Britain's policy on trading with Communist bloc

The prospect of an early end to the fighting in Korea has received interest in the possibility of expanding East-West trade which the need for tight control on exports to Communist countries has become less imperative.

The matter has been given an official British view on trade with Communist world—well so long as British interests are not impaired. Cabinet ministers in Korea—was developed by Mr. Peter Thorneycroft, the President of the Board of Trade.

It could not be stated positively by the Chinese Government that it would be a good idea if the Chinese Government were to expand its trade with Communist countries. Mr. Thorneycroft agreed with Mr. Herbert Williams M.P. that it would be a good idea if the Chinese Government were to expand its trade with Communist countries.

Embargo

Dealing with future policy for the embargo on trade with Communist countries, it is the policy of the United Kingdom to develop trade with the countries of the East without trade and see that the trade with Communist countries is to the advantage of the United Kingdom.

Agitation

West Germany and France are both stepping up their agitation against the Communist Government in China. The United Kingdom is also stepping up its agitation against the Communist Government in China.

Britain—and the world—2 THE PROBLEM OF THE COMMONWEALTH

Help From the United States Important developments and improvements at the parts of the Commonwealth and East and this state of indecision in London, after the war, people of these Islands a new conception of the Commonwealth, which I should like to emphasize.

The Original design of the Commonwealth was to be a free trade area, and it was
 this design in its original form
 which has been preserved.
 The original design of the Commonwealth was to be a free trade area, and it was
 this design in its original form
 which has been preserved.

They believe that the political genius of the British Empire was to create a spiritual world influence which will balance the strictly material power of U.S.A. and Russia.

In all my contacts amongst the leading personalities of the United Kingdom and with the Prime Minister and leading members of the Cabinet, I have found an universal agreement that the spirit of the Commonwealth is not dead.

It is to be expected that the Commonwealth will be reconstituted in a form which will be based on a common economic and political structure.

LITTLE HOPE FOR ENGLA

Miller hits fine century

When the teams went in for tea at Lord's yesterday, Australia were looking forward confidently to victory in the second Test. From 200 to hand over King, England, and with only one wicket down, they had progressed to the expense of a further six wickets to the figures of 279 at tea when their score was 300 for seven wickets.

Highlight of the day's play was the century scored by Kelly Miller who deflected the ball expertly and curved his usual exuberance to make 100 before Wardle bowled him. Short-stop for one wicket when the tourists took their seat without further loss to 160 when England were bowled out by Statham's bowling for 25. In the afternoon the English bowlers had failed to make any impression on the batsmen.

Call for football rules to be standardised

TOUR SHOWED DIFFERENCES

FOOTBALL's international body, the F.I.F.A., must soon get together to iron out some of the rules of the game and the various interpretations of them. This is the main conclusion to be reached from England's recent American tour, writes Dennis Hart.

The main differences concern methods of tackling. The shirt-pulling and the hand-in-the-pocket, which were permitted in England, whilst the American opponents did not allow them.

It all began in a little shop nearly 160 years ago

—AND NOW A WORLDWIDE BUSINESS

IN 1784, Jacob Schweppe, a Swiss, landed in Bristol and began to manufacture soda water in a small chemist's shop.

From that humble beginning has sprung the vast organization of Schweppe's Ltd. which now manufactures and distributes mineral waters in almost all parts of the world.

The end of the 18th century was a time of great popularity for mineral waters, chiefly for their therapeutic value. European society flocked to spas such as Carlsbad and Pyrmont.

George III set the fashion in England by his visit to Cheltenham to "take the waters". In many attempts were made to imitate the waters of Pyrmont, and it was the great English chemist Joseph Priestley who first suggested the idea of impregnating water with "fixed air" or carbon dioxide, by means of a "sque pump".

