his health, and might be able to contribute intelligently towards his own good.

Literacy was a fundamental factor for social integration, because in an enriched society it made life meaningful for mankind.

Besides material needs, there were many other reasons why there was a need for development in spiritual and moral aspects. Mere economic growth was not meaningful unless it went hand in hand with spiritual development.

"Development does not just mean buildings, journeys to the Moon and Mars, or just plenty of money to fill man's pocket. One more factor is required — and that is human solidarity or brotherhood," the paper says.

Took tarpaulin—five years

A man who stole a tarpaulin tied to a parked car was yesterday sentenced to five years' imprisonment by a Nairobi magistrate, Mr. P. N. Tank. It was alleged that on January 23 John Mutua Mutoto stole the tarpaulin, valued at £35, from a car belonging to Mr. Mohamed Sawar, who told the court that he parked his car outside his house at 11.30 p.m. covered by the tarpaulin. The next morning, when he went to the car at 8.30 a.m., the tarpaulin was missing. He reported the matter to Kamukuni Police Station where he was shown a tarpaulin which he identified as his. Giving judgment, Mr. Tank said he was satisfied that the accused was found in possession of the tarpaulin at the time of arrest. Sentencing Mutoto, who had 12 relevant previous convictions, Mr. Tank said he had a poor record, and it appeared that he was a hard-core criminal.

'Gaining ground' in farm co-operation REVIEW NEEDED

There was a glaring gap in communications between the three East African countries as far as farm co-operation in the agricultural sector were concerned.

This was the general consensus of opinion among 50 delegates from the three East African countries who attended a conference on farm co-operation in Nairobi.

A statement by the conference secretary, Mr. L. D. Smith, stated that the conference was not designed to formulate concrete recommendations but rather to discuss the various points which emerged from the week's proceedings.

The theme of the conference was "Farm co-operation in East African agriculture" and a considerable amount of attention was given to the various points which emerged from the week's proceedings.

ing from each other's mistakes in promoting mechanization. Further, there are examples of lack of co-operation between the research workers and the extension staff in implementing their recommendations, although it should be noted that the extension staff in the Kileleshwa research workers and the extension staff in an exception to this.

"Third, we still do not have enough information on why some farmers take up innovations while others do not.

"However, it is obvious that the discussion of various details at the conference will lead to much more research in this field in which the extension staff and the research workers will play an active part.

"There is an urgent need to review the functions of the extension services in all the three countries and to find ways of evaluating their contribution to agricultural development. It was recognized that given the right environment the commercial sector could contribute much more to this than it does at the moment.

"Finally, it was appreciated that much more attention must be paid to the rural extension staff. Farmers are persuaded to adopt the declared aims of the three nations."

High standard set at Kenya Music Festival

Performances in all classes at the Kenya Music Festival, being staged at the Talia Hall, University College, Nairobi, have been of a high standard and the attendance has been good in spite of the fact that the competition is being staged during working days.

This comment was made yesterday by the festival's national chairman, Mr. Eric Khasakha, after the first day of the festival, which opened on Monday.

The great support was reflected by the number of university students and traditional dancers who had come from remote parts of the country for the competition.

It was regrettable, however, that African entries in the solo piano class had been few. He blamed this on insufficient local qualified teachers and also on the lack of funds to encourage them further.

The Ministry of Education would take steps to correct this soon, he said.

The festival's national organizing secretary, Mr. Wambua, appealed for a greater African turnout. It was regrettable that the competition was taking place in working hours, but time could surely be spared over weekends.

The chief adjudicator for English set pieces, Mr. H. J. McTear, commented that the competition was moving on very well with high standards of performance and a lot of public support. "This being the first time I have adjudicated in Kenya, I must say that it is the best and happiest adjudication tour I have made overseas."

He thought, however, the attendance at the festival in Nairobi had been lower than that he had witnessed when he travelled to Kisumu for the Western Kenya Music Festival.

Last Saturday, the Alliance Club High School displayed unusual interest in the festival, with the highest marks so far in this year's competition.

Strict security as U.S. special envoy arrives

Governor Rockefeller of New York has arrived in Buenos Aires amid unprecedented security precautions and was yesterday meeting Argentine ministers for talks on relations between the two countries.

Duties of police were on guard as Mr. Rockefeller arrived within an hour at Ezeiza International Airport, 25 miles west of the city, on the last leg of his Latin-America fact-finding tour as President Nixon's special envoy.

The entire police force of 15,000 men was mobilised in Buenos Aires to prevent incidents and about 200 police and air force men, some armed with machine-guns, were on hand at the city airport to which Mr. Rockefeller flew after changing planes at Ezeiza.

Police also lined the route as Mr. Rockefeller was driven from the city airport to his hotel. Other police guarded the hotel and ringed a square in front of it. The security measures were put into force following widespread demonstrations last week against his visit.

Rumania trip 'surprising'

The announcement of President Nixon's forthcoming Rumanian visit is "the most surprising event to have occurred recently on the international political scene", the Yugoslav Socialist Alliance daily paper Pravda declared in Belgrade yesterday.

"In the context of the present situation in Eastern Europe", the paper said, the visit looks on "the dimensions of a considerable international event."

President Nixon's decision to go to Rumania was the result of circumstances that were "certainly not of chance". It went on: "On the one side, there is the desire, clearly expressed by Rumania, to be directly represented in the East-West dialogue and not by an intermediary."

"On the other side, there is the interest shown by America in achieving direct contact at the highest level with a member of the Warsaw Pact which, moreover, gives evidence of considerable independence, both within and outside the pact."

visits and attacks on American-owned installations including a chain of supermarkets belonging to a Rockefeller corporation.

In an airport statement, Mr. Rockefeller called for joint efforts to secure human justice on the basis of economic and social progress.

He claimed there were forces trying to split the U.S. and Latin America and said: "We cannot take understanding and unity between our nations and our peoples for granted."

The Presidential envoy yesterday met Argentina's Foreign Minister, Mr. Juan Domingo, for talks on Argentina's development plan, world and western hemisphere affairs and international co-operation.

Later Mr. Rockefeller was calling on President Juan Carlos Onganía at Government House before meeting private, industrial, commercial and agricultural representatives. He is due to leave early today for the Caribbean, where he is scheduled to visit Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Guyana and Barbados before returning to New York on Sunday.

In Santo Domingo, the Dominican President, Mr. Joaquin Balaguer, has told objections to Mr. Rockefeller's forthcoming visit that it is due to be beneficial to the country and that he intends to receive him "with open arms".

Anti-Rockefeller slogans have already begun to appear on walls in preparation for the American envoy's visit later and police have been patrolling the capital to guard against possible incidents.

On Saturday, two bombs badly damaged the headquarters of the National Telephone Company in what Government officials regarded as a demonstration of hostility to Mr. Rockefeller's trip.

Village swept away by floods

At least 17 people died and a village disappeared in floods which swept Soanai Island in East Indonesia last week, Antara news agency reported yesterday.

Antara said local officials reported that Soanai Village had been swept away by the flood waters and disappeared without trace.

Nine civilians hurt in Vietcong rocket attack

Nine civilians were wounded when the Vietcong fired three rockets into Saigon early yesterday — the sixth such attack against the capital last month.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said the 122mm missiles landed in a populated area near the Government Airborne Division headquarters, three miles north-west of the city centre.

North Vietnamese troops on Sunday caused their pressure on the besieged Ben Het outpost in the Central Highlands. Only 20 shells hit the post, compared with 53 the day before and a record 236 on Friday.

A U.S. military spokesman said the fire was from 75mm recoilless rifles and indicated that North Vietnamese mortar and rocket-grenade teams had moved out of range of the camp.

SPACE MONKEY GOING STRONG

America's orbiting monkey, Bonny, whirled through space in a state of near weightlessness yesterday as Earth-bound scientists kept a ceaseless watch on his performance.

With the mission entering its second day, officials at Cape Kennedy said they were happy with the spacecraft and its passenger.

The 14th, Thailand-born monkey was launched into orbit on Saturday on a 30-day mission to discover the effects of prolonged space flight on a primate.

He is dressed in a smart nylon spacesuit and medical sensors implanted into his heart, brain and muscles are relaying a constant stream of data back to Earth.

The project manager, Mr. Charles Wilson, said the data so far was stable and of fine quality, and carrying out set tasks including matching up symbols to test his memory. "All spacecraft systems are performing as expected and the spacecraft is in a nominal orbit," said Mr. Wilson.

It is hoped that Bonny's mission will provide much data of value to future astronauts embarking on planetary missions or manning orbiting space stations for long periods of time.

In manned space flights lasting up to two weeks doctors have noticed a number of harmful changes — none of them harmful which wear off a few days after the astronauts return to Earth.

240 SA AFTER DRAM

About 240 Canadian volunteers who returned after a mid-Atlantic drift were being flown to Ireland after spending in various hotels.

Their plane, a giant Pacific DC-8 on a charter flight organised by Toronto Hygiene, returned to Shannon on an engine failed 600 miles off Ireland.

The pilot, Capt. (46) of Vancouver, B.C., said an engine struck, hit the fuselage and struck the tailfin.

One of the passengers, a contractor, Mr. J. J. Walland, Ontario, heard an awful bang when the plane came off and he was thrown about two hours on a stretcher.

Another passenger, a nurse, said: "It was a frightening experience. The pilot was in control of the accident and he was well."

John Simpson, Margaret Hospital, Toronto, said: "I heard a sound as if the aircraft was falling. I don't know what happened."

All the passengers were available for interviews with the Toronto Star. It was a shocking experience, there was no panic in the aircraft. All the passengers were well.

When first news of the crash was received, a full page was dispatched to escort the plane to Shannon.

Strict security as U.S. special envoy arrives

Governor Rockefeller of New York has arrived in Buenos Aires amid unprecedented security precautions and was yesterday meeting Argentine Ministers for talks on relations between the two countries.

Dozens of police were on guard as Mr. Rockefeller arrived without incident at Ezeiza International Airport, 25 miles west of the city, on the last leg of his Latin-American fact-finding tour as President Nixon's special envoy.

The entire police force of 15,000 men was mobilized in Buenos Aires to prevent incidents and about 200 police and air force men, some armed with machine-guns, were on hand at the city airport to which Mr. Rockefeller flew after changing planes at Ezeiza.

Police also lined the route as Mr. Rockefeller was driven from the city airport to his hotel. Other police guarded the hotel and lined a square in front of it. The security measures were put into force following widespread demonstrations last week against his visit.

visit and attacks on American-owned installations including a chain of supermarkets belonging to a Rockefeller corporation.

In an airport statement, Mr. Rockefeller called for joint efforts to secure human justice on the basis of economic and social progress.

He claimed there were forces trying to split the U.S. and Latin America and said: "We cannot take understanding and unity between our nations and our peoples for granted."

The Presidential envoy yesterday met Argentine's Foreign Minister, Mr. Jose Nisman, for talks on Argentina's development plans, world and western hemisphere affairs and international co-operation.

Later Mr. Rockefeller was calling on President Juan Carlos Onganía at Government House before meeting private, industrial, commercial and agricultural representatives. He is due to leave early today for the Caribbean, where he is scheduled to visit Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Guyana and Barbados before returning to New York on Sunday.

Rumania trip 'surprising'

The announcement of President Nixon's forthcoming Rumanian tour is the most surprising visit to have occurred recently on the international political scene, the Yugoslav Socialist Alliance daily paper Pravda declared in Belgrade yesterday.

In the context of the present situation in Eastern Europe, the paper said, the visit took on the dimensions of a considerable international event.

President Nixon's decision to go to Rumania was the result of circumstances that were certainly not to be expected. It went on: "On the one side, there is the desire, clearly expressed by Rumania, to be directly represented on the East-West dialogue and not by an intermediary."

On the other side is the interest shown by America in achieving direct contact at the highest level with a member of the Warsaw Pact which has never given evidence of considerable independence both within and outside the pact.

At least 17 people died and a village disappeared in floods which swept through southern East Indonesia last week. Antara news agency reported yesterday.

Antara and local officials reported that Swaga Village had been swept away by the flood waters and disappeared without trace.

Nine civilians hurt in Vietcong rocket attack

Nine civilians were wounded when the Vietcong fired three rockets into Saigon early yesterday — the sixth such attack against the capital last month.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said the 12mm missiles landed in a populated area near the Government Airborne Division headquarters, three miles northwest of the city centre.

Sunday eased their pressure on the besieged Ben Het outpost in the Central Highlands. Only 20 shells hit the post, compared with 43 the day before and a record 236 on Friday.

A U.S. military spokesman said the fire was from 75mm recoilless rifles and indicated that North Vietnamese mortar and rocket-crews had moved out of range of the camp.

The spokesman said the shelling caused no casualties among the 250 Americans at the camp and only light casualties among the irregular militia Garrison of some 500 Vietnamese Montagnard hill tribesmen.

Six similar attacks were made during Sunday night throughout South Vietnam, the spokesman said. In one of these five, 107mm rockets hit the U.S. Marine combat base at Dong Ha, 14 miles south of the Demilitarized Zone, but caused only light casualties.

American B-52 bombers kept up their daily pounding of North Vietnamese positions near Ben Het, and about 900 tons of bombs were dropped in five missions on Sunday. The giant planes have flown more than 100 missions in support of the lonely outpost since it came under siege on May 6.

This outpost has now become the focal point in a trial of strength between the armies of North and South Vietnam. Americans believe that, at a time when South Vietnamese combat troops are gradually replacing Americans, Hanoi has set out to prove that Saigon soldiers are no match for its own regulars.

Ben Het was selected for a showdown when most American troops pulled out and South Vietnam took over responsibility for the rolling mountains adjoining Laos and Cambodia last February. Some 4,000 North Vietnamese took up positions around the camp which clings to the top of a steep hill.

SPACE MONKEY GOING STRONG

America's 'loving monkey, Benny' whirled through space in a late of near weightlessness yesterday as Earth-bound scientists kept a close watch on his performance.

With the mission entering its second day, officials at Cape Kennedy said they were happy with the spacecraft and its passenger.

The 11½ lb. Highland-born monkey was launched into orbit on Saturday on a 30-day mission to discover the effects of prolonged zero gravity on a primate.

It is hoped that Benny's mission will provide much data of value to future astronauts embarking on planetary missions in returning orbiting space stations for long periods of time.

In ground-based flight, being up to two weeks, divers have sorted a number of physical changes — many of them harmful — which wear out a few days after the astronaut returns to Earth.

The monkey is owned by Mr. Charles Wilson, said the data...

240 SAFETY AFTER A DRAMA

About 240 Canada-bound travellers who returned to Toronto after a mid-Atlantic air tragedy being flown to Toronto today after spending the night in various hotels.

Their plane, a giant Canadian Pacific DC-8 on a non-charter flight, organised by Toronto Hygiene Society, turned to Shannon Airport, an engine failed 600 miles off Ireland.

The pilot, Capt. Neil (46) of Vancouver, British Columbia, said an engine coughed off, but the fuselage does not strack the tailfin.

One of the passengers, Mr. Edward Hill of Walland, Ontario, said he heard an awful bang as the wing came off and hit the tail.

This was frightening, we about two hours out of Toronto. I am real glad we've again safely.

His wife, Edith, said: "I am real glad we've again safely."

