A PROMISING KENYA INDUSTRY

The production of re-ar pens appears likely to be the most promising business opportunity in Kenya after war. Since that time has been restricted, the market has remained open to the Kenyan manufacturer from the amount exported from the United Kingdom. The growing dependence on the United Kingdom for the supply of re-ar pens has led to a steady increase in the demand for such pens in Kenya.

PROTECTED AGAINST SMUT AND OTHER SEED-BORNE DISEASES

The fungus or spores of Smut, and other seed-borne diseases, cannot attack protected seed in storage. When seed has been properly treated with Agriplan G every grain is virtually sealed in a germ-proof pocket. This fine powder does not only envelop and destroy spores already on the seed, it also affords protection against re-infection. It stays around every grain in storage, in the process of planting or sowing, and it still gives protection when fungi in the soil try to undermine your crops.

Agriplan G is obtainable from the K.F.A. COOPER & NEPHEWS, S.A.I. (Pty.) Ltd., Box 196, Nairobi.

PUNISHMENT OF WAR CRIMINALS

We have not yet had any clear statement from any authoritative source as to the grounds for or the manner in which the British are to proceed for the war are to be made to suffer for their part in it. There is no possibility of legally punishing such men as the Japanese, the Germans, the Italians or the Goering because there is no international law which is binding on them. It is being held that international law is applicable to the war, but that it is not binding on the Japanese because they are not a party to it. This means to exclude the Japanese from the international law which makes them responsible for the war. It is being held that the international law is not binding on the Japanese because they are not a party to it. This means to exclude the Japanese from the international law which makes them responsible for the war.

V-DAY MEMORIES OF A SOUTH AFRICAN WAR CORRESPONDENT

Months That Nairobi And The Springboks Will Remember

By CAROL BAXTER

The first South African War correspondent to be killed in action.

It was a hot day in Nairobi, Kenya, in the early months of the war. The air was thick with dust and the ground was parched. The soldiers were tired and the supplies were low. But they were determined to hold their ground.

The first South African War correspondent to be killed in action was a young man named... He was a brave and dedicated man who had come to Africa to report on the war. He was killed in action during the battle of... His death was a great loss to the world of journalism.

The Springboks will remember the months that Nairobi and the South African War correspondent spent in Africa. It was a time of great hardship and sacrifice, but also of great heroism and courage. The Springboks will never forget the men who fought for their country and their freedom.

From the best skin, everywhere.

It needs there are some talented make-up decorators among the Army Education Corps N.C.O.s at the Queen's School. The men who are chiefly British troops and strangers to Kenya decided that their men should be made as handsome and attractive as possible. With training from abroad, London, etc. through a few that under conditions of such a nature as to make a good man should be a great success. It is a grand commendation and proof of what can be done with a little ingenuity and a lot of effort.

AUXILIARY POLICE

To the Editor, "A. Standard."
I should like to endorse the opinion expressed by your correspondent in his recent column that a larger and more efficient auxiliary police force would be a great benefit to the Government. I am sure that the Government would be glad to receive such a force, but it is a matter of degree. It is not a question of whether to have a force, but of how large it should be. I think that the Government should be given the right to raise a force of 10,000 men, and to pay them the same wages as the regular police. This would be a great benefit to the Government, and it would be a great benefit to the people.