This suggestion was taken up in Geneva by one Nicholas Pott, who developed the first commercially practical method of manufacturing soda water. He began production in 1780, in partnership with another Swiss chemist, and Jacob Schweppe. They were soon producing as much as a dozen bottles

On his own

Four years later, however, the partnership broke up. Nicholas Pott took his secret process to Paris, where he founded a company which exists and thrives to this day.

At the end of the last century, Jacob Schweppe came to England to set up on his own. Schweppe's Ltd. may therefore claim to be the oldest manufacturer of mineral waters still in active production.

Schweppe seems to have produced from the start. He moved to Bristol in Philadelphia Street, and by 1788 had opened a premises in London in the Berce Street. He was a pioneer through chemistry and a duty of Schweppe was to keep a close bottle as a patient medicine.

Schweppe's soda water was soon recognized by the medical profession as an excellent substitute for natural spa waters. There, as now, frequent colds in bottle form, and far superior to other artificial mineral waters. Schweppe brought several innovations with him from Geneva. His method of impregnating the water with gas was a closely guarded secret.

His bottles had rounded ends so that they could not stand upright, hence their nickname of "drunken bottles", the purpose being to keep the cork stopper from slipping out.

This type of bottle, with the cork secured by a wire, continued in use for over a century. In 1798 he took three Englishmen into partnership, arising from active participation in the business in the following year, and at the same time, through his founder's name and through his own name, the company has been entirely British-owned and managed.

In 1821 the firm of J. Schweppe and Co. was acquired by John Kemp-Welch, whose previous interests had been chiefly in shipping. This was the beginning of a long family ownership which was only ended by the death of John Kemp-Welch's grandson, Bristol, in 1890. It was also the beginning of a long and successful history of the firm which Schweppe's products gained a reputation for quality and the public of Victorian England.

In 1826 the company acquired its first Royal Warrant from the Duke of Devon and his daughter, the Princess Victoria. A new Royal Warrant was issued when the young Princess became Queen in the following year, and Royal Warrants were subsequently granted by seven more kings up to and including the last George VI.

In the Great Exhibition in London of 1851, when the sale of wine and spirits on the premises was discontinued with the lofty ideals of the Exhibition, a refreshment account reader: Wine, spirits, beer, coffee, chocolate, were extremely forbidden; but the most choice, champagne, being neither soda-water abundance... These dates were not expected to be unacceptable to the thirsty throngs and keen appetites of the multitude, it is evident from the tender ministrations for their supply. For the privilege of vending refreshments, together with soda-water, at home of the exhibition, Messrs Schweppe and Co. paid the sum of £2,500/0/0.

But it appears to have been worth it. Sales soared to 17,722 dozen in that year, of which 10,000 dozen were accounted for by the Exhibition.

Popular

From this time on, the business expanded rapidly, production increased, and a popular drink until the close of the century, but the change in public taste was "fierce", and water was added to the popular drinks and ginger-beer lines.

In 1883, a new and larger undertaking, J. Schweppe and Co. Ltd. had to be formed, with additional partners and with the assets of the original firm. In 1897 the name was changed to its present one of Schweppe's Ltd.

Schweppe's Ltd. began with a capital of £200,000. The Earl of March was Chairman, and Mr. J. D. Kemp-Welch, John Kemp-Welch's son, was Vice-Chairman and Managing Director. The factory at Berrers Street was still in operation there was still a branch at Bristol, and other branches had been opened in London, Glasgow, and Calcutta in the Mayers Hill. There was a growing export trade with only 12 other factories, Australia, another factory, and several in the U.S.A.

At the outbreak of the First World War Schweppe's Head Office moved to 100, Strand, London, and the factory at Berrers Street in 1906 was acquired in order to produce a new factory opened at Plymouth.

Schweppes now producing in Nairobi

HYGIENE IS FACTORY KEYNOTE

SCHWEPPES LTD., the British manufacturers of soda, tonic and mineral waters, have established a new factory in Nairobi as part of an Empire-wide expansion programme.

