Big Four settlement 'suicide' for Israel

The Israeli Defence Minister, General Moshe Dayan, said acceptance of the Big Four powers' terms for a Middle East settlement would mean Israel's 'suicide' when he addressed students at a village on the southern slopes of Mount Carmel.
He said he had received no official complaint from the drivers of Car 2, a Ford 20M driven by Soderstrom and Palm, that Joginder Singh had been allowed to leave a control before them although they had arrived there first, a few seconds before.
Thirty-one cars, from the 85 started, arrived at the final point at Nairobi City Hall before it closed yesterday afternoon.
At the finish Robin Hillary and Jack Aird looked tired and tense, Robin said of his dramatic crash seven miles from Kilome, the control before Machakos.
"We were on a tight, narrow road when the accident happened..."

Missing stamp cuts short 504's triumph

Standard Staff Reporter
From the pinnacle of unexpected triumph in the Sahara, the 504...
The 504, entered by the Peugeot team, was the only car to finish the race. It was put in at the last minute to replace a 404 and was crewed by Hugh Lionnet and Chris Little. It was one of the only two 504s in East Africa, both of which have been sent out for testing. Company officials thought the Safari was the toughest test the new car could have.
Lionnet and Little nursed the car through the first leg and started "pushing" only on the way back to the finishing line. Yesterday it arrived well up with leaders and in the lead on its own terms.
Congratulations were showered on the successful and smiling crew but their high spirits were short-lived. They were told: "You have been excluded!"
The reason they had failed to get a control stamp on their route card at the last but one Uganda control who had failed to stamp the route card had told him he should be the crew to draw their attention to his omission, he said, but he was too busy to do so.
"The car went out in a hurry and failed to get the control stamped."
Chris Little told the East African Standard: "The controller said he should be he was right at my ear but he was too busy. We noticed the fact that the card had not been stamped at the next control point, which was Toronto, and the one after that."
"They seemed to be quite happy and at that stage so were we. We then we returned. Preston suffered a similar fate on the Uganda-Kenya border. He had the fault by the time and it was not until he returned to the Baringo area that he was told that he had been excluded because he had not had his card stamped."

Mr. Nixon holds talks on ghetto aid

President Nixon yesterday called his top-level Urban Affairs Council into session at the White House to explore further a national programme to solve the country's domestic ills.
The agenda included aid to city ghettos, health care, job training and special education for Negroes and poor Americans.
The President began his session with a speech on the state of the nation. He said the ghetto situation was a national emergency and that it was not until he returned to the Baringo area that he was told that he had been excluded because he had not had his card stamped.
The President said that he would be making a special trip to the ghettoes to see the conditions for himself. South Vietnam peace TWO-PARTY SYSTEM

President Thieu yesterday outlined a six-point plan for peace in Vietnam and said he would call a conference of all leading political figures to set up two national political parties.
Addressing the opening of the Saigon Parliament, the South Vietnamese President called for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese forces from the country and the international control system and said he would guarantee political rights of former Vietcong after peace.
Referring to his plan for setting up two political parties he said one would be for the Government and headed by himself and the other for the opposition.
South Vietnam would ask its allies to remove their forces as the Vietcong forces were being drawn and violence subdued.
He insisted that North Vietnamese and Vietcong forces must leave not only South Vietnam, but Cambodia and Laos as well.
The plan envisages free elections to decide on the unification of Vietnam, but with the measures in the meantime to promote commerce and cultural exchanges between the two countries as soon as fighting ends.
It calls for an effective veto-proof system of international control and

Six held after sackings

Six Karachi management officials have been arrested and charged under martial law regulations covering the dismissal of employees, a police spokesman said yesterday.
One was accused of making a false report about sackings, and the other five were arrested after workers complained they had been sacked despite an agreement, he said.
Under martial law regulations businessmen and industrialists were ordered to honour wage and service condition agreements reached before the declaration, pending a review.
The spokesman said two policemen were arrested on Saturday and charged with accepting a bribe.

Czechs' social week as troops patrol streets

Police reinforced by soldiers with machine-guns are patrolling the streets of Prague to prevent new outbreaks of anti-Soviet feeling.
The patrols were part of tough restrictive measures introduced by the Government to prevent a repeat of the riotous celebration of the Soviet airline Aeroflot and satellite airlines in Prague and other Czech cities to celebrate the country's ten-hour victory over the Soviet Union 11 days ago.

HOUSING IN EAST AFRICA

Message from the Minister for Housing, Mr. Paul Ngei

The extent to which the need for shelter and its social and economic significance is a significant measure of a country's economic and social progress. It must be every man's ambition to provide adequate accommodation for himself and his family, and it is indeed towards this achievement that individuals are prepared to devote so much of their financial resources.

It is the determination of my Ministry to achieve these objectives as rapidly as possible, by endeavouring to speed the process when every Kenya family will live in a home, whether it is privately-built or Government-owned, which will provide at least the basic minimum standards of health, privacy and security.

It is encouraging to see the development of Valley Field Estate by the Commonwealth Development Corporation and my Ministry will always be ready to welcome any offers by similar organisations to alleviate the country's acute housing shortage.

Investing in happiness

Housing investment must not be overlooked or under-rated in relation to the alternative and apparently more attractive forms of investment, for it has a significant role to play in the social and economic development of an economy.

In fact it can correctly be said that for most families in the world the sort of home they live in affects their happiness more intimately than almost everything else in their environment. Its importance is on health, productivity and the creation of a tolerable family life.

Furthermore, house building generates demand for development and it is a good employer of unskilled as well as skilled labour both in the building industry and in the building materials and components industry. It is, therefore, important that a higher priority must be accorded to the problem of housing by all agencies concerned more than has ever been done before.

The housing problem we are trying to eliminate in Kenya today has been mainly a result of lack of adequate priority to housing investment by the Colonial Government and the lackness in building activities by the private sector during the years of independence.

There has also been a curtailment in leading activities by building societies during the same period. As a consequence the new Government has to inherit a serious housing deficit while at the same time we had to build for the expanding population.

The Government was quick to recognise this problem and to take the necessary steps to meet the challenge before it was too late. Clear policies and principles to govern the development of housing, both rural and urban, were enumerated.

Government funds for housing were increased substantially; loan guarantees and housing-financial institutions established. The consequential effect has been the opening up of a great number of real estate areas in almost all the towns and the beginning of a drive towards rural improvement through housing demonstration.

In the public sector it is encouraging to record housing construction by the National Housing Corporation and the Local Authorities has taken place since independence. Over 200,000 units have been constructed since independence up to October 31, 1967.

There has also been a very encouraging boom in housing construction in the private sector, mainly by domestic developers but also to an increasing extent by foreign developers. The Valley Field Housing Estate now being developed by the Commonwealth Development Corporation is a good example of the contribution of foreign developers.

The magnitude of the problem at the moment is such that the Government cannot be expected to meet the overall housing needs.

It is necessary that our public resources should be concentrated on building low-cost houses in this area where the problem is most critical. This is already being done through the National Housing Corporation. The Government is spending annually a considerable amount of money through the Housing Research and Development Unit in finding ways and means of reducing building costs so that adequate accommodation may be made available to the low-income groups.

At the same time alternate techniques of constructing cheap and decent houses, such as site and service and self-help, are being utilised. Self-help housing which recently started as a pilot project at Langata in Nairobi has now become so popular with persons with a lower income that we are already finding difficulties in meeting the demand of this type of housing.

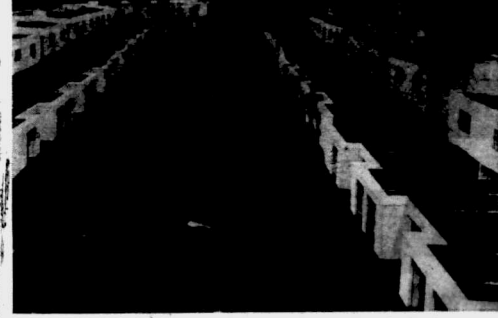

The advantage with this type of housing development is that the owners do not only contribute a certain amount of finance required for development but also participate in groups during construction.

It must be emphasised, however, that the maximum standards must be discouraged. We cannot afford to be luxurious at this stage of development. We must build houses that can be afforded by people without unnecessary financial strains.

It may be pointed out at this stage that the struggle we are all making in tackling our housing problems requires that the houses built must be well looked after and maintained so that their value may be retained to both landlords and tenant. In fact they comprise an important part of our national wealth.

Good housing management can only be successful if it is realised that it is the responsibility of both the landlord and the tenant. Management of housing should not only be limited to the repair, maintenance and raising of revenue but must also be concerned with the needs and demands of the people living inside the units.

The company has also offered operating a National Savings Scheme for Housing. It is intended that this company will soon be the national financial institution for assisting citizens in acquiring their own houses through mortgage arrangements throughout Kenya and for financing high-cost housing estates in the towns.

The Regional Controller of the Commonwealth Development Corporation, Mr. P. M. Wise, hands over the keys to the first ten houses of the Valley Field Estate to the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Works, Mr. R. J. Ouko.

Worldwide role for C.D.C.

Apart from East Africa, the Commonwealth Development Corporation operates in the Pacific Islands, Central Africa, Southern Africa and West Africa, maintaining regional offices in each area.

The Commonwealth Development Corporation was established in 1946 by Act of the U.K. Parliament as a statutory corporation with commercial terms of reference.

Its purpose was, and is, to assist the economic development of the British dependent territories and those self governing territories which have achieved independence within the Commonwealth since 1944.

C.D.C. maintains close relations with territorial Governments, through its regional offices overseas, in order to ensure that its activities are directed in a way best suited for the promotion of the economic development of the territories in which they operate.

The functions of C.D.C.'s regional offices also include the investigation and formulation of new projects in the region concerned. Each regional office is headed by a resident regional controller, supported by an appropriate staff with a sound knowledge of the territories in which they work.

C.D.C.'s head office maintains close relations with U.K. Government departments and representatives of Commonwealth Governments in London. It is also a source of specialist and technical advice, e.g. in the fields of agriculture, engineering, housing, taxation, marketing and law. In addition, C.D.C.'s head office provides centralised services to overseas undertakings: e.g. for recruitment of expatriate staff and for purchase of equipment and stores.

The keynote of C.D.C.'s investment policy is flexibility, as in the case of project C.D.C. is prepared to entertain (so long as they fall within its statutory terms of reference).

It is also flexible as to its partners and associates in development enterprises, and as to the methods by which it is prepared to provide finance.

The projects include a wide range of undertakings in basic development (e.g. electricity and water supply, railways, housing finance), in primary production of processing (e.g. agriculture including small-holder farming, ranching, meat processing, forestry and minerals) and in factories, industrial development agencies and hotels.

C.D.C. is associated financially in numerous projects with territorial governments or their servants, with international and national development agencies, with British and foreign financial institutions and commercial, industrial and agricultural concerns, and with the general public of the territories concerned.

In many instances C.D.C.'s regional controllers include a combination of two or more of these sources of finance. Some projects are managed by C.D.C.; others by commercial partners.