Another passenger, Dr. John Simpson of Toronto, said: "It was a shocking experience as no one in the plane was hurt."

The passengers were sent to available hotels within 60 (65 kms) of Limerick, where aircraft was being sent to Amsterdam to fly them.

When first news of the crash was received, a full emergency was declared. An RCAF search plane was dispatched to escort the plane.

Somalia looks to rove in East Africa

July 1, 1960, saw the birth of the Somali Republic. The years since then have seen a five-year plan designed to help the new nation reach its economic and social goals, and the start of a three-year plan aimed to further the development already attained. The following review of the Republic's progress over the past nine years was supplied by the Somali Embassy in Nairobi.

Nine years ago, in 1960, the Somali Republic was born. Before achieving political stability and consolidation, the Somali people and Government had a nation geared their efforts towards the development of their country in the social and economic fields, courageously facing the existence of inherited problems.

In order to reach the economic and social goals of the nation, the first Five Year Plan was published in July, 1963. An appraisal of the achievements at the end of the Plan showed that in many fields, such as the basic physical and social infrastructure, the construction of roads, seaports, airports, schools and hospitals, significant progress has been made.

This Plan expired in 1967 and the new Somali Government, which took office on the same year, reviewed and decided to embark upon a short-term development programme, the creation of basic conditions necessary for the implementation and achievement of the long-term development programme of a more ambitious nature.

More specifically the objectives of the present Three Year Plan are: (a) completion of on-going projects including the physical construction of those under construction or negotiation and the successful operation of others.

(b) Introduction of basic structural changes in the administration set up with a view to gear it to the needs of development. (c) Closing the existing budgetary gap and the mobilisation of more domestic resources for development.

Besides the implementation of developmental measures of the Government programme, to integrate the economy of Somalia into the wider African economy, which is based on an attitude born out of recent political and other trends in the region, the creation of wider economic groupings all over Africa in the post five years, an awareness of the

Mr. S. AHMED. Somalia was not only confined to high level meetings. Meetings of regional and district officials of the two countries were held and it is at this level that solutions to many local problems could be found and co-operation strengthened.

The visit to Somalia of a Kenyan Parliamentary delegation to participate in the celebration of the ninth anniversary of our independence, together with the visit to Kenya early this year of a Somali football team and the Kenyan football team's current tour in Somalia, contribute immensely to the policy of fraternal contacts, because it is the desire of both Governments that Kenya and Somalia should be given every opportunity to visit each other's country.

Politics and influence law says Mr. Njonjo

Standard Staff Reporter
Political considerations played no part in decisions on whether or not to prosecute in particular Kenya's Attorney-General, Mr. Njonjo, emphasised in Parliament last night.

Red Cross criticises arms suppliers

The International Committee of the Red Cross yesterday criticised the arms suppliers of the Nigerian intervention in the civil war in Biafra.

was his and he had never been put under any pressure by Government colleagues in any matter.

Mr. Njonjo was replying to a debate on the motion for the adjournment which had been moved by the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Odinga asking about "freedom of press" observed in certain cases.

The Attorney-General observed that the mover had had ample opportunity to observe at close quarters the impartial application of the principles governing decisions on prosecution.

He recalled three specific occasions:

1. — When Mr. Odinga was returning to Kenya via Namanga with a driver and a man named Peter Ochieng (who was later sentenced to 4½ years' imprisonment for being in possession of subversive documents) a sum of £200 was found in the car which was never claimed.

2. — On April 1, last year, police found an unlicensed pistol and ammunition in premises rented by Mr. Odinga. No prosecution arose because there was no sufficient evidence to connect any person with the gun.

3. — On several occasions Mr. Odinga had been suspected of holding a political meeting which was not licensed; one or more of these occasions was also a funeral.

Mr. Njonjo commented that he did not initiate prosecutions on "mere suspicion". A prosecution was not always in the public interest.

Moving the motion, Mr. Odinga told the House that many stateless persons and a world television audience estimated at 500,000,000.

At the height of the ceremony Prince Charles approached the Queen, bowed deeply three times, and knelt on a cushion. She placed a crown on his head, bestowed on him an ermine-trimmed cape and a sword.

Only the sound of seagulls could be heard as Prince Charles said in a clear voice: "I, Charles, Prince of Wales, do become your liege man of life and limb and earthly worship and faith and truth I will bear unto you to live and die against all manner of folk."

The Prince then took his place at the right of Her Majesty to receive the loyal declarations of the Welsh people.

The Prince of Wales then promised in Welsh and then in English to live up to the demands and responsibilities placed upon him.

The casino now being built in Nairobi will not be affected by the ban on betting shops, but will be "out of bounds" to civil servants, members of the armed forces and people of low income.

This ruling was given yesterday by the chairman of the Betting and Gaming Control Board, Mr. J.M. Karuki.

Mr. Karuki added that stipulations in the agreement between the Government and the owners of the proposed casino were designed in such a manner as to make it impossible for local people to "game" there.

500m. watch investiture of new Prince of Wales

Prince Charles, heir to the British Throne, was yesterday invested as Prince of Wales by his mother, Queen Elizabeth, at a ceremony in Caernarvon watched by 4,000 distinguished guests and a world television audience estimated at 500,000,000.

Militant Welsh nationalists did everything they could to prevent the arrival of Prince of Wales by a motorcade.

COMMANDO BASES RAIDED BY ISRAEL

Israeli aircraft raided several Arab commando bases in Jordanian territory early yesterday, an army spokesman announced in Tel Aviv.

The planes bombed and strafed bases in the Ardan, Wadi Shueib and Shumeth Nurmar area, the spokesman said. All the planes returned safely to their bases.

During the night Egyptian artillery and automatic weapons opened up several times across the Suez Canal at various points.

An Israeli spokesman said Israeli positions replied to the fire. One Israeli soldier and one Israeli civilian were wounded in the exchanges.

have been recognised by the United Nations Secretary-General under its terms, no one party could denounce it unilaterally.

The spokesman said Eusebian-made sub-machine guns, hand grenades and other arms were found near their bodies.

President Charles Helou said in Beirut that the decision to alter its territory to be used as a base for acts of war against Israel was a "sensible" one.

The army, he said, respected the Amritie Agreement which banned the use of force to settle disputes.

Advocates to provide free legal aid

Standard Staff Reporter
A number of Mombasa advocates have started a free legal service for poor citizens, who are often defenceless who are unable to afford legal fees.

The president of the Mombasa Law Society, Mr. Sadiq Ghalla, said yesterday that he believed there were many criminal cases where in the interest of justice defendants should be represented.

When a person was, for example, charged with an extremely serious offence, he would be denied completely of his livelihood or liberty, or when a defendant had no money to pay for legal aid, the magistrate proposed to impose a heavy sentence, or when an application was made by the State for the enhancement of sentence, or in cases where the State had no funds to pay for legal aid.

Mr. Ghalla said he had advised the senior resident magistrate at Mombasa and the magistrate responsible for the Mombasa courts in Mombasa that the State should provide legal aid to all defendants who were unable to pay for legal aid.

President's message to Show

President Kenyatta has sent a message to the people of England on the occasion of the Royal Agricultural Show which opened at Stoneleigh yesterday.

The message, which will be prominently displayed under a large-size photograph of the President at the entrance of the Kenya Pavilion at the show, states:

"It is with great pleasure that my Government has accepted the invitation of the Royal Agricultural Society of England to participate in the 1969 Royal Show as a guest Commonwealth country.

"I am particularly gratified that Kenya should be the first Commonwealth country to be honoured in this way.

"I hope that the opportunity this will provide for many people in Britain to see something of the varied products and attractions which Kenya has to offer will further strengthen the ties between our two countries, which have survived so long and which continue to flourish at this time."

Yesterday the President presided over a Kana Parliamentary group meeting at Parliament Buildings, Nairobi.

The meeting, which ended with the singing of Kanu yajenga nchi, discussed group matters.

The President was greeted on arrival at Parliament Buildings by the leader of Government business, Mr. Moi, his deputy, Mr. P. Ngei, and several Members of Parliament, including the Speaker of the National Assembly, Mr. H. Slade.

On departure from Parliament Buildings, President Kenyatta was cheered by the Members who were shouting "Moto moto" and a large crowd of people who had lined the route opposite the Parliament Buildings.

YESTERDAY IN PARLIAMENT

Court case to solve Coast Kanu row

The Attorney-General, Mr. Njiru, suggested in Parliament yesterday that a High Court civil action might settle the Kanu dispute...

Mr. Njiru's statement came at the close of a heated session during Question Time when the Coast Kanu vice-president, Mr. Bunsil Njiru, who is the Minister for Cooperatives and Social Services...

The matter arose when Mr. Chillo (K.P.U.) asked Mr. Njiru if he was satisfied that the registration of the group led by Mr. Masim Juma had been carried out in a proper manner...

Mr. Njiru caused laughter by stating that it was strange for any Member to inquire about the propriety of the registration of a branch as opposed to questioning the internal affairs of a party.

Mr. Njiru added that he was aware that Kanu will be comfortable knowing that the K.P.U. has its well-earned status...

In reply to the first part of the question the answer is 'yes' and in reply to the second part I can say that as a result of an independent investigation into the circumstances of the election of officers of Kanu Mombasa branch, the Registrar of Societies and his deputy have concluded that Mr. Juma was in all respects properly elected...

Mr. Chillo then asked why there was 'chaos' if the registration had been done properly and Mr. Njiru said: 'I am interested only in the legality of the registration of this branch. I am not concerned with the internal running which are political. If the result meant one group being elected then the other group cannot be satisfied...'

appropriate activities the area concerned had been included in the President's Office. He continued to comment on the matter. He thought it would be better for the country to have a law which would require the Minister to make any portions of the national parks which played an important role in the development of tourism.

Mr. (D.K.S.) asked if the Attorney-General was aware that some people convicted of murder had been sentenced to death by the public and kept in such a state for the rest of their lives. Mr. Njiru said he was aware that certain people continued with their commission of their crimes. He reminded Mr. (D.K.S.) that stiffer sentences were given to people with previous convictions than were given to first offenders.

He added that penologists no longer believed there was such a thing as a 'hopeless case' and added that total segregation of some people from the public had been rejected years ago by all civilized countries.

Expatriates 'must be reduced'

When the debate on the Budget continued all appeal for a drastic reduction in the number of expatriates in Kenya was made by the Member for Nairobi-North Mbagathi, Mr. Kibuu. He said he knew of one white man who had been in the examination in London and of a Kenyan who had passed it yet these two doctors had reached the stage where the European was the doctor and the Kenyan was the patient.

Mr. Mbatia (Kauu, Malindi South) asked a string of 10 million-dollar Tsavo National Park was declared free for ranching and if the boundary of the park could be accordingly altered.

Mr. Mbatia (Kauu, Malindi South) said that after consultations with the Attorney-General, Mr. Njiru, he had concluded that the Government should be replaced with indirect taxation to generate more revenue for the country.

The Member for Kitivoaga West, Mr. J. N. Kibuu, said it would be unfortunate if the Government did not give grants to county councils big enough to cover the loss of revenue after the abolition of the 2 G.P.T. rate.

He said some Ministers were trying to use civil servants for their own political ends. Asked by a Member to substantiate his remarks, Mr. Kibuu said he was stopped from addressing a meeting in his constituency by a D.C. whereas a Permanent Secretary at the Ministry of Education was allowed to address a meeting in the area.

'No Opposition names' protest

If a Government-sponsored motion, of which notice was given yesterday, is passed then no Opposition Members will be placed on the Southern Committee.

The Minister for Power and Communications, Mr. Nyanweya, speaking on behalf of the Minister of Government Business, Mr. Mui, announced a list of names including 10 Cabinet Ministers. Also included were several Assistant Secretaries, Chief Whip and Kanu back-benchers.

Mr. Oloo-Sar (K.P.U. Ugunya) rose on a point of order to protest at the exclusion of Opposition names but was told by the Speaker that he would probably have his chance to voice his feelings when the matter was discussed.

The motion seeks to approve the appointment of Mr. Moi as chairman of the committee.

Attorney-General gives the facts

(Continued from Page 1) one in the negative, usually a prosecution follows. 'It is a cardinal principle of our criminal justice that an accused person is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty, and the burden to establish guilt beyond reasonable doubt is placed on the shoulders of the prosecution.'

'It is therefore before I direct that a person shall be put on trial for a specific offence there is sufficient evidence to warrant putting him on trial.'

'If a contrary to the public interest and to our conception of justice to put a man upon trial, whatever the suspicion may be about the matter, when the evidence is insufficient to justify his conviction, or even to require him to give an explanation.'

'So in an ordinary case I have to give you an explanation. I must tell you the nature and the quality of the evidence which is given to warrant a man being put on trial for a specific offence. I have to refer to the evidence which is given to warrant a man being put on trial for a specific offence.'

'The Hon. Member of the Opposition, has himself had ample opportunity to examine all the quarters the impartial application of these principles known of many cases in which I am referring to. I have to refer to the evidence which is given to warrant a man being put on trial for a specific offence.'

'I have explained. I do not insist prosecution upon mere suspicion. I also have to remember that it is not always in the eyes of the Government to accept every invitation to a prosecution.'

'There are other cases where wider considerations are involved. It is not always in the public interest to go through the whole process of a criminal prosecution. At the end of the day, perhaps because of extenuating circumstances, a defendant has already suffered a substantial penalty is likely to be imposed.'

'Sometimes, of course, the considerations may be wider still. Prosecution may involve a question of public policy or national policy. But in all such cases, I have to make up my mind, without regard to party politics, upon the effect of prosecution with regard to the public interest, law and Government in the abstract rather than in a party sense.'

'I would like to say, in my view, that it is the duty of the Attorney-General, in deciding whether or not to authorize a prosecution, to acquaint himself with all the relevant facts, including, for instance, the effect which the prosecution, successful or unsuccessful as the case may be, would have upon public morale and order, and with any other considerations affecting public policy.'

'In order to do this, the Attorney-General must be able to inform me, although I do not think I am obliged to consult with any of my colleagues in the Government. It would be, in some senses, a matter of internal discipline. On the other hand, the assistance of my colleagues is confined to informing me of particular considerations which might affect my own decision, but does not consist, and must not consist, in telling me what the decision ought to be.'

'It follows, therefore, that the final decision rests with me, and with me alone, and I am not to be put under any pressure by any pressure by any of my colleagues in any matter. Any attempt by any person to direct me would be a gross infringement of Section 26 (b) of the Constitution, which says clearly that the Attorney-General shall not be subject to the direction or control of any other person or authority in the question of public interest in relation to legal strikes. Nixon trip to Rumania

President Nixon's visit to Bucharest this week is not considered a major diplomatic move, but it is seen as a test of the Soviet Union's reaction to the announcement of the visit.

Soviet sources said that the Rumanian authorities had spoken only of an agreement in principle, about which the Soviet authorities had not given a final reply. The same source regarded the moment chosen by Bucharest for the announcement as a manoeuvre.

One theory advanced was that the Nixon visit to Bucharest was part of a diplomatic package deal with advantages for the Soviet Union which would appear later.