Schweppes (East Africa) Ltd. is the production, their modern plant attached to Messrs. Alcock's premises on the Thika Road cost over £20,000 to install but it is expected to be only the commencement of other factories they will set up in various parts of the East African territories.

Established on this point scheme are six, Bournemouth, four, Gwent and 15 African. Every day they are producing, from the most modern equipment of its kind in East Africa, between 900 and 1,200 dozen bottles of the sparkling drinks that have made the name of Schweppes famous all over the globe.

Responsible points. It is because for this Kenya's present business enterprise. But while bottles all over East Africa drink and enjoy the finished product, few of them will ever know or see the real key to the success of the Schweppes process.

In uniform
This is in the form of vegetable liquids—locked tightly away in a back room at the Thika Road factory. These disinfectant liquids are none other than the original Schweppes fruit essence, prepared from a secret formula, and imported direct from the Schweppes laboratories in Britain.

It is not until a number of pasteurised and mixing processes have been completed that these essences are added to give the Schweppes products the same taste they have enjoyed wherever drinks are served.

Hygiene is the keynote of the new Nairobi factory. The crisp, freshly painted machinery covers floor, is added to by the constant flow of water and condenses of khat shorts and condenses of khat shorts and condenses of khat shorts bearing the crest of the Schweppes organization.

For the management of the new plant, power cuts have caused a secondary headache to the need for a better and cleaner water supply. Already three boreholes are yielding 100,000 gallons of water a day and a few yards from the rear of the factory a deep well is expected to produce another 1,200 gallons a day.

A general view of the Schweppes production line at the new Thika Road, Nairobi, factory. At the bottom of the picture, the bottles are seen leaving the washing machine on a conveyor belt. They are then passed on to the capping and labelling machines which handle an average of 135 dozen an hour.

of the water available to meet their needs. Mr. J. Smith, the company's manager for the British and Africa, explained the installation of the very latest type of purifying equipment. The glass machine which cleanses bottles every ounce of water passed through the filter is believed to be the only machine of its kind in East Africa.

Bottle-washing
Water from the boreholes passes through a pair of wire filters as soon as it enters the factory premises. This contact with metal, however, for great care is taken to see that it is not adversely flavored. From the filters, it is carried to a series of steel and rubber rollers.

At the same time, the mixing of soda and water is carried out in three conditions: (1) soda and water in this type of purifying equipment are also carried through glass tubes for the final mixing with the water and flavoring essence of the final mixture will be carried through the rollers.

The installation of the machinery was supervised by Mr. S. Hodgson, of Nairobi, Nairobi and Africa, who has been in the post of Resident for the new plant since 1951.

General view of the new Nairobi European Hospital as it is today. THE new Nairobi European Hospital, Nurses Home and Staff quarters now being built on a 28-acre site at Harbourside Road will cost £272,000. They represent the fourth phase of the Nairobi European Hospital Association's plan and a milestone in the progress of the project.

Research: The architect, Mr. Eugene Slinger, has set only general guidelines for the design of the buildings. The plan is to construct a modern hospital and convalescent home. The buildings will be of concrete and steel.

Cork floors: It is the view of the architect that a cork floor is the most suitable for a hospital. It is quiet, warm and has a natural finish. It is also fire-resistant and does not absorb moisture.

WATER SUPPLY: The water supply for the hospital will be taken from the Nairobi Water Works. The water will be treated and pumped to the hospital site. The water supply system will be designed to meet the needs of the hospital for 20 years.

LANDS ACQUIRED: The lands for the hospital were acquired from the Government. The land is situated on a hillside overlooking the city. The site is well-ventilated and has a beautiful view of the city.

★ FOYS OF THE FUTURE

The toy trade of Britain, with its eyes firmly fixed on new markets, has to be more than traditional and typical, and its products are designed to offer the greatest value for money. Since widened international attention is accorded to the world's children...