C.D.C. expects sponsors of projects to procure experienced commercial management as well as a substantial proportion of the capital required. If sponsors are unable to obtain suitable management, C.D.C. is prepared, in appropriate cases, to consider making it available.

C.D.C. has undertaken many projects on its own and has provided, and is willing to provide, funds not only in the form of straight loans, but also, in appropriate cases, by way of equity investment, or as loans with "equity features" e.g. loans carrying conversion rights or with the right to participate in distributable profits. In short, it is

C.D.C. has power to invest up to £100,000,000 in any one medium term bank deposit of short term. It has also £100,000,000 available for one time from United Kingdom Exchequer funds. Available capital has so far been placed on this source, interest being paid on government loans at the current rate at the time of issue. Thus, although the Corporation has to pay interest on commercial concerns, it has no other concerns of this kind.

C.D.C. aims to provide a development of a project, and when a project has been successfully established, it is prepared to consider a repatriation on suitable terms, particularly in respect of the country where the project is carried out.

C.D.C. offers a wide range of development services, including its investments in commercial banks (D.C.B.), available to grant consideration by a project must (a) be within the terms of reference.

by a Nairobi City Council official acute shortage of living accommodation in Nairobi is really the most serious problem in the Committee and corridors of the City Council is also one of the main points all over the main main occupation of members of the Council.

housing problem has been brought about by the recent influx of people to the city and the low building activity in the past few years. At the present time waiting lists there are over 20,000 names and the magnitude of the problem in 1962 there were 28,367 people living in one-roomed flats.

At that time 67,810 people were living at an occupancy rate of four and 13 persons. The rents (despite the Rent Control Act) being paid by tenants are controlled housing. They vary from four to eight shillings a room for the built-up areas and 1250 shillings for the built-up areas.

It is unfortunate that many of these agencies have been re-housing and urban improvement projects outside the city and recently. As a result of the unavailability of finance for the development of the last few years, large urban areas in Nairobi have been re-developed by themselves.

These developments have been improved. However, it is clear that the development of the city is being hampered by the fact that the Nairobi City Council, which has always had assistance from other agencies as far as the Nairobi City Council is concerned, there are other agencies as far as the Nairobi City Council is concerned.

The Council of course undertakes research work in the fields which are likely to affect the development of housing in the city. These fields include timber and in 1965, set up after a symposium in City Hall. Another field of research being undertaken is the making of forest corridors.

As an important aspect of the Council activities is the training of personnel in all grades of the building industry. The majority of the design work associated with the development of young graduates is being given in this department. In addition, graduates are sent overseas to work with consultants. At the present time there are over 40 graduates or professional must be compared with the demand, which has been put at between 4,000 units a year. Therefore, in the last six years the supply has fallen short by about 17,000 units in Nairobi alone.

There are of course problems in the building industry, including financial availability of materials, import restrictions, and lack of professional and supervisory and skilled craftsmen, etc.

The city cannot hope to solve any of its problems without the co-operation, confidence and full understanding of the Government. Every effort is being made by the members and officers of the Council to assist the Government with the problems.

It is widely understood that Nairobi's problems on urbanization today are similar to those of Mombasa, Kisumu, Eldoret, Nanyuki, etc. tomorrow. It is felt that the solution being adopted in Nairobi should be made available to the country as a whole. Accordingly, the Government is being kept fully informed of everything the Council is trying to do.

A large-scale study of the city's water needs and sewerage is under investigation and an approach has already been made to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) for financial assistance.

Discussion, field work and analysis of the Corporation are being undertaken to assess the movement of Nairobi towards an expanded metropolitan region.

An empirical transportation grid (one for each of the movement) has already been established. This will be modified and amended as necessary when the transportation study is completed. All operators outside the city are being asked to bear in mind the ability of the people to support the recurrent costs.

The implication of development on the scale envisaged will probably amount to about 280,000 units in the next 12 years, and will continue at this rate or probably greater to the end of the century.

The recurrent costs can be met, but the capital investment requirements are outside the city's capacity. It is necessary that assistance will be necessary and is being sought.

It should be noted that a large proportion of the money currently available for the housing programme is provided by the National Housing Corporation.

In all these studies, it is hoped to produce "urban models" which will give guidance for the urban situation likely to exist in the future.

The Nairobi City Council wishes to help the Government create a capital city which is an asset to the country and economic aspirations of the country.

Homes in the barren land

Fifty acres of barren land in the built-up area of Nairobi's best residential area is being transformed by day into an attractive estate of modern homes and landscaped gardens.

The first phase of the Valley Field housing project has just been completed and the Kenya Government has officially taken possession of the first ten houses.

By the time the project is finished, in the latter part of 1967, 60 houses, 56 maisonettes and flats will show proof of the tremendous co-operation and support of the Government and the Kenya Government, the Commonwealth Development Corporation, the City Council, and other bodies, including the architects, quantity surveyors, contractors, suppliers and ordinary workmen.

The story of Valley Field began in the first quarter of 1967, when the Commonwealth Development Corporation was approached to provide the finance to build housing units for senior civil servants and expatriate officers.

The money involved was large, £625,000 or KSh50,000, and the C.D.C. agreed to provide it on condition that a suitable site could be found and that the architects could produce a plan which included modern homes with a high class finish, but also a good road network and pleasant surroundings.

In addition, because of the acute need for housing, the project had to be phased over the three years so that tenants could move in as soon as possible, without waiting for the final completion of the whole project.

This was a tremendous task for any architect, but one which offered a great professional challenge. Mr. Watson, Watson & Rowder, the Nairobi architects, takes up the story: "This is probably the largest scheme of its type undertaken in Kenya," he said.

"There have been a number of low-cost housing projects, but this, with my knowledge, was the first in which so many high-cost homes were needed."

The initial requirement was a road network which linked with the adjoining Park Estate. When this had been planned satisfactorily, there was a question of the City Council regulations, the Valleys field area has a three-quarter-acre site, but this was too large for the required number of houses and maisonettes. Negotiations were begun with the City Council, who finally agreed to reduce the plot area to half an acre.

"Once we had the go-ahead on this, our next consideration was to give each plot a reasonable frontage and depth, and to design the houses in such a way as to give the overall effect of a good quality garden estate."

This meant planning garages, planting trees and hedges and grass sections of each plot. Then came the designing of the most economic three-bedroom unit. Finally, these types of houses were approved: Type A, with three double bedrooms, separate W.C. and cloakroom, lounge, dining-room, kitchen, bathroom with another W.C.; Type B with two double and one single bedroom, bathroom with separate W.C., lounge, dining-room and kitchen; and Type C which are the same as Type A, except that they are designed on a split-level because of the plots. Each house has a car port and servants' unit attached and covers an area of about 1,200 square feet.

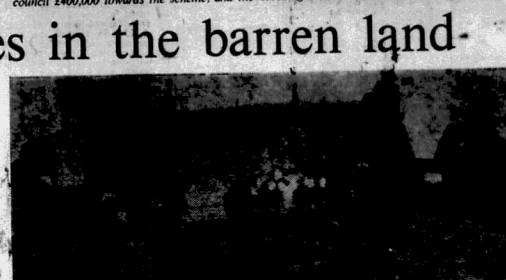

The maisonettes have a lounge, dining-room and kitchen on the ground floor with two double bedrooms on the first floor and cover an area of 920 square feet.

The flats, each of 920 square feet, are to be built on top of the existing adjoining shopping centre. The project includes plans for a primary school to be sited behind the shopping centre.

In order to maintain the garden outlook, all the telephone and electric cables have been placed underground — the first time this has happened on an estate of this type.

Building began in September last year and there are eight phases. Phase I consisting of 10 houses already completed.

Work is continuing rapidly on the Woodley/Kibera Housing Estate which is being built by the Nairobi City Council. The Commonwealth Development Corporation has loaned the council £400,000 towards the scheme, and the Housing Finance Company of Kenya £100,000.

Phase 2 consisting of 14 maisonettes due for completion in May, 1969. Phase 3 consisting of 14 houses due for completion in July, 1969. Phase 4 consisting of 18 houses due for completion in September, 1969. Phase 5 consisting of 10 houses due for completion in November, 1969. Phase 6 consisting of eight houses due for completion in January, 1970. Phase 7 consisting of 22 maisonettes due for completion in June, 1970. Phase 8 consisting of 14 flats due for completion in August, 1970.

All the units are being leased from the C.D.C. by the Government through the Ministry of Works for a ten-year period and in appropriate cases the tenants will be given an opportunity to buy their homes later through finance provided by the Housing Finance Company of Kenya Limited, which is jointly owned by the Government and the C.D.C.

Interior and exterior decoration of the houses is in line with the most up-to-date conception. Fit and colour scheme advice was supplied by Leyland Paints (Kenya) Ltd.

The full story of Valley Field has been an essentially of co-operation. Many organisations, Government, City Council and the private sector, have worked together since its inception in 1967, each with a different part to play and each with a responsibility to ensure that the entire scheme runs on schedule.

So far, according to Mr. Watson, who as supervising architect coordinates all these parts, everything has been going fine. "Of course, we have had the occasional snafu — a boiler, which is inevitable on a project of this size, but the cooperation we had from the various Government and City Council departments, not to mention the best of other people from the contractor down, has been first class," he added.

The Commonwealth Development Corporation (C.D.C.) came to the attention of the Government of Kenya when at the request of the Government of Uganda and Tanganyika (as it was then) and with the support of the British Government large sums of money were made available to Kenya for the purchase of land for the withdrawal of public deposits from the banks and their conversion into a property.

restarting mortgage lending should be considered. After thorough investigation and discussion it was agreed that C.D.C. should be established with each of the Governments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika would have equal shares in the mortgage finance company which would in time be known as F.H.C.A.

UGANDA: a start has been made

H.F.C.U. has in mind several good designs for low-cost housing which have been produced recently and are to build two- and three-bedroom bungalows which will sell in the range of 20,000 to 30,000.

The agreement of the company states that the principal office of H.F.C.U. is to be established in Kenya to enable it to purchase newly-acquired land for the construction of its housing estates.

Every effort was made to stimulate the interest of the local community. However, such efforts could not be sustained as the Government of Tanzania is a severe housing shortage.

KENYA: stimulating thrift

H.F.C.A. was incorporated under the Companies Act on November 18, 1965 and started business on January 1, 1966. Its shareholders are the Government of Kenya and C.D.C. who are constituted to provide very substantial long-term loan funds to assist the growth of the company.

The homes at Valley Field have just been completed and will be ready for occupation in the next two weeks by senior Government officials. The initial income of H.F.C.A. has been made available from a bond of £1 million.

TANZANIA: buying made easy

One of the inevitable and less welcome results of the rapid industrial development of Tanzania is a severe housing shortage. In every major town in Tanzania it is difficult to find a house of flat, either to rent or buy.

Wider acceptance of the employees' guarantee scheme will greatly increase the number of potential home owners, and the company looks forward to expanded co-operation in this field. P.H.F.C. lends money only for houses which are to be owner-occupied and the income of landlords does not fall within the company's aims.