The Soviet Party newspaper Pravda shed no new light on Soviet reactions to the scheduled visit. It ran a short announcement of the visit and a detailed analysis of a pro-Soviet article in the Rumanian Party newspaper Scritura on the "indivisibility" of Rumanian-Soviet friendship.

The British Government was notified beforehand of President Nixon's visit to Rumania and five Asian countries, a Foreign Office spokesman said yesterday in London.

He did not say whether London had been consulted about the visit, or as it considered more likely, merely informed before the release of the official communiqué in Washington.

Authoritative British sources said President Nixon's visit had special importance in present international circumstances. Officials recalled that the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Stewart, visited Bucharest in September — only a few days after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The White House has confirmed that Saturday's itinerary for President Nixon's tour from July 23 to August 3 stands, and that he will not visit South Vietnam.

The spokesman said, "There is no plan at all for additional stops. The President will be on board the ship Hornet for the splash-out of Apollo-11 and will then visit the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, India, Pakistan and Rumania."

A newsmen asked the spokesman whether the U.S. planned a deal with the Soviet Union to "carve up" the world into zones of influence.

The spokesman replied: "No. The United States has never entered into any sphere-of-influence agreement with any nation anywhere in the world."

Apollo astronauts take tough medical tests

Apollo-11 astronauts faced their most stringent medical tests yet in preparation for their Moon-landing flight on Monday.

Each morning space doctors tested the three men, Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins, who are due to start their day mission to the Moon on Monday.

They also rehearsed the crucial blast-back of the surface and the rendezvous with the spaceship circling above.

Collins, who will remain in the module during the mission, spent the afternoon practicing docking the Apollo-11 from the Lunar module.

The three spacemen spent Monday in an Apollo-11 simulator rehearsing the launch into orbit, the flight to the Moon and the return into Lunar orbit.

While everything appeared to be in "go" condition for the lunar flight, America's space monkey Bonny was still whirling round the Earth, eating, drinking and sleeping normally.

Bonny was launched into orbit last Saturday on a 30-day mission for tests to help to determine the effects of weightlessness on a primate.

Sensors attached to his brain, heart and muscles are sending back data to space officials.

Astronaut Frank Borman, commander of the Apollo-8 around-the-Moon flight last December, has left New York for a nine-day unofficial visit to the Soviet Union.

The spaceman was accompanied by his wife, Susan, and son Frederick (17) and Edwin (15) on the flight.

The U.S. space agency said it would be the first time a U.S. astronaut had visited the Soviet Union.

Cmdr. Borman and his family were invited by the Institute of Soviet-American Relations in Moscow.

ARGENTINA

A state of sleep has been put into force throughout Argentina, the Interior Minister, Gen. Francisco Irujo, announced in Buenos Aires on Monday night.

The General, speaking on radio and television after an emergency meeting of the National Security Council, said that the decision had been taken in order to face an organized plan of subversion.

The announcement follows a series of demonstrations against the visiting U.S. presidential envoy, Mr. Nelson Rockefeller, and the assassination on Monday of a trade union leader, Mr. Augusto Vandor.

The trade union fight headed by Mr. Vandor had refused to take part in a general strike called for yesterday in protest at Mr. Rockefeller's visit.

The opposition union leader, Mr. Raimundo Ongaro, was arrested on Monday night at Cordoba.

During the night about 2,000 people, mostly workers, gathered silently in tribute to the deceased labour leader in front of the heavily guarded headquarters of the Metalworkers' Trade Union where his body is lying in state.

Unofficial figures said that 24 people had been killed throughout the country in the days of violence sparked off by the announcement of Mr. Rockefeller's visit. There were 20 dead in Cordoba alone. The number of injured was placed at several hundred.

The principal places where trouble took place were Tucuman, Santa Fe, Cordoba and Mar Del Plata. Explosions caused extensive damage in places and demonstrating students buried colleagues of Mr. Rockefeller.

It was not known what the trade unionists' reaction would be to the proclamation of the state of siege. But union sources recalled that Mr.

Soldier sets fire to himself

A South Vietnamese soldier sprinkled his clothes with petrol and set fire to himself in Saigon yesterday.

The soldier, Vo Van Be, was taken to hospital in a critical condition. He left a note saying his intention was in favour of peace in Vietnam.

Vo Van Be set fire to himself in front of the monument erected to the memory of Thich Quang Duc, the Buddhist priest who became the first person to choose this painful way of death in June, 1963.

He squatted down at the busy crossroads near the Cambodian Embassy, where the monument stands, threw his identity papers several yards away and then poured petrol over himself and set himself ablaze.

The U.S. Government has moved to slow a major loophole in national military service laws by asking the Supreme Court to review a Lower Court decision that a man who objects to serving in the Vietnam war on moral grounds cannot be drafted.

On April 1, a Boston Federal Court Judge, Mr. Charles E. Wyzanski, ruled that John H. Sison, 24, was entitled to deferment because he objected to serving in the Vietnam war on moral rather than on religious grounds.

The Supreme Court will decide in October whether to hear the Government appeal. — Agencies

OMEGA

The Omega Constellation

Truly one of the finest watches that has ever come out of Switzerland. To be rated as a Chronometer, the watch movement must undergo 360 hours of severe testing in a Swiss Institute for Official Chronometer Tests. Only movements that maintain high accuracy throughout all tests can be given a Chronometer Certificate. The Omega Constellation does better than that. Its certificate bears the endorsement "Especially Good Results" which is the highest commendation the Institute can give. Incidentally, Omega is now responsible for well over half of Switzerland's annual output of certified Chronometers.

Mr. Tshombe 'was to be freed'

The former Congolese Premier, Moïse Tshombe, who died at the weekend, was to have been ransomed from his captors in Algeria for $10,000,000 (about £1,325,000), early in July, according to an internationally-known arms dealer, Col. Hubert Julian.

"When Tshombe was first arrested he said 'I offered $1,000,000 for his release but it was refused. The price was then raised to $3,000,000 and then to $6,000,000 with $10,000,000 being finally agreed upon."

The Colonel had a $4,500,000 cheque from Product Promotion Company of New York made out to Black Eagle International Associates Inc. on which was written for the release of Moïse Tshombe. He also had an Anglo European insurance bond for $6,000,000.

"Tshombe was to have paid me back," he said. "He had quite a bit of money in Swiss banks. His family and mine were friends I know his wife and children well."

The 72-year-old arms dealer, who was once arrested in Katanga as a mercenary, told The Mirror.

Star he was to meet the ex-President's intermediary in Montreal on Monday and give him the money.

"I had to meet him in Montreal," he said, "because he was not allowed into the United States. All I can do now is pay off this man and his associates and go back to New York. It will cost me about $50,000."

Mr. Tshombe was to have been taken from Algeria to Madrid on July 10, he added.

Mrs. Ruth Tshombe, Mr. Tshombe's 45-year-old widow, left Brussels yesterday by air for Algiers.

Dressed in black, Mrs. Tshombe flew to Paris on the first stage of her journey accompanied by her son, Jean (23), and two other members of the Tshombe family — her brother-in-law, Jerome, and a cousin Mr. Jean Niombo.

Mrs. Tshombe, daughter of a Congo tribal chief, said in a statement on Monday the Algerian authorities had given her permission by telephone to enter the country. Her son Jean said he was contacting various Governments to see where his father's one-time leader of the breakaway Congo province of Katanga could be buried.

Mrs. Tshombe lives in Brussels with her family of nine and her husband's 74-year-old mother, Louise.

The Algerian authorities were still silent yesterday on the exact location of the place where Mr. Tshombe died.

The official Algerian Press service announcement gave the only clue to his whereabouts, saying he "died in his sleep of a heart attack at his residence near Algiers."

A post-mortem examination carried out on the body on Monday confirmed that he had died of heart failure, but the exact time of death was not specified. Unconfirmed reports in Algiers said Mr. Tshombe was treated for a heart condition earlier this year.

The post-mortem, at the Maitlot Military Hospital of Algiers, was conducted by a medical team of eleven doctors led by Professor Olivier of the University of Marseilles who was sent for from France specially by the Algerian Government. — Agencies

HUSBAND STRIPS WIFE IN STREET

An Italian, furious to find his wife talking to another man in the street, tore off all her clothes on the spot and dragged her stark naked to the police to report her for unfaithfulness.

The wife, Senora Elfina Sansone (46), was given some clothes and the husband charged with violence and obscene acts, the police said.

Kenya delegation in Mogadishu

A Kenya delegation led by the deputy Speaker of the National Assembly, Dr. F. R. S. de Souza, arrived in Mogadishu yesterday to attend Somalia's ninth independence day anniversary celebrations which take place today.

Dr. de Souza carried a goodwill message from President Kenyatta to President Abdi Rashid Ali Shermarke of the Somali Republic.

He said on arrival: "We will have friendly discussions with the Somali Government during our stay here."

WOMAN'S WORLD

The ten golden rules for staying young

Not long ago a vivacious young woman asked me if there was a simple plan to beauty routine. Well, it is a word, there is not. A beauty routine can have no shortcuts if it is to be successful.

To achieve the maximum benefit it must be carried out with the greatest of care all the time never hurried, never skimmed. But there are ten Golden Rules of beauty that every woman should follow, regardless of her age, and which are essential to good appearance and to the health of the skin.

There are no short cuts to beauty. Good looks demand constant care and attention. But there are ten golden rules which every woman should know. Here, beauty consultant Clare Cunningham explains what they are and when they must be applied.

1. Cleanse. To clean the face is the first and most important step in any beauty routine. It is the only step which can be done every day.

2. Exfoliate. The skin is constantly shedding dead cells and replacing them with new ones. This process is called exfoliation.

3. Moisturise. The skin needs moisture to stay healthy and supple. Use a good moisturiser every day.

4. Sun protection. The sun is the enemy of the skin. Use a good sun cream every day to protect your skin from sunburn and premature ageing.

5. Healthy diet. A healthy diet is essential for healthy skin. Eat plenty of fruits and vegetables.

6. Adequate sleep. Sleep is essential for the skin to repair itself. Get plenty of sleep every night.

7. Stress management. Stress can be bad for the skin. Find ways to manage your stress.

8. Regular exercise. Exercise is good for the skin as it improves circulation.

9. Professional care. See a professional beauty therapist regularly for advice and treatment.

10. Consistency. Beauty is a long-term project. Stick to your routine every day.

On the other hand, there is no need to ignore new ideas or fashions. Take from them what suits you and leave alone what does not. The best way to test foundations or lipstick colours is to use a little on the inside of your wrist.

Acidity in the skin often changes colour and what can appear to be just the colour you want is the tube can change in a parish red or orange on your skin. The same applies to lipsticks too. If your lips are very dry, you will probably find that a pink lipstick will turn blue. But don't despair — only one of my beauty work have I found women whose skin is "turned" every colour in my range. All that is needed is patience and persistence to find what suits you: when you have found it, you will know what type of product or colour to look for in the future.

Never think you are too old for beauty. The fourth rule. It is not very long since the age of 40 was a disaster for a woman. In one European country, a woman automatically begins wearing black at 40 signifying an end to glamour for ever!

Such a depressing attitude is quite unnecessary these days. There is a distinct and unique beauty about a mature face. It would be foolish to say that beauty comes as easily and naturally as it does in first youth but a mature face by careful beauty routine.

Most skin dry out as years pass and so the texture becomes rough. To keep constant nourishment. Choose foundations and lipsticks that feeds the skin but is not, at the same time, too heavy. It may drag the skin and cause sagging. Use cream foundations and lipsticks which are rarely take strong, dark colours. Leave them for the expert use of eye shadows and too much mascara on eye brows. Use light shades of eye shadow, light colours, and mascara. Test for allergies. Manufacturers of cosmetic products are generally thorough about the purity of their products. But you are generally aware of this. You may find that a cream or lipstick has become dry after a couple of weeks or have even broken out in a rash from a cream or your lips have become very dry after using a lipstick. Try any new product you may be thinking of buying on a small patch of skin.

Dab a little of the cream or lipstick behind your ear. After a few hours, you will be able to tell if you are allergic to the particular product.

Perfumed cosmetics upset some people. Use only those that are best to take a sniff at the cream if it is easy to smell whether it is a perfume or a cream. Change make-up occasionally. Few things are more morale-boosting than a change of make-up.

MORE AN MORE USING THE PILL

If most countries, particularly the developing ones, want to improve the effectiveness of their national family planning programmes, they should make full use of the modern 'cervical' or 'cervical' pill — the Pill.

This advice is expressed in a special report by Dr. K. Raventhal, Director of the Population Services of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

About 18,000,000 women throughout the world, his report notes, are now using the Pill. It is clearly and increasingly the favourite contraceptive in such developed countries as the U.S., Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

On the other hand, Dr. Raventhal points out, women in many of the new and developing nations — where the Pill usage has reached only the 4,000,000 mark — are yet unable to choose this method of contraception.

He explains, is because the Pill has been largely omitted from official programmes, while strenuous efforts have been made to persuade the women to accept the loop (IUD) and other less popular means.

Dr. Raventhal, a world authority on population problems, would clearly like to see such attitudes "change" for rich and poor. He declares, the Pill has proved an engine of "change" in related social fields, similar to the impact of "miracle" crops of wheat or rice on agriculture.

As an example, he cites American experience. There, the Pill is the most popular method, not only in the higher income groups, but also in those where income and educational levels are similar to those in developing countries.

"It is now abundantly clear", says Dr. Raventhal, "that oral contraceptives have overcome many cultural barriers and have had a substantial impact on the U.S. population."

In Singapore and Malaysia, two developing nations, in which the Pill is freely available, preference for it above other methods is also increasing.

When Singapore's Government launched its family planning programme, it expected that the country's women would prefer the IUD. The income, reports Dr. Raventhal, has been vastly different.

Between 1965 and 1967 new IUD "acceptors" dropped from 11% of the total of all family planning patients to 5%. The Pill's popularity on the other hand, rose sharply. At the end of 1967, some 61% of all new patients chose it. The Pill is "also the overwhelming favourite", reports Dr. Raventhal, with 80% of clinic patients continuing to use it.

In Ceylon oral contraceptives have virtually replaced previously more popular contraceptive methods and a preference for them is increasing in Latin America and the Philippines.

President's Council of an international survey report, his report notes, the most Pill "followers and users" are women between the

CHARITY FASHION SHOW

RAISES £180

Mrs. Pamela Mtoya drew the winning raffie tickets at a fashion show held by Modes Ltd at the New Avenue Hotel.

The latest fashions from Europe were shown and some of the outfits were especially flown to Nairobi and included in the collection.

The fashions were presented in the packed reception room at the hotel and background music was provided at the piano by Mr. Freddie Wirth, who caught the mood of each fashion with his tunes, ending with a light version of Here comes the bride as the final show piece, a bridal gown, took the stage.

The raffie tickets sold at the door were in aid of the K.S.P.C.A. and raised about £180. Prizes, which included bottles of perfume, jewelry and fashion accessories, were donated by several Nairobi firms and individuals.

After the show, Miss Joyce Gerald, senior vice-president of the K.S.P.C.A., thanked those concerned with the organisation of the successful show, and especially the organiser, Mrs. Vestre Merryweather, and the co-organiser, Mrs. V. Nancarrow.