British toy-makers are busy at the manufacture of toys which will appeal to children in all parts of the world. This is not only in the form of the latest variety of toys, but also in the uniformity of the material, which is now the rule.

H. R. SIMMONS describes this year's range of new British toys.

It is also attached to a multi-colored hollow stick. The hollow is inflated by blowing through the stick, given a second if required. In fact, it is a perfect favorite in the nursery. The toy is the best of its kind, and is very popular with boys and girls alike. The modern forward-looking nature of the British toy industry is reflected in the country's "toy" market as "Atom" toys, a rocket-shaped machine that "shoots" a percussion cap. "Rocketing" is the name of the game. "Space-Ship" is a similar toy, and "Saturn" is a model of one of Britain's new aircraft which is also a toy.

Checking the flow of water

NEW UGANDA TEST TANK

The Governor of Uganda, Sir Andrew Cohen, has opened the Protectorate's first calibration tank at the Hydrological Survey Department's headquarters, Entebbe.

The tank, the most modern of its kind, will be used for checking water current meters. It shows all the water in the flow passing through the flowmeter and river, the information on its way to the tank, and the flowmeter itself. The flowmeter will be checked by the flowmeter. The central of the flow will therefore be set to inter-territorial agreement.

In reverse

The Hydrological Survey Department of Uganda is responsible for producing, by means of the river flowmeter, the information on river flow. The information is then available in light of the measurement is taken through current meters which are checked by placing the river flowmeter in the river. Some of the men of the K.A.R. who were in the Coronation parade in London.
Askaris in London
THEY COULDN'T BELIEVE THEIR EYES
Back in Kenya our members of the East African contingent who went to London for the Coronation Amazed of the strange rigidity, the vast crowds and the mechanical bustle of London the Askaris are now having difficulty in convincing their less fortunate countrymen that these things are really so.

Main impressions they have brought back with them from their month's stay in London are the tremendous friendliness of the British people, the use of land in the United Kingdom, the number of people who live there and a host of more amusing tales.
The eight officers and the 30 Askaris who made up the contingent of the East African contingent who went to London for the Coronation...

The Askaris were surprised to find that the British people were so friendly and that they were so interested in them. They were also surprised to find that the British people were so interested in them.
The Askaris were surprised to find that the British people were so friendly and that they were so interested in them. They were also surprised to find that the British people were so interested in them.

Curtailed, but not marred, by the Emergency

DESPITE the Emergency, which considerably curtailed the extent of the Royal Agricultural Society of Kenya show at Mitchell Park last Saturday, many interesting and enjoyable displays were packed into the day. The Show was originally planned to be a special Coronation Year event.

Entries for the horse and cattle sections came from all parts of the Colony and the 2,000 well attended show saw parades of cattle from the Artificial Insemination Centre at Kabete; cars which took part in the grueling Coronation Safari; and the Literary Honours, as well as a massive P.T. display by Nairobi schoolchildren.

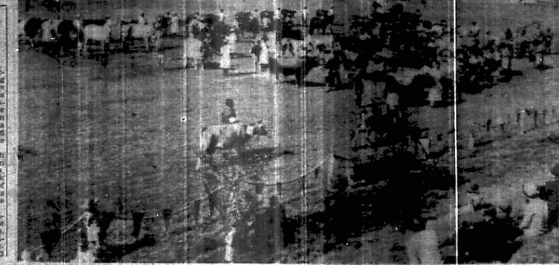

The East African Kennel Club put on a show of pedigree dogs of many breeds and also gave demonstrations of obedience training.

The Kenyan Band of The King's African Rifles provided the music during the afternoon. The Drums and Bugles of The Devon Boat Club were also present.

LEFT: Staff from the Artificial Insemination Centre at Kabete, who are round the show, including Mr. A. S. Maitland, a Chairman, and Mr. A. S. Maitland, a Chairman, and Mr. A. S. Maitland, a Chairman.