It is, however, unlikely (100,000) to the City Council of Nairobi for the completion of Woodley Kibera Estate of houses and flats (worth £1,000,000) have been granted.

Valley Field Housing Project

At the present time, any person wishing to acquire a house should follow one of two courses. He may purchase a house outright for sale at a price he can afford, in which case he can borrow up to 75 per cent of the value of the house and purchase it in a further 25 per cent deposit available.

At that a building contractor has engaged, finance arranged and construction started, it has become clear that more streamlined methods are required to enable more people to acquire their own houses, and this can be achieved by large scale estate development.

The need for estate development has been recognised by the authority arrangements for the purchase of houses are now being worked out. As mentioned above, the maximum loan that can be obtained from P.H.F.C. is 75 per cent of the value of the house.

HOUSING PROJECTS IN EAST AFRICA

UGANDA: a start has been made

The development of residential housing in Uganda has been hindered until recently by the absence of any organisation which offered mortgage loans in the normal course of business.

Some assistance has been available from the insurance companies, one of the commercial banks and the Development Fund. Loans available from the insurance companies have been limited and, since the closure of First Permanent Building Society more than six years ago, the prospective home owner has very rarely been left to his own resources.

In an endeavour to improve this situation, the Uganda Government and the Commonwealth Development Corporation established the Uganda Housing Finance Company (U.H.F.C.) late in 1967.

The new company is the successor in Uganda to First Permanent (East Africa) Ltd and, in addition to offering savings facilities to members of the public, it entered the field of mortgage lending during 1968.

The housing problems pending in Uganda are similar to those which exist in Kenya and Tanzania. The growth of commerce and more particularly of industry has encouraged a moving towards the towns. With living standards of living, more people want a house of their own.

Whereas in the past there was a movement to and from the towns of people who took up temporary employment but lived principally on shambas in their home areas, many of these would now prefer a permanent dwelling of their own near their place of work.

Over and above this is the urgent pressure upon Government to supply institutional housing (for hospital and school staff, for instance), quarters for government servants on duty and accommodation for a succession of technical experts supplied by agencies overseas. The demand is there, but how to meet it?

Some years ago Uganda Government set up the National Housing Corporation, a statutory body with a full-time chairman supported by qualified and experienced staff, to tackle the housing problem.

Much of its work has been undertaken directly on Government's behalf but the Corporation can point to several housing estates in Kampala serving the middle- and upper-income sectors which have proved most successful.

However, the availability of finance has constantly set a limit to what the Corporation could achieve especially in the low-cost sector. There is now the prospect of co-operation with P.H.F.C. which enable it to break new ground particularly in the provision of housing for the lower-income sector. Uganda Government holds 40 per cent of the share capital of H.F.C. and its interests are looked after by the Corporation.

H.F.C. initially restricted its business to offering mortgage loans to individuals to build houses in which they would live, and this will always remain its primary interest.

But the scope is limited. People who can take advantage of this facility must have accumulated a reasonable sum of personal savings and must generally be earning 1,000/- per month or more.

This leaves a large proportion of the population who are not so fortunately placed, and it is in this sector that the National Housing Corporation, with the financial backing of H.F.C., is turning its attention.

It is difficult to keep down the cost of houses of permanent materials if you build one here, one there. It is essential to achieve economies of scale, to obtain the highest measure of productivity from workmen, to procure the most efficient use of available resources.

And the best way of doing this is to concentrate your activities within a limited area and restrict development to two or three house designs.

This is what the Corporation and

The Commonwealth Development Corporation (C.D.C.) came to the help of the Building Society Ltd. at the request of the Government of Uganda and Tanganyika (as it was then) and with the support of the Government large sums of money were made available in 1966/67 to finance the withdrawal of public deposits were threatening to place the Building Society Ltd. in a difficult position.

C.D.C. formed First Permanent (East Africa) Ltd to acquire the Building Society Ltd. and to acquire the Kenya Building Society Ltd. (K.B.S.) and to acquire the business of the Kenya Building Society Ltd. The purpose of this operation was to provide a source of investment and deposits and therefore both P.H.F.C. and the Kenya Building Society Ltd. are subsidiaries of C.D.C. However, the situation soon improved and by the end of 1967 C.D.C. took the initiative in suggesting to the Kenya Independent Government that the possibility of reorganising the movement of restarting mortgage lending should be considered.

After thorough investigation and discussion it was agreed that C.D.C. would provide the necessary financial partnership with each of the Governments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania would launch new national mortgage finance corporations which would take time to take over the mortgages and deposits from P.H.F.C.

This today we have Housing Finance Company of Kenya Ltd., Finance Company of Uganda Ltd. and Finance Company of Tanzania Ltd. all of which operate a full range of building society facilities in their respective countries.

KENYA: stimulating thrift

H.F.C. was incorporated under the Companies Act of November 18, 1965, and started business on January 1, 1966. Its shareholders are the Government of Kenya and C.D.C. who are obligated to provide very substantial long-term loan funds to assist the growth of the company.

The agreement relating to the formation of the company states that H.F.C.'s principal object will be to make loans to persons or bodies to purchase newly-constructed or existing houses, for the purpose of building, buying, or otherwise bringing to stimulate new activity in the building industry. The main objective is to assist the main contractor or existing house owner to buy a house. However, the Kenya Government and the Kenya Building Society Ltd. are not permitted to provide any sum to stimulate new activity in the building industry.

TANZANIA: buying made easy

One of the inevitable and less welcome results of the rapid industrial and commercial development of Tanzania is a severe housing shortage.

In every major town it is difficult to find a house or flat, either to rent or buy. In Dar es Salaam particularly, houses and flats have been constructed at an impressive rate in the last few years, but the demand continues to outstrip supply.

In 1967, to help relieve this situation, the Government of Tanzania signed an agreement with the Commonwealth Development Corporation to set up the Permanent Housing Finance Company of Tanzania Limited, whose primary function is to provide long-term loans to individuals who wish to buy or build houses for their own occupation.

P.H.F.C. is a private company, jointly owned by the Tanzania Government and C.D.C. The capital of the company is derived mainly from public borrowing. The Government and C.D.C. have agreed to make available substantial loans to P.H.F.C. to enable it to carry out its primary function.

P.H.F.C. took over the Tanzanian assets and liabilities of P.H.F.C. in January 1, 1968, which included existing mortgage loans to individuals and public housing loans to the Government. The total value of these loans was Shs. 7,000,000/-, having been

While some contribution has been made towards relieving the housing shortage, the company does not regard this scale of lending as satisfactory.

At the present time, any person wishing to acquire a house must first obtain a plot of land. He may be able to find a suitable plot of land at a price which is not too high, but the cost of building up to 75 per cent of the value of the house and purchase of the land is a very simple matter, provided that he has the 25 per cent deposit available.

However, there are not many houses available for sale, and most people have to build. This means that a grant of land must be obtained from the Government, and then the prospective house owner must obtain the architect who prepares plans and obtains the necessary approvals from the Government and the building can start.

It has become clear that more houses are needed to be built to enable more people to acquire their own houses, and this can be achieved by large scale estate development. The most important result has been to enable more people to buy their own houses, thus bringing home ownership within the reach of more people.

The need for estate development has been recognised by the Government and the necessary arrangements are now being worked out.

A measure which will ensure that the maximum benefit is obtained from the land available is the provision of an institution accepting public deposits on deposit. This will enable a conservative policy to be pursued through the provision of loans through the company. The institution will be required to provide most of the deposits within the reach of more people.

However, people will still need to be able to acquire land to build houses, and this will be achieved by large scale estate development. The most important result has been to enable more people to buy their own houses, thus bringing home ownership within the reach of more people.

Time for the view

Reuben Ross and Bill Parkinson in car No. 39, a Datsun P510.

Enthusiastic clapping greets the Peugeot 404 of last year's Safari winners, "Nick" Nowicki and Paddy Cliff — the more drivers the better to stop and admire the view.

The pictures on this page were taken as the Safari survivors negotiated the encounter at Machakos and headed towards Kangundo. Above: The sun glinting through the trees makes a lovely picture, but the man in car No. 22 is in a hurry and has no time to admire the view. It is Jorgind Singh speeding towards Nairobi and the finish of the 17th East African Safari. Left: Pictured in the sunshine is the Lancia Fulvia of Ranno Antonen and Henry Liddon, who arrived in Nairobi minus their windshield.

Speed and dust

Either the Easterlie was there in too wet or too dry for the East African Safari. This year it was too dry. Instead of being bogged down in the mud, the competitors choked in thick dust clouds.

What with the dust and the high speeds required, most of the regular entrants found the 17th event the most grueling of them all. Overseas drivers of the 1200 mile race, and the demands made on men and machines, as constituting the toughest in world motor rallying.

Before the start, already it was being called "the mile-a-minute Safari". So it was on average, but fantastic speeds exceeding 100 m.p.h. were necessary over some stretches. For example, Jopinger Singh, driving a Volvo covered 157 miles along the Coast in 85 minutes, averaging 110 m.p.h.

Because of the ban against using Tanzanian territory, the course was re-routed in two elliptical sections, covering Kenya and Uganda, four per cent on farms, instead of the customary two, and a far greater distance over main roads. Hence the necessity of faster speeds. Dry weather, over which there can be no control, caused the dust to the rules made conditions much worse for the drivers.

In order to provide more spectator interest, control seats were introduced to make cars in bunches, resulting in more cars, often going fast out, raising past spectators in a given time. Many drivers consequently complained of being choked and blinded by dust clouds in the wake of the cars in front. One or two, like Soderstrom, the Swedish driver of a Ford 20M, made much of the turning into the half to retire with a broken back axle, complained of being held back by control.

However, the dust did not deter the urge for speed of some drivers. One pair, Hermann and Schuller, in their Daimler P150, started at the tail end, yet they overtook one car after another by driving across the finishing line. The first across had started 15th — a Porsche 911 driven by the courageous Poles, Zasada and Wachowski, who at one time carried having been stranded at Rome until Altalira organized a special charter on the eve of the Safari.

Once again, foreign drivers were unable to beat the East Africans on their own ground. Only two overseas entries, the Poles and Aaltonen-Lidner, finished in the top ten. Unlike last year, the Safari favoured the big cars. Bravely enough they were driven, there was only a meagre finishing of cars under 1,500 cc.

The overall winners will not be known until mid-day today.

PAKISTAN'S PROBLEM

Finding a balance between reform and stability

THE PRESIDENT of the new martial administration in Pakistan, Gen. Ayub Khan, seems concerned in his intention to restore civilian rule in the country.

Observers close to him are of the view that a Constituent Assembly to draw up a new constitution for Pakistan should be elected on the basis of direct adult franchise by the end of this year. Not only the moderate political groups in West Pakistan have commended the way the martial law administration has conducted itself.

Even the East Pakistan Awami League leader, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, and the chairman of the Pakistan People's Party, Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto, have welcomed the administration's early restoration of parliamentary democracy in Pakistan.