She also thanked the New Avenue for permission to use the reception room for the show, and the companies which donated

Malawi tours officer ends course

After a course at the United Transport Co's Overseas Services Group Training School in Nairobi, Mr. Joseph Banda (no relation to President Banda of Malawi) has returned to Malawi full of new ideas to impart to his colleagues.

Mrs. Banda, who is married with several children, is the tour officer of United Transport (Malawi) Limited. Her Nairobi course covered the many duties of a tour officer including making arrangements for clients' tours. She also spent some time at the World Travel Bureau learning the finer points of hotel and travel booking procedure.

"I must say I have greatly benefited from this valuable course. I wish I could stay longer to see some of the sights in the United States."

She was one of a group of four from Malawi Transport (Malawi) Ltd. attending courses conducted by the group's training officer, Mr. E. H. Partridge.

The other three, Mr. J. Detmar, assistant secretary of United Transport (Malawi), and two drivers, Mr. Dayton Wesley and Mr. Gerald Wayways, are staying on for another two weeks.

Mr. Detmar is studying documentation and accounting procedures at United Touring so that a similar system can be installed in the touring company in Malawi; the two drivers are receiving instruction in client-land relations, wildlife and archaeology.

The U.T.O.S. Group Training School is believed by the only one in Africa which runs courses for the staff of touring companies.

Mr. Partridge said, "This is the second occasion on which we have trained staff from outside East Africa. On the previous occasion we trained a driving instructor for Central African Road Services in Zambia."

FOR HEALTH RISKS
At for health risks, says Dr. Raventhal, "intensive research has revealed few medical hazards from pills, and these will undoubtedly be reduced by changes to currently available 'balancing' pills."

Thus, for all countries, with good programme planning and comprehensive, oral contraceptives become an important means of fertility control for illiterate, low income women. And for women of low as well as high socio-economic status in virtually every culture as well.

Smooth Out Wrinkles
Wrinkles are riverbeds of dry cells caused by the plasma colloid (water carriers on the skin) having dried out through harsh weather. You can soon bring beauty and the glow of a healthy complexion back and prevent your skin from settling and drying. Ask your chemist for oil of Ulan and before applying night before, smooth it over the face, neck and hands to lubricate and soften the skin and give it a peach-and-cream bloom.

Gachamba's flying bicycle LATEST PROJECT

Standard Staff Reporter
Mr. Morris Tito Gachamba, the engineer, designer and — if it is ever completed and becomes airborne — pilot of the now legendary Kenya One, has disclosed that he will start immediate construction of a new model — a bicycle that will fly.

His latest project, to be known as Gachamba's flying bicycle, is a bird, flapping its wings as it flies through the air. The machine will have a large cycle wheel in front and a small one at the back. It will have pedals and wings. The pedals will work like wings, enabling the bicycle to fly like a bird. No mention is made of the method for landing.

Plea for law to help servants

The Mombasa branch of the Kenya Domestic and Hotel Workers' Union yesterday called on the Government to enact a law to protect its well-served African domestic servants, as was the case with expatriate holders of similar positions before independence.

In a statement, the Coast area secretary of the union, Mr. Joseph A. N. Omboti, claimed the unemployment situation had worsened in the country because all the domestic servants formerly employed by expatriates had returned to their native lands.

Mr. Omboti has asked (oto to be referred to employ at least 200 domestic servants, he said.

Ways to Keep Your Home Free of Insect Pests

During a non-related manufacturing procedure it was noted in a laboratory that a great number of cockroaches had an irresistible desire to touch a talc-lookng powder with their feelers after which death followed almost immediately. Tests have since proved that premises can be proved against cockroaches with this Pea-Beu powder indefinitely. It is everlasting in action and colourless. In fact, Pea-Beu powder is now the standard method of cockroach control in most parts of the world where there is a major cockroach problem.

When you return from your holidays your home will be infested with cockroaches free from the floor before you see them. Pea-Beu adhesive cockroach powder should be used because cockroaches will remain normal in it and eventually die and wiped away.

To protect children and food from disease-carrying flies spray with 'Safe' powerful Pea-Beu aerosol insecticide. The powerful, wide-reaching action of antiparasitic Pea-Beu quickly kills off all flies and other insect pests, does not contaminate food and can be used in the presence of children and pets. It is pleasantly perfumed and is recommended for the majority of children's bedrooms.

HOPING FOR PEACE WITH ARABS

Israeli Foreign Minister in Kenya for three days

By MIKE PARRY

Israel's Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Abba Eban, who begins a three-day visit to Kenya today, first won his place in the chronicle of resurgent Israel as its Ambassador to the U.N. when the decision on the establishment of a Jewish State hung in the balance.

He achieved international distinction during the decade and more in which he was Israel's envoy in Washington and the compellingly eloquent voice of Israel in the General Assembly and Security Council of the U.N.

After his service with the U.N., he entered the Israeli Cabinet, first as Minister without Portfolio, then successively as Minister of Education and Culture and Deputy Prime Minister. Now, at the age of 53, as Israel's third Foreign Minister, he is blazing a new and impressive trail in his career.

Triple First

He graduated from Cambridge in 1938 with the rare accomplishment of a Triple First in Classics, and Oriental Languages (Arabic, Persian, Hebrew and Syriac) and at the age of 23 was appointed Research Fellow and Tutor in Oriental Languages at Pembroke College.

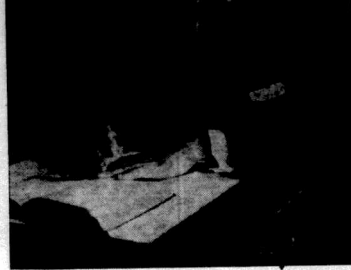

He was chairman of the University Labour Party and of the Committee of the Union. It was at that period he became closely associated with Israeli political pioneers including Dr. Itham Weizmann and Mr. Moshe Sharett as a consultant on Arab and Middle Eastern Affairs. Years later, he was to write the collective biography of Dr. Weizmann.

Mr. Eban's academic career was interrupted, like so many others, by the Second World War and he became an infantry officer at the outbreak of hostilities in 1939. Three years later, then a major in the General Staff, he was assigned to Jerusalem as Liaison Officer at Allied Headquarters, with the task of enlisting and training Jewish volunteers for service in Palestine and occupied Europe.

This period brought him into contact with the heads of the Jewish Agency, the Hagannah and Palmach. In 1944 he was appointed Chief Instructor at the Middle East Arabic Centre in Jerusalem, established by Allied Headquarters to impart Oriental languages and culture to officers and officials.

On demobilisation in September, 1946, he decided to stay on in Jerusalem in the Political Department of the Jewish Agency under Mr. Sharett. On the very day of this appointment, Mr. Sharett and most of his colleagues were taken away by the mandatory authorities and detained at Latrun. Mr. Eban was plunged into central responsibility for the Jewish political struggle.

In April of the next year, during the observations of the U.N. Special Committee on Palestine and the debates on its report in the ad hoc Political Committee of the

Mr. Abba Eban — "peace will swallow everything".

General Assembly, he was sent to New York to help in the fight for Israel's admission. At the U.N. he joined the Jewish Agency delegation and was prominent in putting the case for the establishment of a Jewish State. From April to September of 1947 he was one of the two official liaison officers between the Agency and the Special Committee. With dramatic suddenness he was projected into world attention on May 1, 1948, when he made his first speech to the U.N., arguing against the U.N. proposal to substitute trusteeship for partition. The trusteeship proposal was defeated. A year later, in a three-hour address, and after long cross-examination in the U.N. Political Committee, he won a favourable vote for Israel's admission. He became Permanent Representative and, at 33, the youngest head of mission at U.N. headquarters. His advocacy of Israel's cause made him one of the best U.N. Assembly — the highest honour yet in international prestige. He won further honours in 1953 when elected a Vice-President of the General Assembly and in 1954 when elected by a representative of Israel. In 1950 he took up the post of Israeli Ambassador in Washington as well as there, during the Truman administration, he was involved in many crucial political and economic negotiations. He signed the Treaty of Friendship with the U.S. in 1952 and was instrumental in Israel's inclusion in the U.S. economic aid programme. In August, 1959, Mr. Eban was elected to the Knesset and joined the Ben Gurion Cabinet as Minister without Portfolio in December — becoming Minister of Education and Culture in July, 1960.

He became Deputy Prime Minister in the late Mr. Levi Eshkol's first Cabinet in June, 1963, and concerned himself chiefly with international affairs. He would deputise for Mr. Eshkol during his State visits abroad and he himself also made official trips to Africa, Latin America and Europe. In 1964 he led the Israeli delegation to the General Assembly.

Israeli viewpoint

Mr. Eban has returned many times to New York in the past two years — where the U.N. has been trying unsuccessfully to bring about a settlement to the Middle East conflict. His visit to Kenya, which follows a similar one to Ethiopia, is to explain the Israeli point of view on the situation in the Middle East.

He gave an idea of these views in an article in the Jerusalem Post last month, marking the second anniversary of the Six-day war. Israel, he said, was entering the third year after the 1967 war with her political positions intact.

"If we went on, our business is to inculcate in the Arab heart a mood compounded of changing ceasefire lines without peace and hope that a peace negotiation will bring Israel's interests into harmony with Arab security, peace and honour."

He said a new peace settlement had to be expressed in formal treaties which left no room for doubt that the signatories were totally committed to each other's sovereignty. "Since the echoes of Arab hostility will not soon die away and Arab preponderance of land and population is insurmountable, Israel's right-defensible boundaries as a State are not only a national survival,

BACKGROUND TO WORLD NEWS

One man feeds 3,000 in the 'bustees'

By ALAN DAVIDSON

He talks in a sergeant-major's shout and, with his white apron, flat cap and Sikh-like beard, he looks like a big, jolly butcher, or a chef, which, indeed, he is in a way.

But his years in Calcutta have not left him entirely unscathed. One notices the feet, swollen and cracked by philaria, a disease caused by mosquito bites, so that he cannot wear shoes any more.

There are 7,500,000 people in Calcutta," he starts, "and another 200,000 are coming in every year. Housing can only be provided for about a sixth of these and meanwhile other housing is falling into further disrepair."

We are crisscrossing through the slums of Calcutta in Major Gardner's Land-Rover, supplied by Oxfam. In the back, great treasuries of bright yellow, curry and bulgar wheat rattled and bounced.

For the Major, formerly of Richmond, Surrey, and the British Army, is doing his afternoon feeding round. He has done it for 11 years, without missing a day.

These are what are known as the 'bustees', he shouts confidentially, "they're the worst slums in Calcutta and that means in India."

When you are feeding 2,800 people a day, year in, year out, you need as much money as you can get. At the moment the project is financed almost entirely by the Unitarian Church of Canada, who give him £4,000 a year.

The bustees are the horrors of Calcutta intensified. The narrow 'main thoroughfares' meander on giving glimpses along yard-wide alleys to a daunting, mysterious

Records likely at schools meet

Standard Staff Reporter

Performances among schoolchildren in Nairobi and Nyanza at the weekend augur well for the Kenya national schools meeting in Nyari on July 23 and 24, which is expected to be attended by the Vice-President of Kenya, Mr. Daniel arap Moi, and the Minister for Education, Dr. Kioko.

Most of the records at this meeting are expected to be broken with the new events, the 2,000 metres walk and the girls' 100 metres hurdles, providing additional attractions.

In Kisumu during the Nyanza Provincial schools' championships, 100-metre distance runners took the honours, Mabira winning the 800 metres in 1min. 54.8sec., F. Maina taking the 1,500 metres in 3min. 54.8sec. and W. Momeno winning the 5,000 metres in 15min. 54.8sec.

The sprinter, Oyomba, won the 100 metres in 12.1sec. and the 200 metres in 22.1sec. while Alice Adila won the girls' 100 metres in 12.3sec.

In a track and field meeting between Alliance/Thika and Kenyatta College/E.A.P. and L. Charles Ndungu set up a best time in the 400 metres of 48.4sec. for the season. He beat the previous best of 48.8sec. held by himself and Mike Bolt.

Karingithi jumped into top form on Saturday during the meeting at Stima ground by winning the 100 metres in a wind-assisted time of 10.5sec. and the 200 metres in 21.9 sec.

The hurdlers, Mwanjy and Mains, also clocked fine times, Mwanjy winning the 400 metres hurdles in 53.5sec. and Maina win-

E.A. Airways to test Feisal and Liverpool

Standard Correspondent

The E.A. Airways combined team, comprising footballers from Tanzania, Uganda and Kenya, will test the strength of the two leading Mombasa sides, Feisal and Liverpool, in two friendly senior matches at the Mombasa Stadium this weekend.

The first match will be played on Saturday when Feisal takes on the visitors and on Sunday Liverpool meet them. Ramsay will also take part in one match.

This is the first time for the E.A. Airways team to visit Mombasa. Mr. E. W. S. Sharao, the Station Superintendent in Mombasa, as E.A. Airways, one of the leading soccer teams in East Africa, will have some players from the top soccer clubs in East Africa - Young Africans, Wanderers, Comptonian of Dar es Salaam, Gor Mahia and Abubuya and some from Uganda. The M.D.F.A. Executive Committee met last week and granted the applications from Feisal, Liverpool and E.A. Airways.

Thousands of Mombasa soccer fans turned out to watch an excellent soccer match when Feisal met their biggest soccer rivals, Liverpool, in an M.D.F.A. Division I league match at the Mombasa Stadium last Saturday. Liverpool deserved to win by 3-1 and would have scored more goals had their forwards' finishing been better.

Leeds Utd. "A" had their first victory of the 1969 season when they beat Western Stars "A" 2-0 in their Division I league match at the Mombasa Stadium last Friday. Both goals were scored in the last ten minutes by Omar Said and Kea.

Division II and III matches of the 1969 M.D.F.A. season start this week with matches on the Police ground and Totonoka ground on Tuesdays, Fridays and Thursdays. There are two new teams in Division II - Nyanza and Kizwi Liverpool - and in

Record Cotton exports likely

The Kenya Cotton Lint and Seed Marketing Board has signed a purchase contract with the China National Textiles Import and Export Corporation of Peking. The contract is for the sale of almost the entire cotton crop, valued at 300,000, for August/September shipment. This is the third largest shipment to mainland China, compared with shipments valued at 140,000 in 1965 and 135,000 in 1967.

Share prices

At the beginning of this year Kenya had exported cotton valued at 1,000,000. The total exports this year may exceed the record of 1,600,000 in 1966. This will mean that local textile mills will have to buy their requirements from elsewhere.

Case of Trouble

A claim that some Kenyans were unfairly treated because, through no fault of their own, they could not produce G.P.T. exemption certificates was made during the session.

Mr. Oduak Chillo (K.F.U., Nyalak) was the M.P. who raised the issue in a Point of Order.

ENOUGH EVIDENCE

Standard Staff Reporter
Kenya's Minister for Tourism and Wildlife, Mr. Ayodo, warned Lake Naivasha fishermen yesterday that if the water level continued to rise, the entire lake could be drained and both commercial and sports fishing would come to an end.

Keeping the weed under control was costing the Government hundreds of pounds but there were still people who persisted in entering the closed zone. The usually young or irresponsible people and their owners, who had any doubts about the visitors' safety, were usually quite dangerous.

Self-help projects impress U.K. visitor

Standard Staff Reporter
 A development work in East Africa has made considerable progress during the past eight years, according to an official of the Overseas Development Administration, who visited Kenya last week.