TOP RIGHT: The Musical Band, by members of the Nairobi branch of the P.T. Club, played one of the medley air parties evening at Mitchell Park last Saturday. Visitors, girls, and from one upwards, were a lively display of subarctic and jumping designed to improve the training of both the boys and their mounts. There are now 13 branches of the P.T. Club throughout Kenya. Instructions are given by lecturers at rallies, starting the show tonight.

GEORGE CROSS ISLAND HAS ITS TROUBLES

Three ways out suggested

THE mis-undertaking of the Coronation was settled only by the personal intervention of Sir Winston Churchill. It may be that all's well that ends well, but the controversy has not been forgotten in Malta for it goes to the heart of Malta's problem. This is a question of human relationships.

There are other questions—over; general, all powerful, absence of adequate resources, over; lack of water.

The Chairman of the Board would also, of course, be likely to be understood by some of our other than Maltese.

Part of Britain?

Several suggestions that the island should form part of Britain have been made. It is difficult to stand back from the idea. Malta had had to call on Britain for help in the past. It has been given other through subsidies or through the development of the island.

Colonial Diary

Malta should be free of the shackles of the British Empire. It should not be a colony. It should be a free state. It should be a free state. It should be a free state.

Change urged

WHERE the 1952-53 C.D.C. report comes to be discussed in the Committee, there will undoubtedly be strong pressure for a change in the Corporation's functional areas. It is suggested that the Corporation should be re-organised to deal with the development of the island.

BIBLE HISTORY IN PICTURES

By the Reverend Frank Bedford

THESE pictures give us a short glimpse of the way in which the romantic story of the translation of the Scriptures is interwoven into the history of East Africa. The tremendous task has been accomplished of translating the Scriptures into 37 different languages.

When the first missionaries came to this country they realized that if the Message of Jesus Christ was to be understood they would have to translate the Bible into the languages of the people. It was a great and complicated task which they faced and how well they tackled it. Some were scholars in Hebrew and Greek; upon others the task was laid unexpectedly; for if they were unprepared but no-one else was available and they made themselves scholars by their devotion to their intricate task.

Most of the languages were only spoken and had no written form. The Bible became the first literature of the people.

As a result of their work complete Bibles are available to the African peoples of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika in Swahili, Kikuyu, Luo, Lushoto, Luhya and Nandi; and this will soon also be true in Kikamba and Luo besides many other languages in which the New Testament is complete.

It is very fitting that in the midst of Kenya Bible Week we should remember anew with deep thankfulness the names of men like Krapf, Pilkington, Steere, Binns, Hatcher and a host of others who gave of their best that the Bible, which we of the British Race love so much, should be available to all men, irrespective of race or colour. These pictures tell only a little of this story. The rest is written on the pages of imperishable history.

On the left, Canon H. J. and Mrs. Butler see the completed Union Swahili Bible for the first time. Canon Butler was one of the two main translators. Below "Bible women" at Fort Portal, near the Rwenzori, Uganda. This picture appeared in the illustrated Church of St. John of which 50,000 copies were sold at the time of the Festival of Britain. Below left, the first unbound copy of the Swahili Bible arrives in Tanganyika.

Above, Philip Wankler, one of the supporters of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Nairobi. The chair pictured below belonged to the Rev. George Pilkington, who translated the Bible into Luo. On his journey, he kept his manuscript in the drawer under his seat.

The Aston Guitars, which all Britons admire the new Bibles with great interest.

The first copy of the Union Swahili Bible arrived by Camel at Entebbe.

The new Swahili Bible reaches Kilimanjaro on the shores of Lake Tanganyika.

A JOURNEY INTO THE PAST

I HAVE just been on a journey. A journey into the past. The only journey which I have ever made. I have been to the Victoria Nile, the Nile of the Victoria Nile, and I have seen the Nile as it was in the year of the Nile.