Gen. Yahya and the other service chiefs in command of the new Government, Air Marshal Nur Khan, Chief of the Staff, and Vice-Admiral S. M. Ahsan, C-in-C of the Navy, have early resumption of peaceful political activities by the various parties, which have been NASIM AHMED reports that Pakistan's new martial regime appears to have made a good start in restoring tranquillity to a divided country. But it is a long road to genuine stability.

(Unlike what happened in the military take-over by Field Marshal Ayub in 1958) and far from interfering in the armed forces, the new rulers of Pakistan are keen to ensure that the military remains peaceful and that the armed forces are not dragged into politics.

They may also seek assurance from political leaders against interference in the armed forces by political appointments and promotions like those by India's former defence minister, Gen. Menon, which weakened the Indian armed forces.

The new rulers of Pakistan will want to embark on a dialogue with political leaders on the major problems which brought down President Ayub's regime.

There is also the question of the military's role in the new Government. The military's role in the new Government is a delicate one. It is not clear whether the military will be allowed to interfere in the political process.

Schoolboys in a sensitive staging of Easter story

A cynic said to me at the weekend that the Safari is East Africa's most compelling rally. However, I have no doubt that more motorists drove to Church this Easter than drove in the rally.

Those who see the play are likely to forget the scene entitled "Despair" in which the hanging of Jesus is portrayed with marionettes. This scene is sensitively played by Francis Mwangi (Jesus), Cary Matuda (John) and Patrick Ochi (Joseph).

Problems encountered by the new farmers

Although many of us in this country are committed to the policy of "Go Back to the Land", as expressed by President Kenyatta, the problems encountered by the new farmers are not simple.

First, conditions of acquiring land are very complex. The prospective farmers often have to drain the land themselves.

Second, the major problem is that the new farmer is expected to begin repayment for the farm.

hearing crowds ate as afari sweeps in

Hard Stalls Reporter
 Hearing crowds lined the from the Belle Vue on the Mombasa road to the city centre yesterday as the leading Safari party on towards the point outside Nairobi.

First to complete the mile course, dusty but most of its length, was the Porsche 911 driven by the Polish drivers, and Wachowski, which time seemed unlikely to almost the last moment it ended at Rome Airport and only an eve-of-Safari effort to Nairobi by special charter, enabled it to reach the drivers in time, although a warning might have been placed at the Polish drivers' disposal.

The two drivers, competing for the first time in the East African Safari and having had the most cursory glance at the course, achieved fantastic speeds in the last few hundred miles to overtake the experienced rally drivers operating on their own ground.

Second at the finishing point were the Uganda drivers, Din and Minhas, in a Datsun 510 (25). Like attention they paid to their performing and it came almost as a surprise to find them

The caption to a picture published with yesterday's edition of the Olympic Aid Horse Show bears on the realities of the society, thereby decolonising the minds of African youth.

Third home was Herrmann and Schuller, the latter an overseas driver, in another Datsun 510. This party must have given the Porsche manufacturers something to think about. Originally they were to have driven a factory Porsche and to have started in third place but the entry was withdrawn.

The drivers re-entered the Datsun and had to start at No. 90. Right from the beginning it was obvious that they intended to be up with the leaders and they overtook car after car.

Joinder, Singh and Ibadwan (No. 21) in their Volvo 142W were followed by two more Datsun 510s driven by Greenly and Collings (20) and Randall and Parkinson (19).

With four cars in the first five places the Datsun manufacturers could certainly be pleased with their showing.

At this stage spectators were beginning to arrive, also came the appearance of Car No. 10, Ford 20M (Greenly and Collings).

This car had been in a running race for about 100 miles, and it finished in ninth position, it was being driven by a woman, who was the only woman driver who had completed the course. It was considered that it would be the overall winner, although scrutineering was still to take place.

Police asked to act over bogus Kanu collectors

Standard Correspondent.
Kisumu. The Kisumu township branch of Kanu has asked the police to take drastic action against people alleged to be collecting money from the public under the pretext that their donation will go towards the building of the branch organizing secretary, Kano headquarters in Nairobi. Mr. John Oloo, said in a statement that he had received numerous complaints from businessmen and the public at large that a number of people were going round asking for money in the name of Kanu. Some of these people, he said, were using forged receipt books. He appealed to businessmen to be vigilant against such collectors and criminals and reported to the police immediately. Kanu donors should be treated as thieves and wanted the co-operation of the public in bringing such money matters to justice.

Some of the money coming from the rural areas found to be collecting money in the town without a licence approved by the District Commissioner would be dealt with severely. Kanu had received information that some people had even demanded money with menaces. The township office had not authorized anyone to collect money which would in any case be done through the normal channels with the approval of the D.C.

Mr. Waruhiu, who was entertained by traditional dancers and school children, thanked the donors who had composed the majority of the fund and added that he had paid tribute to the people of the division and added that claimant and religious differences were the greatest enemies of progress in this country. He urged them to aim at developing the division to gain a name for the district and the country as a whole and added that they should realize that there would be nobody else to develop it for them.

The project of the area also collected about £150 in cash for the school at a weekend ceremony.

Mr. Karuki told nearly 150 parents and pupils who attended the school opening to work extremely hard and ever to be active in their self-help work as this would retard their development.

poor away record has improved lately. Another draw is undervalued. Manchester United's undervalued by bagging fourteen show signs of reviving, though they have won only a single away match in 18. They drew well away to West Ham, Newcastle, who beat 2-0 the same week, will do well to manage better than a draw against a side that is regaining its mastery.

Zambia tries to avert another 'holy war'

Zambia is waiting anxiously to see if more top-level talks in Lusaka will end increasingly serious clashes between followers of President Kaunda's ruling United National Independence Party and the Watchtower and Bible Tract Society, which originated in America.

Clashes between Zambia's United National Independence Party and Jehovah's Witnesses have created fears of a second 'holy war', only five years since 700 people lost their lives in Alice Lemah's Lumpa Church uprising. Christopher Frazier traces the increasingly violent events leading to talks between the Government and the firmly entrenched religious sect, which forbids participation in politics.

Heavy detachments of paramilitary police were sent to the province and also to trouble spots in other parts of Zambia, as they were reported. But clashes continued. Some Witnesses fled to the Congo.

According to sect leaders, 45 of their 'Kingdom Halls,' as their churches are called, have been burnt down this year.

In a statement issued from the Witnesses' headquarters at the copper-mining town of Kitwe they said: 'Ever since January when a Jehovah's Witness was beaten to death, these inhuman brutalities have continued unabated.'

Jehovah's Witnesses have not retaliated, but have any of them been accused for attacking Unip members or making the law into their own?

They say these attacks, members of the sect continue to practise their religion and to canvass for their converts. Even to the extent in some cases of approaching Unip officials at their offices and asking them to buy propaganda books about the Kingdom of Jehovah.

The Witnesses have made repeated appeals of President Kaunda to halt the violence. Government officials have ordered Unip supporters to stop banging Jehovah's Witnesses' homes.

'In vast country areas with sparse populations and minimal communications it is not always easy to maintain control.'

In March leaders of both the Government and the Jehovah's Witnesses had 11 hours of talks at State House, President Kaunda's official residence, which the Zambian Head of State attended for over an hour.

At the time, the Zambian Head of State attended for over an hour. The talks were held in Lusaka, the capital.

For most of its 3,000-mile journey to the sea the Congo River is wide and navigable. But towards the end of its course from the Central African highlands it meets a bottleneck.

For about 200 miles from the outlet of the Stanley Pool to where its estuary starts at Matadi, the river becomes a series of rapids as an enormous quantity of water forces its way through narrow valleys and descends about 800 feet to sea level.

After seeing this section of the Congo, geographer wrote in 1885: 'Perhaps one day these falls, which are now an obstacle, will be turned into a force capable of providing light and power.'

These words were prophetic for work is now under way on the first stage of a project which could eventually make the Congo not only the world's biggest single source of hydroelectric power but will also provide the energy base on which the Congo-Kapanga Republic plans to develop much of her economy.

This is a far cry from the modest first idea, mooted in 1910, to harness the river to provide electricity for its railway from the Congolese capital, Leopoldville (now Kinshasa) to Matadi. And although since then the Inga project has been subject to many vicissitudes and changes, the dreams of explorers, administrators and experts now look like being realised.

The scheme takes its name from the Inga rapids, about 50 miles up-river from Matadi and where the river is particularly narrow and deep. The first stage of the project involves damming and flooding the Van Duren valley which runs parallel to the Congo, and the capacity of the power station which will be driven by this water is to be raised in four stages.

President Félix Houphouët-Boigny of the Ivory Coast during his visit to West Germany, which was recently returned by President Heinrich Lübke. Also pictured are Mrs. Lübke and Mrs. and Mrs. Houphouët-Boigny, aid arrangements between the two countries are discussed on the right.

German aid for Ivory Coast

West Germany has entered into a 3,400,000-dollar loan agreement to provide the Ivory Coast with new harbour installations.

This loan and another worth nearly 6,000,000 dollars, made last year, together with the recent visit to Abidjan by Dr. Lübke shortly before he completed his term of office as President of the Federal Republic, represent a clear acknowledgment by the West German Government that the Ivory Coast has maintained political stability and achieved considerable economic progress since gaining independence nine years ago.

The authoritative German daily Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung has commented that the progress made by this small West African nation since 1960 has been due largely to President Houphouët-Boigny's realistic ideas on political and economic development.

He believes that it is not land nationalisation that will stimulate farm production but better soil cultivation. In his opinion, the nationalisation of trade and industry is not the answer either. Instead, there should be improved organisation.

President Houphouët-Boigny is opposed to 'show projects' but supports generous spending on education and training.

He has played a decisive role in the Council de l'Estuaire, the alliance of the Ivory Coast, Niger, Upper Volta, Togo and Dahomey. Shortly before participating in the Kinshasa conference of the Organisation Communauté d'Afrique et Malgache (Ocam) in January, the five Heads of State of the Entente met in Abidjan to reaffirm their course. The Ivory Coast and other Entente members maintain good relations with France, their former colonial ruler, and have also established close links with other developed countries in the West. However, the policies of President Houphouët-Boigny, whose strategic African political and economic independence dates from at least 1944, are determined entirely by African interests.

The independent-minded nature of these policies is evident from the Ivory Coast's dissent from France's line on Communism (China, Vietnam and the Middle East).

The success of the Ivory Coast's policies can be measured in some extent by the fact that the nation has the second highest per capita income of the African continent south of the Sahara.

The West German emphasis on aid to post-war nations such as the Ivory Coast is likely to be expanded to an even wider audience as a result of the recent acceptance of the Federal Republic as a member of the United Nations Preparatory Committee for the Second Decade (1970-80).

Bismarck's application for membership was vigorously opposed by the Soviet Union. The Russians were opposed to 'show projects' but supported by some of the East European countries — notably not Yugoslavia — together with the United Arab Republic, Algeria and the Sudan.

The irony of the situation was that the Soviet Union has provided far less development aid than has the nation it sought to exclude from the committee.