Mr. G. H. A. O'Connell, who is the course director for Africa at the college, said that the progress of the commission for the Commonwealth Development Commission was very impressive. He also served as the Permanent Secretary to the then Ministry of Community Development.

New High Court judge welcomed

Standard Staff Reporter
 Kenya's Judiciary had a high honour yesterday as Justice J. J. Duffus, a former Registrar of the High Court of Kenya, was speaking at a ceremony to welcome him as a judge of the High Court.

"A justice judge takes two oaths when he is appointed. First one is to the Queen and the other to the President and the Republic of Kenya, and secondly to the people of Kenya, and to the people of the world, and to the people of the future."

Film star backs meat plant in Tanzania

Standard Staff Reporter
 It would handle 15 head of cattle and 40 head of pigs a week, and the plant could be expanded to handle 50 head of cattle and 100 head of pigs, according to Mr. Kruger.

Mr. Kruger, who is chairman of the Tanzania Meat Processing Corporation, said that the plant would be a major step towards self-sufficiency in meat.

Board sends out better-coffee advice

Standard Staff Reporter
 All hotels and restaurants in Kenya are receiving a circular from the Kenya Coffee Board aimed at improving the quality of coffee they serve.

The circular, which is being distributed through the East African Hotelkeepers' Association, contains advice on the best way of preparing coffee in hotels and restaurants.

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Minister for Tourism and Wildlife, Mr. Ayodo, said that the Naivasha lake landing open yesterday.

He said that the lake was now open to the public and that the Government was now allowing the fishermen to land their fish at the lake.

Q.C. queries questioning in £8,000 currency case

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Government of Kenya has asked a question in the High Court of Kenya regarding the questioning of a witness in a case involving a £8,000 currency case.

The case is Attorney General v. Njoro, and the witness in question is Mr. Njoro.

NGALA SUPPORTERS 'ELECT' OFFICIALS

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Kanu leadership row at Mombasa took a different turn yesterday when supporters of the Social Services, Mr. Ngala, who is also a Kanu vice-president at the moment, held an 'election' of Mombasa branch officials of Kanu.

Mr. Joseph Jolly Magalis told the press that the election was held in a hall in Mombasa.

Man freed after appeal dismissed

Standard Staff Reporter
 An employee of the Kenya Meat Commission, Simon Kimani, who was jailed yesterday for a charge of stealing six pounds of meat from his employers' led to court yesterday a free man although his appeal against conviction had been dismissed by the High Court.

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Chief Justice, Sir Justice J. J. Duffus, recalled that on December 18, two men of whom one was the appellant, were found carrying six pounds of meat. One had two six pounds and the other had a few pieces of frozen meat. Both were prosecuted for theft by servant, convicted and sentenced.

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Minister for Tourism and Wildlife, Mr. Ayodo, said that the Naivasha lake landing open yesterday.

He said that the lake was now open to the public and that the Government was now allowing the fishermen to land their fish at the lake.

Chief Justice M. K. Mwawaa, sitting with Mr. Justice Chanan Singh in the Kenya High Court, yesterday dismissed an appeal by an operations controller with East African Airways, James Green, against conviction and sentence on a charge of causing death by dangerous driving.

The Chief Justice read his two-hour judgment before a crowded court which included Mr. Green, relatives and friends.

Green was jailed for two and a half years and fined £1,000 for driving for seven years after being convicted by a Nairobi magistrate, Mr. R. M. Kibuka, of causing the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Robertson Taylor, his second wife, in 1967.

In his judgment, Sir Justice said it had been argued that the appellant, a notice of intended prosecution had not been served with sufficient promptness to justify whether he had received the notice of intended prosecution in time to enable him to take any steps incumbent on him to provide the proof.

That song again
 After all the argument about that song, Bobby Shaftoe is coming to town today. He will be presented by the theatre taking part in the Kenya Music Festival at the National Theatre, Nairobi. They have been given his signature (use as their text) in a section of the music training college choir.

ACCUSED CLAIMS HE WAS SCAPEGOAT

Standard Staff Reporter
 Joel Mwangi Mukabi, one of seven men charged with killing by violence, told a Nairobi court yesterday that Major Sir Ernest Walter, his servant, Mr. Yuma Mungo, implicated him in the robbery in which the information was received from the gang, and because they could not recognise any of the robbers.

"They decided to pin the blame on me after seeing me in a section of the Kiambu C.I.D. office," he said.

WARNING ON MARKET TAKE-OVER

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Nyanza Provincial Commissioner, Mr. C. C. Murgor, yesterday advised Kericho County Council to be alert to any move of the Government on the future of the Kericho area.

Mr. Murgor said that the Government is considering taking the law into its hands.

STOCK ISSUE A SUCCESS

Standard Staff Reporter
 The Nairobi City Council's £500,000 stock issue was oversubscribed, a large application was made for shares in the Town Trust, Mr. J. P. Mbugua, reported yesterday.

He added that his savings were shared for the preparation of the stock issue, which was the success of the issue.

3,000 steepchase

Standard Staff Reporter
 A new flow, Kenya's Olympic 3,000 metres steepchase gold medalist, finished a disappointing 11th in the event on the second day of the World Games (Helsinki, Finland). He conceded the race 9.26 seconds behind the victor, Michael Zobel, of Austria, in 11:46. The Kenyan's performance is some consolation if Biwott's win in Mexico last October was, in fact, a fluke. He has only been placed in a 3,000 metres flat race on three occasions so far on the European tour and has come nowhere near the form that brought him a gold medal in Mexico. Biwott's win in the Olympic Games was not considered a triumph at a "flash in the pan" because the event was run at a time of the year when the world is in a lull.

Asminder to play in Amateur

By Ralph Hawkins
 Kenya's new boy champion, Ronald Asminder Singh, is looking to the adult world of golf in his enthusiastic quest to become a professional. He was asked to defend his title won at Karen last weekend. He has the young Khas High school pupil who hopes to establish in agricultural science, but his mind on competing in the year in the Kenya Amateur Championship. Asminder has been playing golf for only two years and says he has more to take into the game. He has a professional coach, Alke Kinnell, who has started his career as a pupil of the late Colonel School and he quickly showed a natural ability towards the swing which has now taken him to the top of schoolboy golf. He has won the title in the past year in the Kenya Amateur Championship. He has already won a title in the past year in the Kenya Amateur Championship. in Tuesday's race and was beaten by a more comparatively unknown steepchaser. The world record holder, J. Koba, of Finland, who has a best time of 10m. 24.6sec, did not run. Garry Stevens, of Britain, was second to Zobel with a time of 10m. 46.0sec. Zobel finished clear of the field in 11m. 46.0sec.

The second day of the meeting so far at Kenya was concerned with another triumph for Charles Asati and Nafisi Ben. Although they did not record any fast times, the two outpaced their opponents to win comfortably.

Asati won yet another 400 metres in 47.4sec, his best time. He finished fifth in the 800 metres, 2m. 40.0sec, and 11. finish in fifth place in 49.7sec. Bezaach also showed some form. Gulam regains badminton title

Standard Correspondent
 Shamun Gulam, the No. 4 seed, regained the D.D. Pari Memorial badminton singles title which he had last won in 1966. Before a packed gallery, he beat the No. 2 seed, Sirji Panesar, by 18-13, 15-11 at the Premier Club, Nairobi. Gulam also won the mixed doubles in partnership with Miss Roshan Meghji, beating Shiraz Hasnani and Miss Maureen Pate in the final.

 Gor Mahia are due to play the champion club from Sudan, Burri F.C. in a two-leg, second-round match of the Africa Club Cup tournament in mid-August. Burri won their first-round match against Somalia's Police with an aggregate score of 6-1. The club has been trying to find 11,200 to help take a team to Sudan to play Burri in the first leg of the tournament and the main reason for yesterday's 'take-over' was stated, was dissatisfaction over the club's financial position. Other reasons given were: 1. The club had failed to uphold all Luo decisions which could help to improve the club; 2. The club's inability to run the club efficiently, causing the resignation of the club's new coach and the chairman of an advisory committee; 3. The club had lost contact with supporters, other Luo organisations and the support of the Luo public in general.

Mr. Eban talks in Middle East

Mr. Eban, Foreign Minister of Israel, discussed the Middle East situation with President Kenyatta when he returned to his State House.

Mr. Eban pointed out that his country was not only interested in victory, which he said did not need everything, but also in peace. Israel had achieved a ceasefire followed by peaceful negotiations by both sides.

Since 1967 Israel had tried every conceivable means to reach a settlement but nothing had moved forward.

Referring to refugees, Mr. Eban said that although Israel was finding ways and means to stimulate economic development for them and was absorbing them in certain regions, this alone could not provide a fundamental solution for peace.

Since the war of 1967 Israel had made a number of proposals at the Security Council and elsewhere on the possible machinery that could bring peace, but the Arab countries had never taken any initiative in them.

He said that since the 1967 war the Soviet Union had not used its influence on the Arab countries for true peace but had believed that huge supplies of arms were the answer to the problem.

He added that the 1967 war was not a religious war but a political one. The Arab States had no reason to believe that they would succeed in a war and pointed out that since the 1967 war the Egyptian successes had been in their communications but not in reality.

Commander of Kenya Navy ship on court martial

Standard Staff Reporter.

The Mombasa hearing of a case in which the Commanding Officer of the Kenya Navy ship, Lt. Peter Harrison, was standing trial before a five-man court martial sitting at the Silversands Leave Centre, Nyali, was yesterday adjourned until today.

Lt. Harrison has admitted three of the five charges and the prosecutor, Lt. Comdr. Ross, appealed to the court to allow him to withdraw the two counts to which the accused had pleaded "Not guilty".

The appeal to withdraw was allowed on one count and rejected on the other one. The court ruled that he must stand trial.

Lt. Comdr. Potts, giving evidence, told the court that he had been to Sil Island many times and was fully conversant with its narrow channel and other conditions prevailing there.

He had always been in doubt when going there and all the time had used parallel range buoys, apart from going at a slow speed.

Lt. Comdr. Potts said he believed that to ensure success when nearing the island it was necessary to fix the ship's position accurately, using radar and other aids.

In navigating in confined waters he ensured that the ship was visibly fixed, and if the ship was doing ten knots he had an officer doing the checking at least every ten minutes.

Lt. Comdr. Carran, defending, submitted that looking at the entire evidence he believed that the accused was not at fault.

He had always been in doubt when going there and all the time had used parallel range buoys, apart from going at a slow speed.

The hearing continues today.

DISEASE SET-BACK TO KISUMU SHOW

Standard Staff Reporter.

Because of foot-and-mouth disease in Nyanza Province, there will be no livestock entries at the Kisumu Show, which is to be opened this afternoon by the Nyanza Provincial Commissioner, Mr. Charles Murgor, representing President Kenyatta.

The President has sent a message to the organisers of the show, congratulating them on their work and expressing regret that due to urgent Government business, he will be unable to perform the opening ceremony.

This is the second time in a few weeks that there has been a cancellation of livestock entries at a show in Nyanza Province: there were no livestock at the Kilifi Show last month for the same reason.

Despite the setback, the Kisumu Show organisers yesterday predicted that there would be a big attendance for today's opening.

About 4,000 tickets had been sold in advance to special parties, including schoolchildren who are being given a holiday throughout the province so that they can attend.

Arena events have had to be modified because foot-and-mouth disease rules out horse classes. Trade stand entries are reported to be "very good" and in the Farm and Dairy Produce section entries are 1,700 up on last year.

The show will get off to a good start with the Kenya Army marching through the streets of Kisumu from 10 a.m. — the first time the band has done this.

Firemen foil false alarm

A Welsh extremist tried in vain yesterday to arrange a collision between a fire engine and Prince Charles's official motorcade when he visited the city of St. David's.

Not only did no "accident" take place, but the Prince went on to make history by becoming the only member of the Royal family to visit the city of St. David's.

The Prince received a tremendous reception from thousands lining the route on his second day of travels to meet at the town of Pwllheli.

The Prince, looking sun-tanned and in excellent spirits, was accompanied by a police escort of 850 people inside the 12th century cathedral in singing in Welsh the hymn "We worship thee all our fathers".

M.P.'s proposal to block estimates GRATUITIES ROW

Standard Staff Reporter.

Ministerial gratuities were again the subject of debate in the Kenya National Assembly yesterday.

Kenya backbencher raised the issue during resumed consideration of the Budget statement.

When clarification was sought, the Speaker told Members that the only way they could make the Government modify Ministerial gratuities presented to the House would be through opposing individual Ministers.

Mr. Serony (Kauu, Tindiro) had earlier suggested various methods through which he felt the House could amend the Government's Financial Estimates with a view to reducing "unnecessary expenditure" on gratuities.

Supplementary estimates were becoming a feature of the Government, he claimed, adding that this was an unfortunate situation as such estimates should only be justified by an urgent and unforeseeable expenditure. But it should not be done year after year.

The Speaker remarked that, although he deferred Members from speaking on the matter and had referred the matter to the Auditor-General, he was of the opinion that debates on the question of gratuities must await the Auditor-General's report.

Such amendments would be urgently imperative "to remove gratuities for Ministers and Assistant Ministers from the estimates," he argued.

He was told by the Speaker that the Voice of Accounts already approved the House was meant to keep the Government running for a period of six months, during which time the Government would have an opportunity to withdraw and revise the estimates.

He thought the Minister for Economic Planning and Development's recent statement in the House that M.P.'s had approved gratuities was "misleading to the House."

United States and South Vietnam will consider a further "U.S. forces" in the next month, the chief negotiator, Mr. ... announced ...

President Thieu and the U.S. ... Mr. Ellsworth Bunker, had their longest meeting since the Midway conference yesterday.

No official comment was forthcoming on the subject of the two-hour discussion, but observers noted that the talk took place not ...

Yesterday President Thieu visited Can Tho, 80 miles southwest of Saigon, to inspect pacification units in the fourth tactical region.

Few new actions initiated by the North Vietnamese on National Liberation Front forces were reported.

The N.L.F. gunmen carried out only seven harassing attacks, four of which a U.S. spokesman said yesterday were important.

Among the targets hit on Wednesday were the headquarters of the Fourth U.S. Infantry Division at Pleiku in the Central Highlands, an American division camp Quang Ngai on the north-east coast and a marine command post near Khe Sanh in the north-west.

Eight B-52 bombers were described as "highly accurate" during the night of Wednesday to Thursday, against targets in the north-eastern province of Quang Nam and the provinces of Tay Ninh, Long Khanh, Binh Duong and Bien Hoa.

Ground combats were sporadic, amounting to an ambush of a four-man and a few other clutches. In one clash in Quang Ngai province four Americans and 15 N.L.F. men were killed, and eight Americans were wounded.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said that a convoy carrying 15 tons of rice had fallen into an ambush. Government troops had so far recovered three tons of it.

Mr. Rogers said he was taking ... the lowest level of activity for a long time ... possibly during the whole war."

He told a Press conference that ... in the last two or three months had been at a fairly low level.

Mr. Rogers said it was not yet clear whether the fighting will have any significance so far as de-escalation of the fighting was concerned.

"Certainly we hope it has some significance," he added.