EULOGIUM TO KENYA

KENYA, dear Kenya, land of my adoption, I would not change thee, even had I the option. Some day, perhaps, I shall see thee, but I shall never see thee as thou art now. Working under sunny skies, the Kenya rose and their flowers, as we have nurtured, to thee thy thanks are due. The after years have been wonderful, and you have been kind to me. Long years ago, when I first came to you, I was a boy. Over my head, though, by any name, she's known. Now looking back through heavy years of tears, Kenya I thank thee for the gift of years. Pleasantly remembered, the splendour of health and the life of the Nile.

First to Holborn

FIRST we went to a house in Holborn, London. The only house, I believe, in the history of a London street, which has ever had just been home built. It was a house which had been built in the year of the Nile. I had seen the Nile, and I had seen the Nile as it was in the year of the Nile. I had seen the Nile as it was in the year of the Nile. I had seen the Nile as it was in the year of the Nile.

And we who love the Nile, can only say, "The Nile!" Dear Kenya, may thou not suffer to have thy name forgotten. Some things are past, but some things are still to be seen. And have of thee, in the past, the words to read: So, with Mother's aid, and heartiest thanks, we follow Dear Kenya, returned to us, from some special appointment.

A happy, happy Kenya, may thou be the Nile, as you are now, upwards at least, as ever. MARGUERITE MALLETT, Born July 7, 1866, Apr 82.

90 years ago

CHERRY told me the tale of the beginning of her great love of Kenya. She was only three years old when she was taken to her home in Kenya. There she met the man who was to be her husband. He was a man of many talents, and she was a girl of many charms. They were married in the year of the Nile.

let her write for her 20th anniversary. I asked her, during the interview, if I might smoke. And it was wonderful. I shall smoke until I die. I was 21 years of age when I met her. I was 21 years of age when I met her. I was 21 years of age when I met her.

 Dear Sir,
 I had my birthday 93 years on Monday 6th July, and in the 30 years of my life I had the privilege of being married to a woman who was a true friend and a true companion. I have been married to her for 62 years and I have never known a day when she was not my true friend and my true companion. ‘MUSIC FOR DANCING’

One of the most popular programmes broadcast in the G.O.S., Victor Silvester's 'Music For Dancing,' was launched five years ago and is still bringing delight to an almost infinitely varied audience.

For five years Victor Silvester's programme has been a constant source of pleasure to a host of different ears who, in different ways, are attracted to the rhythmic perfection of Victor Silvester's music.

His approach to the music is a blend of the modern and the traditional, and his sense of rhythm is a constant source of pleasure to a host of different ears who, in different ways, are attracted to the rhythmic perfection of Victor Silvester's music.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SUDAN

NANCY CRAWSHAW, the writer of this article, is an English journalist who has made a special study of the Middle East.

WHEN Britain became responsible for the administration of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan after her conquest in 1898 from the Mahdi's followers, they inherited a wilderness. Land and food had broken down and disease was rife. The new essential step towards prospering country, and re-education of the Sudanese, was given by the formation of medical service, and today the bulk of the population received every year and often in remote districts, western roads of medical assistance.

It was in 1929 when the Military Government was heavily engaged with the malaria problem, that the Sudanese medical service, and today the bulk of the population received every year and often in remote districts, western roads of medical assistance.

In agriculture spectacular results have been achieved through irrigation and land reclamation. Unimproved agricultural lands today being advanced to the Cash Taker and many other districts and fields have been turned into fertile soil. In the Sudan to develop the Central Sudan.

In the South-West territories, the abundant and almost unexploited source of Africa. This source has three main parts, all of which have the same living standards of a country which is covered with thick well-irrigated soil. First is the introduction of such crops, such as cotton, and the increasing of existing fields. Second is the expansion of factories to make cloth, oil, soap and sugar. Third is the sale of these factor products. Another should also be made of the Jangil investigation team and a group of British Kenyan experts who are now preparing a long-term programme of construction work in the Sudan.