Egyptian ruling on births

Egyptian Muslim religious leaders announced yesterday that they have banned artificial insemination as illegitimate.

The Fa'wa (religious ruling) committee said this method was against Islamic teachings and violated human dignity. It also ruled that babies born by artificial insemination were illegitimate.

On the other hand, Muslim and Christian prelates approved Government-backed family planning measures to curb the country's population explosion.

In tests on leading makes of cars from around the world... 16 different car makes gave better acceleration and gas mileage with Champion Turbo-Action spark plugs!

In acceleration tests, the two Toyotas trailing behind are using standard design spark plugs. In 500 miles the two Toyotas in front took a significant lead. The lead cars were fitted with Turbo-Action Champions.

In fuel economy tests, these two Toyotas ran on a precise amount of fuel burned in the same gas conditions on their runs. Then each used up its fuel. The two cars in front had used less gas than the two cars behind. The lead cars were fitted with Turbo-Action Champions.

Official tests on 64 new cars—representing 16 different makes—compared performance of standard design spark plugs and Champions with Turbo-Action design. European, Japanese and American car makes were tested.

And each make of car averaged better acceleration and gas mileage using Turbo-Action Champions! All tests were certified by the United States Auto Club, a leading automotive test sanctioning body. Turbo-Action design spark plugs are precisely matched to individual engine model requirements and are now available for most engines. Be sure to ask about Turbo-Action spark plugs for your car—soon!

Mr. Wilson draws closer to Federal Nigeria

By Oliver Cornhill
Britain's Prime Minister, Mr. Wilson, visited Lagos on the 27th of March. The visit was the first by a British Prime Minister to Nigeria since the country's independence in 1960. The visit was the first by a British Prime Minister to Nigeria since the country's independence in 1960. The visit was the first by a British Prime Minister to Nigeria since the country's independence in 1960.

The visit to Lagos against its background, measures it against the content of Mr. Wilson's statement to the House of Commons on his return and you have a much more solid support for the Federal Government than several months ago in the middle of March. The visit was the first by a British Prime Minister to Nigeria since the country's independence in 1960.

BACKGROUND TO WORLD NEWS

Florence frescoes are being shown in an exhibition opened just before Easter in London. One shown above is "Birth of the Virgin", almost 10 1/2 high and 12 1/2 wide, which formed part of the decorations in PRATO Cathedral. It is one of 72 frescoes in a collection worth £130,000, which were peled from the walls of historic buildings damaged by the Florence floods.

MAKING A NEW REPUBLIC

Constitutional changes debated in Guyana

By Harry Harewood
Guyana, which gained independence within the Commonwealth less than three years ago, will become a republic on February 23, 1970, a date of historic significance for the people of this 83,000 square-mile former British colony.

On February 23, 1763, slaves in the colony of Barbados won a country's independence. The British masters, gained complete control of the colony a few brief weeks and, in effect, lit the flame of freedom that took Guyana to independence 205 years later. The resolution to declare Guyana a republic is expected to get away through Parliament. While a few "Blimps" are grumbling over the fact that Britain's Queen will cease to be Queen of Guyana, the Opposition generally welcomes the move.

There is, however, a growing insistence by intellectuals and a literary Opposition that the country should maintain its traditions of British justice and, particularly, respect for the rights of the people. The Government of Mr. Burnham has a majority in Parliament, but it stresses that, when the country goes republic, the constitutional rights of the people will not be impaired. It has stressed that the Guyana Republic will be on the Indian pattern.

Muthiga, meanwhile, were playing extremely well — three up in two of their matches against Mombasa, and two of these, like the others, after nine holes.
But Karen moved inexorably to the same time Warden was putting, to go three ahead on the 13th. Wykes and Raab also combined four and three to a birdie putt on the short sixth.
Royal's challenge had virtually ended, despite three splendid birdies by the other pairs.
Maysa and Nicholas had evened up on the 12th hole, but in the early stages and held on to finish with 23 points and an tournament total of 24.
Warden was down the fairway from the left side of the hole, but he had made a significant contribution to the Railway's success by pulling his way off the line into trouble.
Muthiga was deadly accurate with his approach, leaving it five feet from the hole. Rhodes, on the other hand, was not so accurate, blasting out a bunker two-thirds of the way across the fairway surface into trees beyond.
There was no point in railway consolidation, as the match and two of the other two were the same as the 13th, six up on the 11th.
Muthiga's valiant challenge was now of no more than academic interest. It was as though David and Charles Farrar already knew the outcome of the match, as they played the 13th, six up on the 11th.
Both the shots were on the green, and Mombasa came through with an approach putt for the three well-placed to pull back when Hopley's shot left no more than six feet from the pin.
In fact, though dornie up on the 13th, the Farrar had to wait for the point Mombasa was to win.
Muthiga's Stewart and Garner finished four and three up on the 13th hole, and they were better by a similar margin than Thomas and Grewal.
The tournament may have been over for the leaders but Mombasa

Karen's victorious Easter Tournament team returned yesterday to Nairobi to be welcomed by the Golf Club with their trophy, the 'Tombasa' cup.

John Deane, R.N.G.C. captain, Derek Flanagan, Alan Maitland, Denis Lapsley, Ian Warden, Karen captain, George Thomson, George Marshall, John Barry, Matt Cohen, Moutser and Ross Midgeley and Chris Wright.

They had started the day with 23 points and their highest score in the Easter Tournament total was 24.
Hopes of holding this record on their turf consisted of Fedon and Maguire, who played gamely after tumbling down to Phosock and Brown. The Muthiga pair, however, stayed on the 18th tee, so Mombasa could only equal their record by being out of play.
He completed the round in 68 with six birdies on 9th, 11th, 12th, 14th, 16th and 17th to lead Bembridge (73) by four strokes and Westbrock (76) by seven with 18 holes left to play.
Maguire then hit his second too firmly, the ball settling on the lush putting beyond the green. Brown left his approach right of the pin, straggling to within a foot, and Fedon had to sink a tricky shot down the hill for the point Mombasa wanted.
It was not to be, however, and the Mombasa pair were up, giving their team a maximum eight points from the match.
This was the 45th Easter Tournament, and will be remembered for a good many things, not least of which was the splendid wind in which the Royal scored without 112 records of four-stroke golf.
Muthiga's Eric Boyd will remember the 13th hole particularly. He played it four times — three of them with Tom Garner and one with Stan Thatcher — taking a total of 25 shots (or nine over par) and never once lost a stroke. They won with a six and a seven, and halved with a seven and a five!

Bernard Gallacher wins 'Cock o' the North' title in Zambia

Bernard Gallacher, the 20-year-old professional from Scotland's Field Golf Club, on Sunday won the 1969 'Cock o' the North' in a lead under par total of 282 at Ndola, Zambia.
Gallacher arrives in Nairobi today to take part in the Kenya Open. In Britain he is known as the boy who plays for Scotland pro, and the player who set himself the task of the week to win the 'Cock o' the North' title. Terry Westbrook and Harry Bembridge, both professional players, were the only other players to finish the tournament in the top 10.
Gallacher's lead was 18 holes on the 18th tee, so Mombasa could only equal their record by being out of play.
He completed the round in 68 with six birdies on 9th, 11th, 12th, 14th, 16th and 17th to lead Bembridge (73) by four strokes and Westbrock (76) by seven with 18 holes left to play.
Maguire then hit his second too firmly, the ball settling on the lush putting beyond the green. Brown left his approach right of the pin, straggling to within a foot, and Fedon had to sink a tricky shot down the hill for the point Mombasa wanted.

Gallacher plan, and turning on the boat with five birdies (10, 12, 14, 16, 17) to come home in 32 against 36 par he severed the jagular and left the field to fight over the remainder of the carcass.
While interest was centred on Gallacher and Westbrook, an Australian named Bob Tuohy was attending strictly to business on Sunday. He turned two under after nine holes in the afternoon and shot another three birdies on a horse stretch to reach a brilliant 69 and pose out Bembridge (73) for second place.
Westbrock's fighting 71 was flat not good enough and the 1968 'Cock o' the North' champion had to settle for fourth place.
Gallacher, relaxing in the clubhouse, said afterwards that he felt the pressure throughout the tournament, but his game seemed to improve as the pressure built up. He has never putted better by my life.
"I'd like to thank Terry Westbrook for all his assistance. His general game in this tournament deserved to give him the position — but he had a bad luck with some of his putts."
Bembridge, after a scorching 69 in the second round on Saturday,

HISTORY AND BUSINESS:
In order to understand fully the history of B.A.T. Kenya Limited it is necessary to sketch in outline the history of its predecessors and component parts in East Africa.

British-American Tobacco Company Limited (hereinafter called "B.A.T.") first entered East Africa in 1907 where it registered as a foreign company importing, marketing and eventually manufacturing cigarettes and other tobacco products.

East African Tobacco Company Limited (hereinafter called "the old E.A.T.") was formed in 1932 and traded in East Africa in cigarettes and other tobacco goods until 1947 when it was acquired by B.A.T. and on the 23rd November 1949 a new company called East African Tobacco Company Limited (hereinafter called "E.A.T.") was formed within the B.A.T. group which took over the interests of both B.A.T. in East Africa and the old E.A.T.

In May 1959 a small company, Kenya Tobacco Company Limited, was formed and traded until 1956 when it sold its business to E.A.T., together with the right to use its name. E.A.T. then formed a new company, Kenya Tobacco Company (1961) Limited, the name of which was subsequently changed to East African Tobacco Company Limited.

On the 29th April, 1952, Rift Valley Cigarette Company Limited was incorporated, but this company failed to obtain a significant share of the market. In 1956 the capital was acquired by E.A.T. and its name was subsequently changed to B.A.T. Kenya Limited in 1965 when it acquired the Kenya assets of E.A.T.

On 1st February, 1965 as part of a general reorganisation within the B.A.T. Group in East Africa, E.A.T. was reconstructed as a result of which there emerged three companies, namely B.A.T. Kenya Limited, B.A.T. Uganda Limited and B.A.T. Tanzania Limited which were transferred the assets and liabilities of E.A.T. in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania respectively. E.A.T. then went into voluntary liquidation.

In July 1966 Rothmans of Pall Mall (Kenya) Limited (hereinafter called "Rothmans") was formed and after a period of competition an approach was made to the B.A.T. Group as a result of which B.A.T. Kenya Limited acquired the entire capital of the Company in November 1967. The name of the Company was subsequently changed to Kenya Tobacco Company Limited. Rothmans had a subsidiary company previously called the African Cigarette Company and now called African Cigarette Company (Overseas) Limited.

The following table shows the present capital inter-relationship of the companies previously mentioned which are directly related to B.A.T. Kenya Limited:

East African Tobacco Company (U.K.) Limited	East African Tobacco Company (Kenya) Ltd.
B.A.T. Kenya Limited
Kenya Tobacco Company Ltd.
African Cigarette Company (Overseas) Ltd.