Senator George McGovern said he had been convinced by Hanoi and N.L.F. representatives that peace negotiations would remain deadlocked until President Nixon signs total troop withdrawal and backs off from the Saigon regime.

Sen. McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat, was Sen. Eugene McCarthy's running mate for the Presidential nomination last year, told the senate of a meeting he held with members of two delegations in Paris in May.

He said Hanoi and the N.L.F. might agree to some sort of provisional solution that might include President Thieu and Vice-President Ky, though he was "adamant against elections when Thieu and Ky hold the ballot box."

He had been convinced, he said, that progress in Paris was being made, but the withdrawal of the U.S. fleet from the Gulf of Tonkin "qualified the systematic withdrawal of U.S. troops and the cessation of the Thieu Government."

He said he consulted with the U.S. delegation leader, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, during his private talks and then reported his findings to the State Department.

Documents, released by the U.S. State Department covering foreign relations with the British Commonwealth on Far Eastern policy in 1945 show that President Roosevelt repeatedly refused to use American troops to help France regain control of its Indo-China colonies in the last months of the Second World War.

The General de Gaulle was upset — and the marshall — and Roosevelt declined his offer to send French troops to fight in the last. It meant the end of the Japanese campaign.

Washington cited problems of transport in moving French troops to the battle zone as the reason for refusal.

According to the secret papers now made public, President Roosevelt in a memorandum to his Secretary of State, Mr. Edward Stettin, said that the end of the decision. It is a matter for post-war reflection.

"By the same token, I do not want to get mixed up in any military effort toward the liberation of Indo-China from the Japanese."

"You can tell Halifax (Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador in Washington) that I made this very clear to Mr. Churchill. From both the military and civil point of view, action at this time is premature."

The President's note to Mr. Stettin contained discussions on the future status of French Indo-China.

Major Collins was speaking at a reception given by the Kenya High Commissioner, Dr. J. N. Karanja at the Royal Agricultural Show at Stonleigh.

Mr. Collins said that Prince Philip, however, hoped to attend the Royal Agricultural Society's biennial biennial conference which is taking place this weekend.

More than 2,000 people an hour were visiting the Kenya pavilion on the second day of the Royal Society Show.

By midday it was estimated that 10,000 people had visited the Kenya pavilion. Prominent visitors included Mr. Edward Heath, Leader of the Opposition party in the British Parliament.

Mr. Heath remarked that the pavilion was most excellent and comprehensive.

The president of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, Lord Ashby, visited the pavilion and also remarked that it was one of the best he had seen.

He praised the good work done by the public who made it such a success.

The president of the Kenyan National Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Z. K. Gakuru, who is also the managing director of the Mbumi Dry Cleaners of Nairobi, said that many people had shown great interest in the Kenyan products, and he believed that Kenya was now better known in the commercial and industrial world as a result of the A.K.A.

U.S. plans nine more Moon flights

America plans a further nine flights to the Moon after Apollo 11, the first lunar landing by the United States to Mars, the head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Fred Wertz, said in an exclusive newspaper interview yesterday.

The Moon flights will take place over the next few years and an American spacecraft, loaded with tools and equipment, is scheduled to land on Mars in 1973, he told the Austrian weekly Wochenpost.

Dr. Von Braun said the giant Saturn V rocket which will blast Apollo 11 on a course to the Moon this month, would be used for future Moon probes.

Plans after Apollo 11, from which many are scheduled to land on the Moon for the first time, include a three-day stay on the Moon, a journey of several kilometers across the Moon's surface with the aid of a lunar car, and the sending of a drill to the Moon for geological surveys, including one on the deepest depths of the lunar soil.

Dr. Von Braun confirmed that a rudimentary, inhabited space station, currently being built, would be put in an Earth orbit in 1971.

Space Agency technicians at Cape Kennedy have repaired a leaking fuel system valve and resumed the countdown towards a scheduled blast-off of the Saturn Five.

A leak in the valve, which maintains proper pressure in the rocket's liquid hydrogen fuel, was discovered on Wednesday and delayed the progress of the countdown test for 3hrs. 18min.

The blast-off rehearsal, a dry run of the actual launch set for 1332 G.M.T. on July 16, was rescheduled for 1059 G.M.T. on Wednesday afternoon.

The countdown demonstration test which began last Friday morning, had proceeded without a hitch until the valve leak, which was repaired by a team of four technicians.

As engineers worked on the Saturn rocket, the Apollo crewmen Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin, donned spacesuits and practiced mission routines in a simulated command module.

Concorde bill now exceeds £B700m.

The entire Anglo-French Concorde supersonic airliner may be re-ordered, according to French Press and radio reports yesterday.

The aviation newspaper France-Soleil and the daily Paris-Jour both reported that the order for 20 Concorde non-Government radio stations.

Paris-Jour said the new French Government was seeking to make "major economies" and that the cost of the Concorde was expected to exceed 8,000,000,000 francs (about £B700,000,000).

It also said that under 80 "options to buy" had been received for the plane, and that the last option was placed more than two years ago. It said that, according to experts, at least 250 of the planes had to be sold for the project to be profitable.

Despite the recent first flights of the Concorde, no new orders had been booked, Paris-Jour said. It thought user airlines were reluctant because the full-speed tests were still to come, because the seating capacity had been cut from 150 to 128, and because the transatlantic fares on the Concorde would be too high.

Zambian soldiers killed in aid raid by Portuguese

Two Zambian soldiers were killed and one seriously wounded in a Portuguese air raid on a village in the Eastern Province, near the frontier with Mozambique, the Zambian Interior Minister, Mr. Gray Zulu, said on Wednesday night.

Mr. Zulu said the Zambian Government was seriously concerned about the incident. He said the Portuguese aircraft had dropped 12 bombs, which destroyed several houses.

A widespread belief in Lusaka is that the raid was a reprisal for the recent arrest of two Portuguese soldiers for having crossed into Zambia illegally.

Earlier reports of the raid said two women were killed and a man seriously wounded.

Zambian troops were sent to the area but no further incidents were reported.

There have been a series of incidents on Zambia's borders with both Mozambique and Angola.

Bombs herald arrival of U.S. envoy

Bomb blasts rocked several quarters of the Dominican capital of Santo Domingo within hours of the arrival of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, President Nixon's envoy to Latin America.

As Governor Rockefeller and his aides attended a reception given by President Joaquin Balaguer, Dominican ministers resigned. Balaguer's ministers had demanded French assistance in the Dominican Republic.

Protesters armed with pistols and rifles tried to set fire to an Esso fertilizer depot but were driven off by police.

The protests continued the pattern of riotous behavior which has marked the Government's recent visits to other Latin American countries.

He refused to answer questions about the internal situation in Haiti.

Dr. Duvalier said he had complained to Mr. Rockefeller about U.S. embargoes on arms which he said he needed to defend Haiti from "atheistic Communism".

No big Power settlement

When President Kenyatta received the Israeli Foreign Minister, Mr. Eban, he expressed the hope that the Middle East situation would be solved through peaceful negotiations. This is the only view which all people of goodwill will concur. Settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict would remove a major danger to the entire world.

Mr. Eban himself concurs. Recently he wrote in the Jerusalem Post: "The memory of the war that has been making a peace. Peace will swallow everything... the war and its echoes, the Arab and Jewish hatreds... that have been endured and the inexpressible things that have been kindled."

But the Arab countries, led by the U.A.R., resolutely refuse to conduct any negotiations directly with Israel. They are supported by Jordan and King Hussein as accordingly indicated in transforming the whole Arab world into the opposition of other Arab leaders as by the initiative of the extremist, operating in London.

In the U.N. Security Council, the Afro-Asian members have taken an anti-Israel resolution which would be unacceptable to four other nations. They are calling for a general embargo on the sale of arms to Israel which would be unacceptable to the United States and Israel.

Observers at the U.N. report that, in its original form, the resolution would be unacceptable to the United States and Israel. The Security Council, particularly the U.S. and Britain, had the debate on the issue known as the "Arab Boycott". It was held in the knowledge that Israel has refused to give up its right to self-defence. It is a mystic dilemma to the Arabs who will have to learn to live with this dilemma in their hearts and minds if it is not to be forgotten.

There is no prospect of a "big Power" settlement of the Middle East. The only way to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict is through a peaceful settlement of the Middle East. The only way to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict is through a peaceful settlement of the Middle East.

Buy Kenya produce

There is one aspect of this problem which does not seem to have received the attention it deserves, namely, the need to increase local consumption of the many articles we now produce in Kenya which are subject to fluctuating world prices and possible over-production.

At the Kenya National Chamber of Commerce we have recently had visits from overseas missions whose main object seems to be to sell us various articles which we produce in Kenya. Last week it was a group from Jackson, Oregon, in Central Oregon, and earlier from New Zealand and the U.S.A.

What we need is the expansion and creation of these local industries to absorb more employees and, therefore, increase the number of our own consumers of our own products which in turn would make us less dependent on overseas markets.

Looking after other Provinces, the expansion of Central Nyanza numerous projects have reached their peak, but in Central Nyanza, the expansion of the dam project is still in progress.

Comparing other institutional centres in Central Nyanza with those of other provinces, such as health centres, dispensaries, schools and roads, one can see that Central Nyanza needs a great deal of help, particularly in the form of technical assistance to improve the standard.

The people of Central Nyanza should be encouraged to leave politics alone to their elected representatives and to concentrate in a complete sense on co-operation with the Government to improve their own standards of living.

Too much talk involving differentiation of policy will not do to solve the problems and difficulties of Central Nyanza. We must have more constructive measures. I am, Sir, yours faithfully, D. A. G. YANSON, Nairobi, July 1, 1969.

Central Nyanza progress lagging

Since Kenya achieved independence under the leadership of the late Jomo Kenyatta, considerable developments and other projects relating to self-help schemes have been carried out.

Many people from Central Nyanza have formed the habit of staying away in towns and cities, leaving their families just because of poor institutional facilities in Central Nyanza, which is very unfortunate.

The more locked up in Amboseli

Amboseli, with its magnificent setting below Mt. Kilimanjaro, is one of Kenya's most popular and productive game areas. So far, however, its potential as a money-spinner has hardly begun to be realized. A recent scientific report, taken as a basis for this article by Peter B. Macdonald, suggests that the resident Masai and Kenya as a whole stand to reap considerable profits from proper management of the area. The drawback at present is not so much the controversy over the proper use of the area, but the lack of exact information on which to decide the best method of tackling Amboseli's problems.

Great project management as a wildlife area Amboseli could look forward to a gross tourist revenue of between £1,000,000 and £2,000,000 a year by 1980, according to experts who have been studying the area.

The sizeable revenue from stock production, if the cows are to be turned over completely to that, would be about £116,000. Amboseli's current gross revenue from tourism is about £125,000.

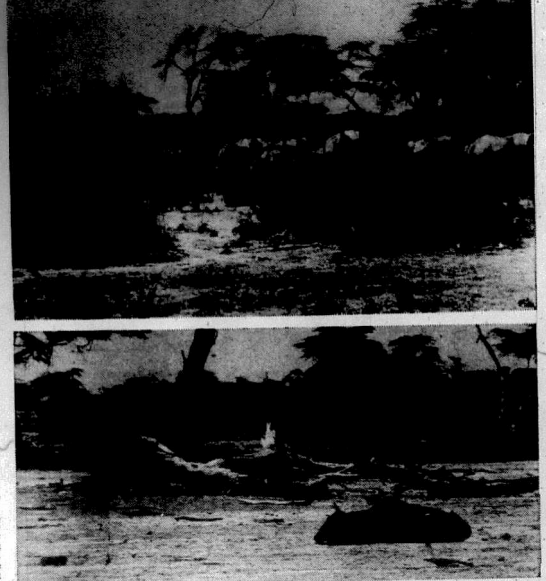

These figures, taken from a preliminary study carried out by the Kenya Wildlife Service, are quoted in an ecological research report by Mr. David Western, who has been working at Amboseli since 1967.

It is understood that Mr. Western's findings and suggestions, which give some new ideas on the long-standing controversy over Amboseli, are being studied with interest by wildlife authorities.

The paper suggests that development in the Amboseli area should be confined and limited to development planning for tourists, particularly in the area of Amboseli, mainly because of lack of information on which to base plans.

Among the most greedy feeders of all herbivorous animals, domestic goats are often more destructive to vegetation than cattle. Flocks like this are common in the Amboseli area. Above right: Elephants are also destructive feeders and have been blamed for deteriorating conditions in other parts of Kenya, but it is this sort of herd that the tourist pays to see. Lower right: In times of drought cattle are more vulnerable than game. This cow died about 100 yards from water, in an area where all available grass had long since been cropped to ground level.

preserve game areas as the essential base of the tourist industry.

In wildlife management the aim was usually to foster efficient use of the land, both ecologically and economically, but this had to be modified at times to take account of social and other problems.

In this case the best use for Amboseli was at a game-viewing area, but the needs of the resident Masai must also be considered.

The area had too low a rainfall and too saline a soil to produce food crops. The only mineral resource was meschaum, which was already being mined. The only other alternatives were game viewing and cropping, and livestock production.

The economic outlook proved considerably that even without any sideline, such as cropping, game-viewing offered the best chance for the area, but it had to be remembered that the Masai in the reserve owned 20,000 cattle and 5,000 sheep and goats.

The Amboseli basin was their traditional source of water in the dry season, and it was probably only the recent increases in livestock that had produced serious competition with wild game for food.

"Any land use proposal for Amboseli will necessarily have to consider the alternative areas that the Masai could move to in the event of vacating certain areas for game viewing," Mr. Western said, and went on to suggest that plans should, for the first time, include offering of land to the Masai as part of the area's profits.

It was necessary to maintain the social stability of the area if plans were to succeed.

If the existing sanctuary area was extended to about 150-200 square miles, and strictly observed, this would be sufficient to conserve the wildlife.

This would involve moving many of the Masai to points outside the sanctuary to which water could be piped from the swamps.

In a separate paper, Mr. Western explained the significance of his proposal that the sanctuary area should be extended from 30 to 150 or 200 square miles.

During the rainy season Amboseli game ranges over about 770 square miles, and competition with cattle for food is slight but in the dry season about 95 per cent of the species which are dependent on water are concentrated into about 190 square miles around the swamps.

Vegetation in this smaller area grows only during the rains, food for both cattle and game is limited to what is available at the end of the rains — making competition much more significant.

A point that has been made by other observers is that a larger area than 30 square miles is needed if Amboseli's tourist development is to progress on a par with the rest of the country's.

Given an adequate growth of facilities the present gross revenue from tourism could be multiplied by from four to eight times, but the maximum revenue from potential expansion in the 30 square miles would only be about double the present level. Even this would stretch the area to its limit.

There is also the possibility that, if water supplies were provided in new areas for livestock, these areas would offer better grazing than the Masai enjoy at present and the opportunity to increase their herds even further without damage to the food supply.

The rhino is a browser and does not compete with cattle for food. The Amboseli rhino has a reputation for good nature and accepting calmly the activities of camera-toting tourists.

Living standards improving rapidly on Pemba Island

Great things are being done on Pemba Island, says the Regional Commissioner and Member of the Zanzibar Revolutionary Council, Mr. Khamis Saburi.

Today every peasant has land to grow cashew, coconut, and in fact, all his requirements.

Pemba, houses in the villages are surrounded by palm fields and there is so much to eat. Very few permanent farmers ever visit the island to buy food.

This is an achievement of no mean importance," Mr. Saburi commented. "We are almost self-sufficient in food, for we even export surplus foodstuff to Zanzibar."

Every time a steamer calls on Pemba, 600 passengers, 600 chickens and eggs and many other kinds of food.

The over abundance had had no effect on prices of foodstuffs on the Pemba island. Prices rose at their rock bottom.

For instance, for coconut, for instance, cost 10 and 15 cents in town, in the rural areas it sold for 5 cents.

There was in sharp contrast with Dar es Salaam where the cost of a coconut had gone up 20 cents. The Government had to resort to price control.

To fix the maximum price of a coconut at 40 cents had now been decided. Landless people each getting an acre. About half of the available arable land in Pemba had so far been distributed.

Pemba Island aimed at having Pemba arable and under cultivation in two or three years' time in order to make Zanzibar self-reliant in food.

Food, clothing and shelter were the three basic needs. As regards shelter, the Revolutionary Council was rapidly going up at Madungu and Ole in Wateh and Mcheweni, Konde, Mcheweni, Mkwaji and Kengeja.

On education, it was the Government's plan to build as many primary and secondary schools as soon as the number of pupils justified it.

The Revolutionary Council attached great importance to health improvements.

In addition to the old established hospitals and dispensaries, two new dispensaries were already in use at Kivuni and Mcheweni. Three more are being built at Gando, Wambaa and Kialwani.

An ultra-modern hospital was currently under construction with Chinese aid. It would have 75 beds, as against only 20 for the old hospital.

Great improvements had been achieved in individual health. Before the revolution, Pemba people could be picked out by the look of their faces. They all had hookworm symptoms. This was no longer the case. Pemba people were now looking healthy and robust.

New roads had been constructed and the old ones improved to provide an all-weather system of communication right to the village.

The process of road construction continued at a faster pace. Only recently a grow the swamps in Pemba cleared, on a nation-building basis, a stretch of 50 miles from Mkwani to Konde in only five days.

"They have saved the Government 200 million shillings. It is a fine spirit by Pemba women," Mr. Saburi commented.

Development effort in Pemba had greatly been improved and strengthened by the permanent transfer of Junior Ministers from Zanzibar to Pemba.

Five Ministers were now resident in Pemba. They were Mr. Ali (Commerce and Industry), Mr. Ali (Agriculture and Land Reform), Mr. Badawi (Health and Social Institutions) and Mr. Saburi (Education).

Mr. Saburi said: "Now that work is divided between us we help each other and solve the people's problems more easily than before, when I was alone."

Mr. Saburi has been on the island since November, 1965, first as Area Commissioner and later as Regional Commissioner.

The Mariannes have landed. Prof Nicholson is the only one who sounds a note of warning. His colleagues say they are a better bet, landed in Southern England is just a big ego-trip, as they go to photograph the island, and the Mariannes' feat is just the professor barely escapes with his life.

In the second round of the battle the Mariannes, using their flash, ray on their 100-ft tall fighting tripod, all but vanquish the British Army and the R.A.F. jets, and England is in danger. The whole world is agitated and nothing seems to be able to stop the creatures, with bodies like jets of wet leather.

That is where the Voice of Kenya, a known service director of the 2pm Sunday paper and invited to film the 2 1/2 hour feature which is to be the last to a hit was quoted at the Voice of Kenya at the Voice of Kenya commented on the fact which is finished. It was just three separate stories and now we have The Crabtree Kid.

He did say though that perhaps the matter would bear looking into, as all those who have been looking to this excellent radio version of H. G. Wells' 'War of the Worlds' may get to know how it all turns out.

For once one of those supercilious news reporters in a documentary got a verbal slap in the face when he asked Governor George Wallace of Alabama if he thought the murder rate among Negroes had gone up owing to the various forms of oppression that have been practised in America over the last few years.

In the Granada documentary 'War of the Worlds' screened on Monday the Governor told the reporter, who was never mentioned and said 'You've got to go to hell to ask me about oppression. There's your country (Britain) who isn't even in Kenya, Britain is British citizens, you British live never heard such a damn fool question in all my life.

There is one saving grace about the incident: Granada did leave that item in.

There was another fine N.B.C. documentary on Tuesday. It was all about the French Army, past and present, and its role in history, yet undoubtedly one of the most suffering.

It traced the tale of the army's mudrouters from the First World War, through the Second to Dien Bien Phu and the retreat from Indochina, Algeria, Morocco and Africa.

Many retired generals gave their impressions and one called 'Captain X', a serving officer, agreed to talk to the camera only if he was in no way identified. This was the rough outline of his face as he sat with his back to a window.

He, and others, told how the Army had to resort to torture in Algeria. One woman was brought to the camera only if he was in no way identified. This was the rough outline of his face as he sat with his back to a window.

When came the Second World War there the image of a well-equipped ready army did not live up to the reality, an army hounded by the tremendous casualties of the war only a generation before.

The 1940 defeat was in no small way due to this. The officers who were lieutenant and captain at Verdun - and who survived - were school and general officers 20 years later and they could scarcely be called veterans.

Then came peace, but still France wanted to hold on to her empire. She only accepted the loss of her empire after thousands of casualties in China and North Africa.

we could not find them by ourselves so at the end we turned him. After an hour he talked, we put the bombs and saved many lives.

The film, made before the recent change in regime in France, saw the French Army as incapable of matching the role envisaged for it by the then Government of France. It would not, without massive outside support, be more than a nuclear capability.

The United States attained its independence on July 4, 1776, with the adoption of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress. "We believe these truths to be self-evident," this historic Declaration stated, "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

On the Anniversary of our own nation's independence, Americans are mindful of the great

We Americans in Kenya, both in an official and in a private capacity, feel privileged to be living in this beautiful country, and proud to stand alongside the Kenyans and to be contributing in a very modest way, to the steady forward surge so evident in Kenya under President Kenyatta's wise and dynamic leadership.

On our own independence day we Americans salute President Kenyatta and the leaders and people of the Kenyan nation for their achievements, both in building a just and progressive nation and in developing a society where Kenyans of all races are working side-by-side towards a common purpose.

The parallels which exist between our two nations make our relationship and co-operation with Kenya natural and satisfying. In the ahead we look forward to a continuing warm and flourishing association.

President Nixon meets the Kenya Vice-President, Mr. Moi, during a visit by Mr. Moi to America. The Kenya Ambassador to the U.S., Mr. Leonard Kibinge, looks on.

Two nations united by the same goals

Kenya when during Vice-President Daniel Arap Moi's visit to the U.S. that same month, he declared: "The American people admire the efforts of Kenya and its people to further the economic and social progress under the able leadership of President Kenyatta. We are pleased that we have been able to achieve through your own means this independence."

Mr. Nixon emphasized the parallel objectives of Kenya and the United States, which have generated the harmonious relations between the two nations.

"In Kenya you speak of Harambee—'Let's all pull together.' In the United States we say the United States is E Pluribus Unum—'One composed of many.' In both countries the concept is one of creating unity out of diversity in order to advance the common good," Mr. Nixon declared.

The foundation of Kenyan-U.S. cordiality and co-operation in day-to-day relations is built on the similar way the two countries look to the task of economic and social development in Kenya.

A parallel bond as a cultural harmony developing simultaneously in both nations in which appreciation of African cultural traditions is attaining ever greater importance.

The similarity in approach toward nation-building is remarkable. Both nations start from the same assumption that the key to the economic and social development of Kenya is the development of Kenyan agriculture.

Both nations are pragmatic in their approach to Kenyan development, seeking a pluralistic society in which both public and private sectors are encouraged to contribute their maximum to the growth and stability of the nation.

Both countries have recognized the enormous importance of regional co-operation in achieving the development of the countries of East Africa. And Kenya's firm commitment to the self-help principle has greatly increased the effectiveness of foreign aid.

American interest in helping develop Kenya's economy began before Kenya became independent. In the 31 years since Independence, U.S. assistance to Kenya has amounted to a total of $27,240,000 while another $9,900,000 in assistance has been made available as Kenya's share of regional U.S.A.I.D. activities in the three East African nations.

In the United States, Government officials and economists had high praise for newly-independent Kenya's decision to take to heart the lesson of history that today's successfully industrialized economies had their foundations in agriculture.

This was the case with the United States, which set out 101 years ago to establish a viable agricultural economy and developed from that base into today's highly industrialized society. This parallel was also seen in the development of nations such as steel mills, jet aircraft, etc.—there is no problem in providing for Kenya's needs, which are based on a sound, logical desire to begin at the beginning— with agriculture as the basis for which future development will stem.

In the area of technical assistance provided to Kenya by the U.S., totaling $17,400,000 to date—the largest concentration has been in agriculture.

Food grants and loans to offset shortages and famine; construction loans; assistance to the Kenya Police Air Wing; advisers working with the Government's radio and television stations; its income tax administration; the Port of Mombasa Authority; training of pilots for East African Airways; provision of faculty members for Kenya colleges and universities; and a special project supplying vocational skills in tailoring and the printing trades are among the direct assistance the U.S. is providing to Kenya.

US supported regional research activities in combating malaria, polio, and other diseases, having been developed in science curriculum development and in wildlife control and management provide benefits to Kenya.

Further, with the co-operation of the Government of Kenya, surveys of industrial and agro-industrial investment are carried out by private U.S. companies from time to time, and the U.S. stands ready to promote U.S. investment in Kenya by guaranteeing U.S. investors against loss under various risk circumstances.

And there are other forms of assistance to Kenya, all of which combine to indicate the United States' belief that Kenya has great development potential and an American desire to help Kenya assume a place among the world's developed nations.

However, all this economic and technical co-operation between Kenya and the U.S. is not taking place in a vacuum. On the personal level there are frequent and cordial contacts between officials of the governments of the two nations, most recently exemplified in the 1968 visit to Kenya of then Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and the visit to Washington in May, 1969, of the Kenya Vice-President, Mr. Moi.

President Nixon has made frequent references to the fact that, during his tenure as Vice-President in the Eisenhower Administration, in 1957, and again as a private citizen in 1967, he visited countries on the African continent, including Kenya.

"While I do not know Africa as well as I would like to," he said on one recent occasion, "I have had the privilege of visiting more African countries than any man who has ever been President of the United States."

This familiarity with the nations of Africa and their problems and potentials equaled Mr. Nixon to say in May 1967: "One thing I learned about Africa is that we have a tendency in this nation (the U.S.) particularly those of us who have not had the opportunity to know the continent well, to think of Africa as just one great continent very much the same."

"Now of course even any un- sophisticated observer knows that North Africa is different from Central Africa and that is different from South Africa," the President continued.

"But on the other hand, what I have found as I travelled the continent was impressive. Not one of the countries is the same. The dress is different, there are different religions, there are different governments."

"So when we talk about unity, the kind of unity that will be meaningful for the continent of Africa, it does not mean a unity in which all will be the same. It does mean a unity which will allow diversity," Mr. Nixon said.

Focusing that theme on Kenya, in accepting the credentials of Kenya's new Ambassador to the United States, Mr. Leonard Kibinge, on May 7, Mr. Nixon said: "President Kenyatta, whose people have given him the affectionate and respected title of Mzee, is particularly highly regarded here in the United States because of his insistence that all Kenyans, regardless of race or tribe, should be treated equally."

"That practice strikes a responsive chord here because it is the same type of goal which we have set for ourselves. In a sense this common approach can be seen in our national motto," Mr. Nixon said, referring to "Harambee" and E Pluribus Unum.

The feeling of the Nixon Administration towards Kenya was expressed in February by the then U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Mr. Joseph Palmer, who said that Kenya has a special place in the hearts of Americans.

"We know very well the magnitude of the leadership you have in your country," Mr. Palmer told four Kenyan legislators visiting Washington, "and we know well the philosophical basis on which you are basing this great experiment—this successful experiment in nation-building."

The Assistant Secretary said Kenya has been a leader in building unity in Africa and pointed to the East African Community, which he called a "truly impressive accomplishment, and paid special tribute to what he called the "habit of working in co-operation rather than in rivalry with your neighbors."

President Nixon's own nomination Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs is Mr. David D. Newsom. In that position he will be the U.S. Government's policy expert on Africa in a capacity of command that runs from President Nixon, through Secretary of State, Mr. Rogers, through Assistant Secretary, Mr. Newsom, to the Charge d'Affaires in Nairobi, Mr. Nottelid B. Grove.

Further evidence of the high regard for Kenya in the Nixon Administration was given by the recently appointed U.S. official, Mr. Joseph H. Blanchard, now Director of the U.S. Peace Corps in Nairobi. Mr. Newsom told a Nairobi Press conference on May 16:

"Ten days ago I was sworn as Peace Corps Director by President Nixon. Shortly thereafter, I came to Kenya. This was because

Why do business with International Harvester?

International Harvester is a well-established, permanent, reliable organization with over a century of experience operating in 166 countries of the free world. All of this, however, is no advantage in itself until you learn that International Harvester, although large, pays attention to small things.

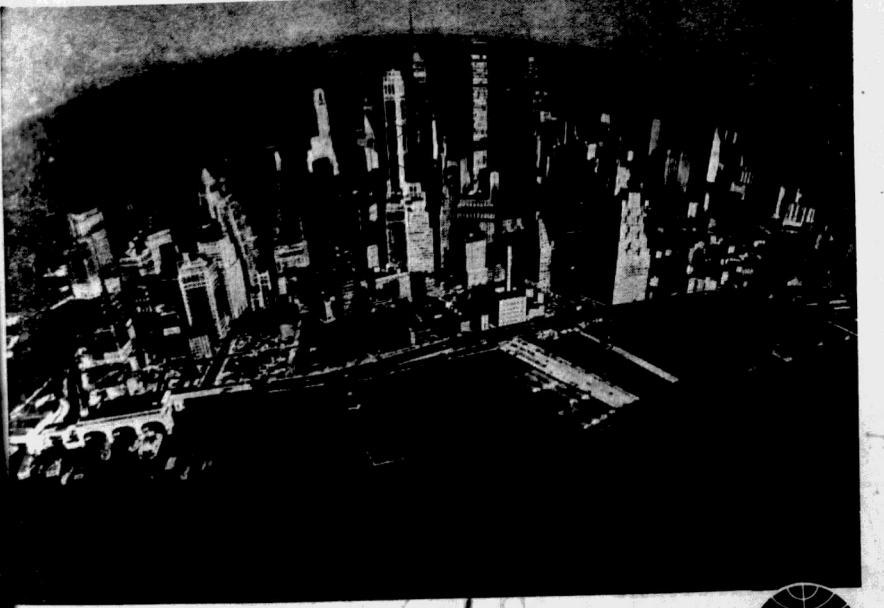

You see, the biggest thing in our world-wide company is still the individual customer. In each country, wherever we sell, manufacture or service equipment, our sales, engineering and production men are intimately familiar with the local problems. Our products are tailored to help solve those problems.

International Harvester products are built in 43 manufacturing and assembly plants established around the world in 15 countries. In fact, there is hardly any kind of farming, trucking or earth-moving job in the world for which we have not designed and built equipment!