By reason, therefore, of its close connection with its predecessors within the B.A.T. Group, it can be said that B.A.T. Kenya Limited, in its present form, is the ultimate culmination of over 60 years' trading by the B.A.T. Group in the tobacco and cigarette business in Kenya and competitive companies have unsuccessfully challenged its market leadership. From modest beginnings manufactured by B.A.T., E.A.T. and now B.A.T. Kenya Limited has increased steadily over the years replacing almost entirely cigarettes and other tobacco products previously imported.

The principal objects of the Company as set out in its Memorandum of Association are to acquire and carry on the business of manufacturers of and dealers in cigarettes, tobacco, cigars and snuff and growers of tobacco, and any business arising out of or in connection with any such commodities.

The Company's brands available in the public in Kenya include the following:

SPORTSMAN	EMBASSY	Smoking Tobacco
REX	SWEET MENTHOL
TEN CENT	CROWN KING
CRESSANT & STAR	PLAYERS NAVY CUT MEDIUM (imported)	LEGATION
SENATE	LUCKY (imported)	SWEET NUT
STORK	CRAYEN "A" (imported)	SUNDOG/LE
ROOSTER

together with the international brand STATE EXPRESS FILTER KINGSMAN manufactured in Kenya by agreement with Ardath Tobacco Co. Limited. The Company also, by arrangement with the proprietors, has been appointed sole distributor in Kenya of many other brands of cigarettes including BENSON & HEDGECOCK SPECIAL, FILTER, SENIOR SERVICE and DU MAURIER cigarettes, VAULTIER and ALTO Gato cigars and ERINMORE FLAKE smoking tobacco.

Almost the whole of the Company's requirement of leaf tobacco for the manufacture of cigarettes and smoking tobacco is by farmers in East Africa.

PREMISES AND PLANT:
The Company's factory is located in Liverpool Road, Industrial Area, Nairobi, and comprises office accommodation, leaf and material storage facilities, in addition to the main manufacturing building. (The lease for the factory plot expires on 29th March 1970.) The Company is equipped to provide for increased demands for its products and to meet changes in market trends with a variety of types and packings. It is the Company's policy to re-equip, renew and improve its plant and machinery on a regular basis so as to maintain the quality of the Company's products and to improve the speed and efficiency of production.

MANAGEMENT AND PERSONNEL:
The Directors of the Company are full time employees of the Company and have between them a wealth of experience in the tobacco industry.

The Company employs approximately 900 persons on a full time basis, of whom 90 per cent are Kenyans in accordance with the provisions of the Kenya Industrialisation Act. The training of personnel and management in all the different aspects of the industry is an important part of the Company's policy, and for this purpose the Company has established a training centre in Kenya in 1961 and elsewhere in the United Kingdom and other overseas countries.

The Company is able to draw upon the world-wide experience of B.A.T. for technical advice and assistance relating to production and all other aspects of the tobacco industry for which an advisory fee is paid. The resources of B.A.T.'s modern and extensive Development Establishment are also available to the Company.

Additional advisory services are provided by a branch of East African Tobacco Company (U.K.) Limited in Kenya, which is charged, if it is anticipated that these services will shortly be replaced, partly by the development of B.A.T. Kenya Limited's own staff.

WORKING CAPITAL:
The Directors are of the opinion that the Company has sufficient working capital.

CAPITAL:
The authorised capital of the Company was increased on 30th January 1965 from Shs. 4,000,000 to Shs. 60,000,000 by the acquiring the assets of B.A.T. in Kenya. The entire authorised share capital has been issued and is fully paid up and now consists of 6,000,000 Ordinary Shares of Shs. 10.00 each.

PROFIT, DIVIDENDS AND PROSPECTS:
During the financial year ended on 30th September 1967 the Company encountered strong competition from the newly formed East African Tobacco Company Limited, which was acquired only in the year reviewed and amounted to 877,897. However, as stated in section 7 of the Report, there were exceptional losses of a non-recurrent nature arising from the Rothmans acquisition. After taking these and a number of adjustments mentioned in this Account into account, the Directors consider that the results for the year reviewed are satisfactory and restore the dividend distribution to its previous year's level but to maintain it at the reduced rate of 10 per cent in order to restore the business to cover the non-recurrent losses.

The reorganisation of the two companies has now been completed and the full benefit is being felt of the resulting economies of scale which has made possible in the year reviewed and amounted to 877,897. However, as stated in section 7 of the Report, there were exceptional losses of a non-recurrent nature arising from the Rothmans acquisition. After taking these and a number of adjustments mentioned in this Account into account, the Directors consider that the results for the year reviewed are satisfactory and restore the dividend distribution to its previous year's level but to maintain it at the reduced rate of 10 per cent in order to restore the business to cover the non-recurrent losses.

In view of these profits, they have declared a first interim dividend of 5 per cent in March 1969, amounting to £100,000 expected profits are realised during the remainder of the year, the Directors consider that two further dividends of at least 5 per cent payable in August 1969 and January 1970 will be justified.

At the price of Shs. 15.00 per Shs. 10.00 share which this offer is made, the total distribution indicated thus represents a yield of 10 per cent. The Directors believe that, given a continuation of present operating conditions, it will be possible to maintain this future years while retaining sufficient sums in the business to provide for normal requirements of additional capital as the business expands.

The Offer for Sale will enable the general public in Kenya, employees of the Company and distributors of its products to participate in the progress and profitability of B.A.T. Kenya Limited.

Waltzing with the wonder of man-made fibres

There is not an unusual characteristic in the realm of British man-made fibres. The abundance and it plays a significant role in the major fashion achievements of today. Even so, it was decidedly overshadowed by the comment of one manufacturer, who declared: "Synthetic fabrics have much in common with the music of Johann Strauss."

When asked to explain his theory further, he replied: "To begin with, drip-dry fashions help to keep romance alive in an unromantic age. Without them, how many busy women would ever wear romantic clothes?"

As the space age becomes an immediate reality, I found this conversation both timely and cheering. For it is all too easy to see modern technology as the enemy of femininity, but in fashion, at least, that magical quality seems to hang in hand with science. Gay deception, brilliance and delight — these are just a few of the key words which repeat themselves in drip-dry fashions for this time of 1969. In fact, it is this type of deception, in fact, is all set to transform our attitude towards the synthetic fabric. We are entering a new era of practical elegance, which darts a variety of textures each, the most critical eye.

At I.C.I., for instance, they call 1969 the year of Terylene linen. Fresh as spring blossom, this eye-opening overcomes the old problems of creasing and drooping lines. World-famous Crimplene comes in a range of supple boules, fine, feathered coating and glittering, evening harmonies. In lingerie, it is used to denote Bril-Nylon can be draped to obtain the clinging richness of silk.

Also from I.C.I. are Bril-Nylon and Terylene in a range of Crimplene in romantic prints which is another ally of the softer, 1969 silhouette.

Already, it inspires the production of fashions with a golden age of femininity. And backed by shrewd fabric technicians, the prospects on this occasion may be bright.

For the international fashioner, Triel, Courtauld have devised a host of deceptions. It would be impossible to name them all here, but the choice ranges from pipe and shoulder to jersey, geometric and georgic and vixen.

In Courtauld that British acrylic fibre, and the newer Colan, one surprise after another comes to the forefront in a synthetic wardrobe. The veteran fabric may now be woven, knitted or organza; and there is a fairytale bouquet of exotic patterns and prints.

Naturally, this impressive variety has had a stimulating effect on designers and during a tour of London fashion houses, I was struck by the emphasis on contrasting looks.

Quite true — this is a season of new images in drip-dry and easily laundered fabrics, observed one director: "You could say that women are more blasé about technical miracles. In 1969 they demand romance, drama and originality."

The new, ever-widening scope of design in man-made fibres emerges very clearly. At Rembrandt, the emphasis is on Terylene linen dresses, designed with masterful simplicity by Louis Feard. Bold pockets and gentle flared skirts create a young yet subtle sophistication, in colours such as daffodil yellow, lime green and military red.

At Frank Glavin there are the pale, water-colour prints of Crimplene in Susan Small, printed ing cost and from earlier in "pinstrip" shades were before shown in the drip-dry sphere. Nigel Bancroft, of Triel, Seasons, saw Courteille Challa for a houndstooth design reminiscent of the 1920's. Rivers, but at Montijo Bay, the mood is "art nouveau" in a giant carnation print.

Again and again, come the contrast: red, white and blue in Susan Barry's check miniskirt; the classic shirt-waister in Triel jersey at Baker Sports. In drip-dry lace or smooth — I fell in love with Morley's lace cardigan and John Gray's "lanquish" suit.

For the young set, Franklin Fashion present beachwear in the colours hunt at both in the modern and contemporary posters. The sophisticated, however, can revel in a revival of the Mastering era at Ricci Michaels, where a flowered Colan bustles down in a.

Meanwhile, as women seek to higher standards in synthetic fashion, men can look forward to their own 1969 feast of spaciog ingenuity. "Crimplene for Men" is the ICI motto for this year.

It may well prove to have the same effect on male fashions as it has on women's clothing, combining all the eye-care qualities to look like something else.

Present day teenagers in Britain are idealistic, anxious to help the underprivileged, to help the community and plug those leaks in the social system which otherwise simply drip-dry even in a well-fare state.

They want to get involved — a favourite expression — not merely with each other, but with the community at large: with young people and children, the aged and the handicapped, and with the entire society in which they live.

Among the rules of today's young is a reservoir of educated and informed idealism such as has never been known before.

This is not somebody's fop opinion about doing with a favourable or unfavourable result. It is a mere by-product of a survey of young people between the ages of 15 and 20, published in the Daily Mail.

After a long history of generalisations about Britain's mini-skirted youth, these findings are scientifically conducted. Poll come to a reassuring conclusion: that this vigorous, unshackled generation thinks about their place in the social scheme.

Of those polled, 67 per cent thought that young people should be encouraged to do community social work. 74 per cent thought that young people could not do a merely, but a real, social job. 92 per cent said that such work would be voluntary, not compulsory.

To teachers, young leaders and others in regular touch with young people, the survey findings did not come as a surprise. They knew from personal experience that Britain's teenagers are not just talking about what they might do. Many of them are already doing valuable social work, and giving up spare time, or even deferring paid employment for a while, in favour of a period of full time (that unpaid) work of some merit.

They are thinking into national-wide organisations, like Shelter (which was set up to help with housing problems), and Talk Force (which mobilises help for many social projects). Community Service Volunteers is a day-time counterpart to the body which sends young people overseas for voluntary service overseas), and many smaller local groups, all formed with similar aims in mind.

"Our problem is not finding young people," explains Elizabeth Hoodless, deputy director of C.S.V. "It is persuading adults to take them to prove her point, she insists Hoodless has worked with and hospitals at job requiring enthusiasm, energy and patience, but not necessarily the attention of a trained, and probably overworked,

Young people take up the challenge of social work

From the collections

The conception of youthful clothes in large fitting has been a slow starter. But now the June and June collection styled by Susan Small specializes in this field. Here (left) is a check lightweight and tweed dress for their Spring collection. It comes in black, 16-22, its UK retail price is 220 Sh. and it is in their white check only.

Right: Hot evenings and barbecue smokes call for a new way of dressing, like this filmy Dorset robe suit by Susan Small — not too dressy, not too casual. It comes in sizes 10-14, its retail price is 18 Shs. (color) and 17 Shs. (Pants). Dress: Lime.

Volunteers from C.S.V. help in approved schools, at children's play centres, community centres, or with non-English-speaking immigrants in schools. At Birmingham University more than 2000 students took part in the National Opinion Poll, and during the 1960s as part of the programme during Rag Week. Forty different projects were planned, including housing, medical, and repairing houses for destitute families, building a sheltered playground for physically-handicapped people, making adventure camps, taking old people to the cinema, and many others. It was reckoned that the whole programme would have Birmingham Council some 415,000.

Students from other universities may well follow Birmingham's example. Social work is becoming the province of the young in Britain today, it is not only the participants themselves who have mostly been found during the 1960s as a result of some individual's or some group's determination to right a wrong, and to do so.

Young Volunteer Force Foundation, for instance, was launched in June 1968 with a £100,000 grant, mainly for administrative costs. Four local centres have already been set up — and three more are in the process of being established. The attention is now turning to the untold local activities going on in the country.

The projects are matched to local needs. In some areas, there may mean hospital visiting, or remedial reading with bedridden or child patients. In others, it may include visiting old people in their homes, doing decorating and repairs. In one area, volunteers are helping to widen a disused path, in the interests of local wildlife.

The attention is now turning to the untold local activities going on in the country. Boys' clubs past-time work in the country are helping to widen a disused path, in the interests of local wildlife. Girls' clubs for looking after a disabled child, the disabled. C.S.V. even found a job for a young man who had been crippled in a fire.

Often, a persistent teenager can solve a social problem before the authorities have become aware of its very existence. Like John Stoker, for instance, a 20-year-old housepainter who persuaded the authorities to re-open a youth club of which he was only an ordinary member. Now he acts as youth leader on three nights a week in a roomy urban area. Sue Wood, 19, of Sheffield, in north-east England who teamed together with friends to build a play-shelter for children on a large housing estate.

But not every well meaning teenager has as much to offer. In some parts of the country, social work for teenagers still at school is in fact organised through teachers or school authorities. Police cadets, too, give up a regular bit of their training for the purpose of community work. Now that the extent of all this kind of activity has been established, there is a danger that at least some of it will be neglected by many different organisations in the field. Another complaint is that some authorities simply do not avail themselves of help when it is offered. Following the resolutions of the N.O.P. meeting, Lord Aaran plans to raise a motion in the House of Lords calling on the Government to ensure that the teenagers' willingness to do social work is properly appreciated, and channelled where it can do most good. The young volunterers themselves are quite vociferous about their attitudes. "You start off thinking you're going to play some kind of role," says Penny Thurton, 20, working full time in the Blackburns Work Centre where handicapped and old people are making rugs. "But then you just get involved; as one of many."

These are the prime needs of most traders, and these are what Conference offers and what could not be offered were there no Conference. It is true that competition between members of a Conference is continued in composition in the field of service and there is no competition in rates.

What is the really responsible shipper, with long experience of overseas trade, who is the best advocate of the Conference system on which his export business has been built up and maintained. It is not always true that the incidence which all impartial critics of the Conference system have agreed that members must be able to offer to ship shippers as well as accept a tariff which has been criticised and must be justified.

Employing about 300 workers, the firm handles in the region of 3,000 tons of cargo in the spotless kitchens at the airport. I had a quick look at the work which is done in each department from the operations room where the meals ordered by the airlines are accepted, through the health section and into the kitchens and stores.

Some people think there is more to the Notam issued by the Zambian D.C.A. on Ndola Airport than meets the eye. The effect of the notice is that the airport is closed to all aircraft over 30,000 lb. all up weight because of deterioration of the runway.

They want stability of rates so that they can plan production or business ahead, and so that the transport element in their forward prices will not be subject to a sudden change. They want substantial equality of treatment with their competitors. If they quote for an order, they will be sure a competitor will to be able to undercut them by getting a lower transport cost and apply, not merely nationally, but internationally over as wide an area as possible. They want to make sure that the rates in certain ports on a route are higher than to others, the differential is known and fixed.

The spiritual life of the Maori people

Retaliatory raids

Israeli forces have again been in action against the U.A.R. in the Jordanian border areas launched in the Suez area and on the port of Suez. This flare-up follows immediately after Gen. Dayan's declaration that acceptance of the Big Four Powers' terms for a settlement would mean Israel's suicide.

The Egyptians, he said, were warning up against the Suez Canal to support President Nixon's contention that the Middle East is a powder keg likely to go off as the intervention of the Big Powers is urgently needed — "pure fiction".

The rocket strike on Eilat was the first big attack on the area at the head of the Gulf of Aqaba by forces based in Jordan; and the reprisal raid was the first since Israel was condemned by the Security Council a week or so ago for action against Jordan.

Twenty volleys of Soviet Katyusha rockets were launched against Eilat while the port area was thronged with Israeli festival tourists and campers. As the Jordanian army is not equipped with these rockets, observers report Eilat guerrillas must be responsible, "exploding King Hussein's absence from Jordan to break an unofficial Israeli-Jordanian agreement to keep the Eilat-Aqaba region out of the area to be used. Instead, the frontier of the two countries converge there, as at the apex of a triangle.

Congratulations on Safari triumph

One of the great advantages the East African Safari enjoys over other international rallies is that objections are quickly settled and confirmed results issued within 24 hours. This renouves the elements of the Safari which is often longer than other events and puts competitors "out of their skins".

Though they led the field on points, Robin Hillary and Jack Auld could not enjoy their laurels to the full in the first flush of the day the Safari resumed in scrutineering. They were given until noon yesterday to satisfy the competitors' committee that their modifications were standard.

Under international rules, parts not essentially fitted to production models, but produced in sufficient quantities for competition cars to be accepted as standard, are listed and noted before a rally.

Modern history points to Africa as the birthplace of man. Whether the future should be that of the present has been a matter of debate. Africa at the epitome of the modern dilemma; racial identity or racial segregation?

When some four years ago it was possible to create such a film of symmetrical racial harmony as Green who is coming in Dinner, where after a mere 15 minutes the Negro, Sydney Poitier, that film today, as seen in the context of the United States, stand only as a blatant misrepresentation of the current situation and its demands.

But is there truly nothing we can learn from such a film? And is there no hope for ultimate racial harmony?

New Zealand is a country some 8,000 miles from the Pacific. It is a country that has been called "God's own country" by the Negro, Sydney Poitier, that film today, as seen in the context of the United States, stand only as a blatant misrepresentation of the current situation and its demands.

When the Israelis are provoked into reprisals, Jordan looks to the U.N., yet continues to permit guerrilla bases to be used. Instead, the frontier of the two countries converge there, as at the apex of a triangle.

Before the deadline the required assurance was forthcoming from the German makers, substantiated later by the impartial F.I.A. The committee duly confirmed their triumph. Jinger Singh, rated second overall in the Safari, then objected but later withdrew the protest after unfavourable scenes which delayed the prizegiving ceremony and which would have been better avoided.

It was had luck for Vic Preston and Bob Gerrard that when they were leading on points and had most of the hazards behind them, they had to retire after scraping a bridge in the dust near Kilifi. Their misfortune does not detract from the success of the leaders who took their place. Unreserved congratulations go to the Hillary-Auld partnership and their Ford 20M for what was a magnificent performance.

Members of the public are to have the opportunity to purchase shares in the Kenya Tobacco Co. Ltd. in the next few days.

George, told a Press conference in Nairobi yesterday. "We feel that the time is right for us to turn over the shares of the company and to give citizens of Kenya an opportunity to share in the company's success."
The shares will be put on offer for two weeks from April 14 and will be available to all applications from Kenya citizens.

Mr. George added that the company had been considering the move for some considerable time, but it was only in the past year or two that it was felt that the time was becoming right to convert into public company.
Share application forms and details of prospective buyers will be available from today in banks, D.O.s, D.O.s and postboxes offices throughout the country.
To help citizens, the prospectus has already been prepared both in English and Swahili.
The shares will be sold in multiples of 25 up to 50 shares and thereafter in blocks of 50.
The reason for the minimum number being as low as 25 is to encourage the small investor, Mr. George explained.

Commonwealth 'power club' gets together

By R. N. WILSON

The experience gained by Australian and New Zealand forces in Vietnam will be of great value in the Commonwealth Defence Science Organisation, which is holding its third series of meetings in Australia this month.

Nearly every country in the world employs experts in the world's most advanced technology and it is military weapons but also to keeping equipment and various systems up to date.

The C.D.S.O. was formed in 1962, and has held meetings once every three years, previously in Canada and India.

Nearly every country in the world employs experts in the world's most advanced technology and it is military weapons but also to keeping equipment and various systems up to date.

Even the Prime Minister, Mr. Gorton, seems to be moving away from his original idea of a "Tortoise Australia" and is now concentrating on development projects, rather than defence for defence technology.

Any aspect of defence is controversial in Australia at the moment. Britain's withdrawal of Suez and President Nixon's policy of making America's Pacific neighbours play a bigger part in their own defence have caused the Government to move — however slowly — to re-shape its defence policy.

The scientists attending the C.D.S.O. conference are not the policy makers, but their appreciation of the logistical needs of the defence forces will be carefully studied by all the Governments concerned.

The C.D.S.O. committee looked on as a sort of "power club" where the wealthier Commonwealth nations could assist the economies of nations having them by their side.

The group will discuss the use of the Commonwealth countries in the defence of the Commonwealth.

ILLEGAL ENTRY

Sierra Leone restricts immigration

Sierra Leone is to clamp restrictions on immigration because many people are entering the country illegally, the police announced in Freetown.

The restrictions, to be applied from April 14, will be mainly enforced at the port.

At the same time the Government must threatened severe punishment for people harbouring or aiding illegal immigrants.

Immigrants, it is reported, have been arriving in Sierra Leone through what are described as unauthorised routes.

Police services and the restrictions would not apply to genuine business using Freetown port, who would be issued with permanent passes.

Once again, India's left-wing political party, the 17,000-member Congress Party, is target for growing Press speculation. Will the party split? Will the Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Morarji Deai, quit? Will the Prime Minister, Mr. Indira Gandhi, resign?

These again, reports of the recent demise of Congress Party's premier, the political party which appeared in so quickly a group who led in the party's formation.

Two events caused the split. One was the resignation of Mr. Manmohan Singh, Congress chief of Tamil Nadu (former Madras State), from the Central Working Committee, and Morarji Deai's resignation from the party.

Before going into the background of the two incidents, it is pertinent to mention that Mr. Subramaniam Swamy has resigned after six days and Mr. Deai is still the No. 2 man in the Gandhi cabinet.

No party as large as the 84-year-old Congress can be free from dissensions. Even at the time of Mahatma Gandhi, the party was riven by factions.