Why do business with IH? Because we are able to make our global experience pay off for you — our customer and prospects.

Fourfold growth since uhuru

Kenya's economic growth and political stability have attracted increasing numbers of U.S. business firms to this country, many of which make Nairobi their headquarters for commercial activities throughout the eastern part of Africa.

More than 80 U.S. companies now have offices in Nairobi, representing a fourfold increase since Kenya became independent. Half of these firms engage in marketing, a dozen are manufacturers, and the remainder provide some type of service.

The United States is Kenya's fifth largest supplier, receiving pyrethrum, tea and coffee in exchange for a full range of machinery, transport equipment and consumer goods.

In one sense the ever growing variety of U.S. business operations in Kenya is both a response to, and a reflection of, the Kenya Government's efforts to achieve diversification of its economy.

Moreover, U.S. firms are important catalysts for introducing American technical knowledge and business methods to this market and for training Kenyan employees. Their record of approximately 90 per cent Kenyanisation of personnel is notable.

Other U.S. companies, not yet based in Kenya, send a continuing flow of business visitors here. To these visitors, whose firms already are attracted by this country's trade and investment climate, Kenya offers recreational facilities to suit every interest.

The U.S. Government's current commercial policy is a commitment to four freedoms — freedom to trade, to invest, to travel and to exchange technology.

We wish to expand our commercial relationship with Kenya. Through its Commercial Office on Government Road the U.S. Embassy maintains a constant, mutually beneficial flow of commercial information and assistance to prospective trade and investment partners in both Kenya and the United States.

Firestone gives you the power where it counts, when it counts.

Now the feeling, you want to accelerate out of a tight corner and you find your wheels spinning at 50 m.p.h. while your car does 0 m.p.h. That's the feeling if you haven't fitted Firestone. Firestone tyrepower means you've got the power when you want it, where you want it; where the rubber meets the road. Your engine power is transmitted to the road via your tyres. That's why it makes sense to fit tyres that give you the best possible performance in wet or dry. Firestone tyres not only give you fast getaways, they also stop you faster, safer. We never start anything we can't stop. Firestone tyres give you that reserve margin of performance and safety. They also last a lot longer. You get more mileagepower too. You can get Firestone tyrepower for the same price as ordinary tyres - why settle for anything less?

of the profound respect which the Pracek Court have for the people of Kenya and the progress Kenya is making under the leadership of President Jomo Kenyatta, a man greatly admired in the United States.

The following day, Mr. Frank J. Shakespeare, head of the U.S. Information Agency, arriving in Nairobi by air. "Nairobi is the focus of my recent trip abroad, being assumed director of U.S.I.E. programmes overseas. The fact that Africa comes first is not accidental.

"My fellow countrymen place great importance on increasing mutual understanding between Africans and Americans. We aim to encourage a greater two-way flow of information between the countries of this great continent and the United States. Mr. Shakespeare said, adding:

"Never before has there been greater interest about things African in my country. Americans are eager to learn more about the continent, which has been a major source of their spiritual and cultural heritage.

The U.S.I.A. Director referred to the fascinating rediscovery in the United States of the nation's African cultural roots and traditions, not only among the 22,000,000 Americans of African descent, but which is permeating the entire population, now over 200,000,000.

Today, this African cultural renaissance is manifested in the arts and in the study of history, but perhaps most importantly in evolving American attitudes.

In popular music, for example, the great American Negro composer Duke Ellington has, for 40 years, been telling the story of his race's African heritage. For his listeners were predominantly Negroes.

Today in the United States, the Ellington message is received by both Negro and Caucasian, and this new awareness was cited by President Nixon on the occasion of Ellington's 50th birthday in late April when the world-famous musician received the highest award the U.S. can bestow upon a civilian.

Appreciation of the place African heritage and tradition play in American life is becoming increasingly apparent in the works of our Negro composers and composers of other races, whose music reflects these bonds. It is characterized as "progressive," a term which has been used to describe the Afro-American cultural heritage as a source of representative American music. In other words, in music as in other arts, rejecting cultural frontiers into the past is now considered progressive.

It is this same movement in American music which has given rise to the nationalistic and patriotic feelings of its exponents, such as Buddy Guy, now an internationally known artist, who recently performed his "soul music" in the wellspring of its inspiration, Africa.

Since the mid-1940s has been characterized as "progressive," a term which has been used to describe the Afro-American cultural heritage as a source of representative American music. In other words, in music as in other arts, rejecting cultural frontiers into the past is now considered progressive.

The slogan "Black is Beautiful" is no longer simply a rallying cry of militant Negroes in America. Today, it is the theme of a cultural movement based on the new awareness of the African roots and traditions in American life.

This is seen in current women's clothing styles, which increasingly are based on African styles, colours and patterns; and in the manner and women pattern their hair styles after the traditional African styles. As American Africans begin to appreciate their cultural heritage, Kenya's Africans are beginning to show a parallel awareness.

The Kenyan, prior to independence, sought to develop appreciation of Western culture, tending to feel that his tribal culture and his traditions were unworthy. Today, the same Kenyan is in the midst of the same process. American Negroes are experiencing — developing pride in and understanding of African culture.

Within the past several years a Kenyan publishing industry has begun to flourish for young Kenyan writers. Kwana National Theatre is "rediscovering" traditional dances and forms of expression which are part of this culture and the young Kenyan is beginning to take pride in his own language and tradition.

On the cultural level, the parallel between Kenya and the United States reach all parts of both societies and add to the cordiality and cooperation between the two nations. President Nixon has emphasized this in the development of pride in and understanding of African culture.

Given this background, it is understandable what relations between Kenya and the United States are so warm and cordial as they appear to be from the official press publicity of the new U.S. administration, which in turn reflects these bonds.

In the area of American policy, this revivalist movement in Africa and in those areas already been seen in the Nixon Administration. The Secretary of State Mr. Rogers declared in March that the U.S. "retreat" from the commitment to the stabilization majority-party proposals in Southern Africa. It is this same movement in American music which has given rise to the nationalistic and patriotic feelings of its exponents, such as Buddy Guy, now an internationally known artist, who recently performed his "soul music" in the wellspring of its inspiration, Africa.

three men in a momentous mission

...gazing at the world, they will set up a small television camera. More than a thousand million pairs of eyes on earth are expected to follow their every motion, and share with them the unprecedented scenes confronting men on the moon.

While the world watches, the two men, in about three hours outside their craft, will collect rocks and other surface material in plastic bags and metal boxes, then install these scientific instruments on the moon's surface.

One of these instruments is a miniature seismic station that will automatically transmit information about moonquakes to earth. Another is a laser mirror that reflects laser beams back to earth so that scientists can measure distances to the moon to within inches.

The third instrument traps particles ejected by the sun onto the air-free moon, and the astronauts will bring this instrument back with them to earth for scientific study of these particles.

Scientists will be busy for many months, perhaps for years, extracting information from these extraordinary sources which many consider the most valuable research findings of the century.

Yet, momentous as the scientific harvest from Apollo-11 may turn out to be, it is only a peripheral bonus of the mission. The purpose of Apollo-11 is basic as any other departure from Cape Canaveral can be. To demonstrate that it can be done — that men can travel to the moon, land there, then return safely to earth.

Eight years ago — in May 1961 — President Kennedy asked, and the U.S. Congress agreed, that the United States set itself the national goal of landing men on the moon in this decade.

From that decision emerged by far the most massive technological non-military mobilization of men and materials in history.

Scientists and engineers, blue-collar workers and administrators, technicians and clerical employees — eventually more than 400,000 of them — participated in the designing, building, testing and operation of the machinery required for the assignment.

Rockets and spacecraft, tracking antennas and computers, launching facilities and recovery systems were needed. Astronauts had to be selected and trained for tasks no one had ever attempted before — and men of which could not even be simulated on earth.

Superlatives abounded. It seemed that almost everything connected with the project was either the largest, the softest, the most powerful or the most exquisite of its kind.

The Saturn moon rocket, which fits all of these adjectives, comprises, together with the Apollo spacecraft, more than three million separate parts. These must work together with a reliability of 99,999 percent if the moon landing flight is to succeed.

Drawing on the accumulated knowledge of 25 centuries, and harnessing everything learned and recorded by mankind in virtually every branch of science and technology, U.S. space planners began developing the concepts and developing the equipment they knew would be needed for their monumental endeavor.

It was a step-by-step development programme that led first to two manned sub-orbital flights (up into space and return without entering orbit) in 1961.

These were followed by four relatively short earth-orbital missions in tiny one-man capsules in the Mercury programme in 1962 and 1963. Then a 20-month period in 1965 and 1966 saw completion of ten flights (one of nearly two weeks duration) in two-man Gemini craft.

For the equipment, the advancing project represented, increasingly grueling tests of abilities to withstand the stresses of weightlessness and excess gravity, temperature extremes, atmospheric pressures and unusual acceleration and deceleration forces.

No materials or equipment had ever been deliberately exposed to such demanding conditions. Spacecraft guidance and control devices became increasingly sophisticated.

For the astronauts — and, in a way, for their ground support crews — these developmental flights called for skills and knowledge in electronics and navigation, celestial mechanics and remote communications in an environment never before experienced by men, and for physiological and psychological stamina under conditions never before endured.

Simultaneously with these manned flights, the United States from 1961 through 1968 sent 21 unmanned spacecraft to the moon and its vicinity, and 13 of these returned more than 100,000 photographs from low-altitude moon orbit or from near or on the moon's surface.

Photographs from these craft — Rangers, Surveyors, Orbiters — have been selected from the 52 almost as detailed and accurate as maps of the earth.

Late in 1968, three astronauts tested America's new moon craft in the 11-day earth-orbital Apollo-7 flight (after six unmanned test flights with the craft). The unqualified success of that mission led to an even more daring exploit — the crucial Apollo-8 flight in December 1968 in which three astronauts orbited the moon 10 times at the altitude of about 70 miles and returned safely to earth.

In March 1969 the Apollo-9 flight gave the Lunar Module moon-shuttle vehicle its first manned try-out in a 10-day earth orbital mission, and in May the Apollo-10 astronauts orbited the moon 30 times, and two of the astronauts used the Lunar Module to descend to within about nine miles of the moon.

Thus, as the Apollo project now nears its climax, one task remains undone, one question unanswered

Parks officials end U.S. tour

The group of American and Kenyan officials who have been touring the National Park Service in Washington, D.C., and the Executive Mansion White House, ended their tour of the United States on Monday, July 10, after a visit to the National Park Service employee (center) and left to right: Mr. N. D. Njoroge, Mr. H. O. Ogunniyi, Mr. John Keny and Mr. W. A. O. Akoko.

The mature independence of the U.S. has given it a unique ability and opportunity to extend a helping hand in the development of African countries, most of whose independence is less than one-tenth as long.

In the case of Kenya, independent for 4 1/2 years, U.S. assistance, started before Kenya became independent, has amounted to a total of $27,240,000.

Another $8,000,000 in assistance has been made available as Kenya's share of regional U.S. Aid activities in the three East African Community nations. These would include such activities as the University of East Africa, Nairobi, education, income tax collection, forestry and harbours, and agricultural research.

Of the total direct aid to Kenya, $15,200,000 has been in the form of food grants and loans to offset shortages and famines caused by crop failures in the earlier years of this decade. Another $2,500,000 in food has been shipped to schools and hospitals and for feeding of the school children in famine-stricken areas.

Construction loans, now direct to Kenya and through Kenya's regional sharing, have amounted to $2,000,000. They have included loans to construct the Nairobi Water Supply and the Kenya Polytechnic Institute, for the expansion of the Port of Mombasa, loans for buildings for the University of Nairobi, for Egerton College, for Barotsi Training Centres and for many smaller purposes and projects.

The total included $10,000,000 loan to the East African Development Bank to be repaid to private business firms in the East African countries.

In far the most varied activities of the largest amount of annual direct aid, $17,500,000, has been provided in the form of technical aid. This category covers U.S. experts working in Kenya to assist in many areas and demonstrate proven better ways of doing things.

More than 1,000 man-years of technical aid have been provided in the form of technical aid. This category covers U.S. experts working in Kenya to assist in many areas and demonstrate proven better ways of doing things.

advised $1,640,000. It has been supplied in the form of vocational agricultural training in certain rural secondary schools, preparing teachers of academic subjects by training abroad helping to improve the teaching of English in the primary schools and giving correspondence courses in secondary school teachers, using the government's Voice of Kenya radio facilities.

Community Development and the National Youth Service have been supported by tools, vehicles, commodities, heavy construction machinery, and technical advice to a total of $1,600,000.

Study trips abroad for members of the civil service and government officials have been supplied to a total of $24,000.

Advisors and aircraft have been supplied to the Kenya Police Air Wing. Advisors are working with the government's radio and television stations, its income tax administration and Port of Mombasa Authority. Training of pilots abroad has been supplied for East African Airways.

Professors have been supplied for the Nairobi Veterinary Faculty and for the University College, Nairobi. Tutors are continuing to be supplied to Kenya's teacher training colleges. A special project is supplying vocational skills in tailoring and in the printing trades.

Kenya benefits directly from U.S.-financed regional research activities in contagious disease, pneumonia, in major cereals development, in science curriculum development, and in wildlife control and management. Kenya's current annual maize production is already benefiting from research begun some years ago.

With the cooperation of the Government of Kenya, surveys of industrial and agro-industrial investment are carried on by private U.S. companies from time to time. Also with Kenya's cooperation, the U.S. stands ready to promote U.S. investment in Kenya by guaranteeing U.S. investors against loss under various risk circumstances.

Also outside the U.S. aid figures cited above are U.S.-financed scholarship programs, some of which have been given scholarships in these programs. In addition, U.S.-financed programs of scholarships in African countries are available to Kenyan students. Still another U.S. aid program in Kenya is a guarantee of upwards of $100,000 in life insurance for Nairobi City Council members. U.S. private insurance companies are glad to join the U.S. effort. The United States believes Kenya has great development potential and is glad to join the U.S. effort in extending a hand to the people of Kenya in the immediate future, may take its place among the developed nations of the world.

These are the Kenyans who are being helped to take the places of U.S. technicians who are gradually being phased out. Many of them have already returned to Kenya and are doing their part to aid in the country's development.

For example, a concentration of technical assistance has been in the area of water supply. Kenya's water supply is still in a primitive state. By 1969, it will have increased 100 percent. The activities are being carried out.

CHILDREN'S STORY
Peggy's home-made dress made her belle of the ball

Peggy let me see the dress. Peggy looked at her mother again and again.

"You're too young to wear that in the night year you want to go to the dance?"

"But all my friends are going to the dance. Please let me go," Peggy pleaded.

"No, you're too young," her mother said. "You'll have to wait until you're older."

Later on the morning her friends Rena and Elizabeth came round to ask if she was going to the dance. They found Peggy weeping.

"I can't possibly go," she said in despair. "I've only got an old ragged dress to wear."

"Ask your mother to make a new one," Rena said.

"I can't do that," Peggy said. "She'd say I'm too young."

"Well, you could make a dress out of old clothes," Elizabeth suggested.

"That's a good idea," Rena said. "You could make a dress out of old clothes."

"You can't do that," Peggy said. "My mother would be angry."