The Mahatma belonged to the Gopal Krishna Gokhale group and, in any case, she has the people on her side. Even the non-Congress States, including the West Bengal Marxists, have a speaking liking for her.

The Deai incident started at a meeting of the Congress parliament executive when he demanded an end to what he called the "vulgarification" campaign against him by a fellow Congress M.P., Chandra Shekhar.

He threatened to quit the party and retire from politics. He told the Prime Minister she had done precisely little to end the smear campaign.

INDIAN POLITICAL SPECULATION

Congress and Mrs. Gandhi carry on despite critics

By K. K. DUGGAL

asked Mrs. Gandhi why she shed from disciplining Mr. Shekhar. She was asked: "Madam, what sort of Government are you presiding over?"

The smear campaign began two years ago when Mr. Shekhar submitted a memorandum to the Prime Minister charging that Mr. Deai had favoured the House of Birlas leading industrialists. He demanded that a high-level commission be set up to probe Birlas's deals with the Government.

Mr. Deai rejected the demand for a commission of inquiry, saying that the Government had no charges and found them "without substance".

But an official report indirectly supported Chandra Shekhar's stand when it revealed that the Birlas industrial empire had expanded. It said the total assets of the Birlas had increased from Rs. 2,200 million to Rs. 5,000 million in three years.

Chandra Shekhar pointed out that the Congress Government was wedded to curbing monopolies and that the growing Birlas empire proved how serious it was about its professed policies. He said people like Mr. Deai were guilty of flouting party policy.

He demanded an apology and Mrs. Gandhi promised to get one, so far Mr. Deai has preferred not to press the issue further.

Mr. Subramaniam's resignation followed the Congress decision to form a coalition ministry in Bihar State with the support of a prince whom political records was suspect. He criticised the leadership for succumbing to an "unprincipled" coalition which would tarnish the party image.

Subsequently the Congress President, Mr. S. Nijalingappa, promised to drop the prince from the Bihar Government and Mr. Subramaniam withdrew his resignation.

the party has a comfortable majority in the Lower House of Parliament, with 233 of the total 543 seats. Even if Morarji Deai were to walk out, no more than 100 M.P.s would follow him.

He is a disciplined soldier and will not want to raise the banner of revolt in his old age — he is 73, he has been followed by 20 years in the wilderness.

He tried hard to become the Prime Minister but when he found he had little chance, he joined Mrs. Gandhi's Cabinet.

The failure of non-Congress coalitions in several States will certainly defuse many would-be defectors. In many cases (as in Gujarat) those who have had little chance, he joined Mrs. Gandhi's Cabinet.

Mr. Deai's opposition to the Prime Minister could bring a couple of opposition parties on to Mrs. Gandhi's side. She certainly has the sympathy of the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam, which has 25 M.P.s.

Mrs. Gandhi would have a far better chance of leading a left coalition than any other Congress leader, should the splits really grow and, in any case, she has the people on her side. Even the non-Congress States, including the West Bengal Marxists, have a speaking liking for her.

The Deai incident started at a meeting of the Congress parliament executive when he demanded an end to what he called the "vulgarification" campaign against him by a fellow Congress M.P., Chandra Shekhar.

He threatened to quit the party and retire from politics. He told the Prime Minister she had done precisely little to end the smear campaign.

juggles with the Bourbons

Is there going to be another War of the Spanish Succession after Gen. Franco has given up the ghost of the patient?

The answer is a modification of one developed in 1919 by Dr. Liotta in his book "The War of the Bourbons in the 19th Century".

Under the law of succession it is left to him to name the next king, but his candidate must be Spanish, Roman Catholic, and of lineage, at least 30 years old, also approved by the Cortes of the Spanish Parliament.

If legitimacy were the only law, the choice would be Alfonso XIII, who died in 1931, but he was a deaf mute and, in 1931, renounced his claim.

Many years later, he was taught to speak by his second wife, a German opera singer, but he asserted his claim, arguing that the original renunciation was invalid because it had never been ratified by the Cortes.

The candidate who would have support of most Spanish monarchists is Don Juan, a prince of Barcelona. But the claims of all the heirs of Alfonso XIII are challenged by another branch of the Spanish Bourbons — the formidable faction known as the Carlists. They took this name from Don Carlos, younger brother of King Ferdinand VII, who ruled Spain from 1808 to 1833 and died without a son and a heir. He had no sons and he left by throne to his daughter Isabella. Uncle Carlos protested under the Spanish law, he argued, succession to the female line was not allowed.

The dispute led to civil wars which lasted on and off for 60 years. The Carlists lost, but they maintain their royal claim to the day. The present claimant is Prince Xavier of Bourbon-Parma and Braganza, aged 80.

Of these three old Pretenders — the Carlist Xavier and the Alphonse Jaime and Juan — whom Don Juan has named as his heir, the latter is none of them. His share is among the Young Pretenders — all from the 19th century — and he is third in line.

There are Don Jaime's son Prince Alfonso, aged 32, who lives in a Madrid bank; Don Juan's son Juan Carlos, aged 31, who is a lawyer in the army; and Don Xavier's son, Prince Karl-Hans, aged 38, who takes a serious interest in social problems and has worked in an Asturian coal mine for six weeks (incompetent

Sawmill adds impetus to Tanzania's growth

By F. R. ISHENGOMA

Recent land consolidation use of Tanzania's most substantial natural resources, and large areas have been set aside as forest reserves.

To make them available effectively to the development of the nation, these forest reserves must be fully developed and exploited to the fullest possible degree, like other resources such as water, wildlife and minerals.

Tanzania, being an agricultural country, must base its development primarily on agriculture. However, agricultural development must be accompanied by industrialisation to achieve faster development.

Hence Tanzania has since independence placed considerable emphasis on industrialisation tapping much of Tanzania's agricultural natural resources.

This has resulted in the establishment of a flourishing secondary industry which processes the country's agricultural raw materials instead of exporting them immediately, as in pre-independence days.

The establishment of secondary industries and the nation's general economic industrial and social surge forward has created an increased demand for timber.

Tanzania's most valuable timber product is "muingu", used for furniture and cabinet-making. It is also a valuable export commodity and provides a fine four-making utility overseas.

Other valuable timbers are "mindi", blackwood and camphor. Today's pace of industrialisation has increased the demand for softwood timber.

The demand for softwood was realised by the Government in 1926 when it was decided to embark on a long-term afforestation project in northern Kilimanjaro.

The first recognizable fruits of this undertaking will be reaped when a modern 294,000 sawmill being built at Rongai, 70 miles from Mombasa on the border with Kenya, goes into operation later this year.

"Hitherto produce of the afforestation project was transported to Mombasa where it fed a few primary wood industries.

Construction work on Rongai (sawmill started late last December following the signing of an agreement August, 1967, between the United Nations Development Fund and the Tanzanian Government for a joint Forest Industries Development Project, estimated at cost $50,200. The cost was to be shared equally by the two sides.

A feasibility study which included the selection of a site for the sawmill was then carried out. The newly appointed Tanzanian manager of the project, Mr. C. A. Kitambi, who returned to Tanzania from West Germany where he spent seven years studying wood science and technology at the University of Hamburg, said the Rongai sawmill is the first of a number of industries to be developed under the programme.

"It will be followed up by a number of related industries, including a paper-pulp industry, a plywood mill and charcoal production," he said.

Three Czechoslovak experts, Mr. A. Karda, a building engineer, Mr. V. Furt, a sawmill engineer, and Mr. J. Prazan, a sawmill technician, are supervising the building of the Rongai mill.

Work on the gangway is at an advanced stage, while the building of an office, a power installation block and the construction of the sawmill staff quarters is due to be finished some time next month at a cost of $50,000.

Machines to be valued $44,000 will be installed and will, among others, include sawmill equipment, sawworking machinery and logging equipment.

Mr. Karda, the building engineer, said logs which would be transported from the forest to the site by tractor, will specially designed trailers will slip along a concrete pavement into a loading chamber, avoiding the tedious work of having to push the logs manually.

Efficient logging production, the project manager, Mr. E. Janosik, said initial production will be 300,000 to 400,000 cubic feet of timber a year, depending on output.

"This is more than the entire logging output of Tanzania in 1967 from East Africa and overseas."

"The production will be doubled within six years," Mr. Janosik said.

The sawmill, which occupies a field area of 105 acres, will provide jobs for 50 people. It will be fed with logs from a 2,000-acre mahogany forest, which is to cover 10,000 acres when planting is completed. The forest will stretch from Rongai to West Kilimanjaro.

In the middle of the forest workers cut down a huge tree to use in the logging process. A steel rod is used to ensure that the tree falls in the right direction.

efficiently. Logged wood is a ready supply of timber for the mill.

To guard against possible damage of young trees by the logging process, Mr. Janosik said that human beings who are not constantly exposed to artificial noise, the scientist today has to seek out safe timber in the jungles of South America or Africa, or in the polar wastes.

Everywhere else, noise, the invisible enemy, is virtually omnipresent. It escalates from mere nuisance to a level where resistance involves an effort of endurance. One may climb to a point where it becomes an assault on the body, causing both mental and physical disturbance.

Yet the problem of noise is still far from receiving the attention it deserves.

Unlike other forms of attack on human beings, noise is not always punishable in law. Whether sudden, intermittent or continuous, noise is not so evident a form of assault as a blow on the head, but it is, nonetheless, likely to cause some kind of damage.

According to Dr. Alan Bell of WHO, noise is both an occupational hazard and a public nuisance. That noise creates problems in industry is, however, no recent discovery. Nearly three centuries ago the Italian medical writer Ramazzini noted in his book on occupational disease, De Morbis Artificum, that workers engaged in a craft deal. Later, in the 19th century, as the industrial revolution began to get into its stride, a considerable literature began to ac-

Men and women 'the creators of all progress'

The director-general of the World Health Organisation, Dr. W. G. Candau, on the anniversary of World Health Day, which was celebrated this week,

Men and women are essentially human beings. Without health, progress and intervention, man would be sterile instruments indeed.

Managers, the objectives of development are health and productivity. They are reciprocal and complementary. Without health, productivity can hardly flourish. On the other hand, productivity may increase the means and opportunity for better health.

That work, upon which productivity also depends, has its hazards. Apart from accidents, men now seldom are likely to be damaged, fatally by their occupation, as was often the case in the not too remote past.

Yet the basic conditions for human health—clean air, clean water, clean food, clean noise, toxic substances, fatigue—all of them undermine the worker's fitness. The subsoil, drinking only in terms of production, may develop types of machinery which while brilliant in performance are detrimental to health. Excessively loud, ill-health. Paradoxically, however, considered efforts to increase production of producing output because of illness and absenteeism.

"However, a properly planned health programme will deal with these and other hazards, and promote health in doing so."

"Occupational" health and safety is the preparation of illness and the improvement of working conditions. Machinery can be adapted to man, rather than man to the machine. Fatigue can be diminished and monotony avoided. In another context, the worker can be specially selected for his job, and latent skills can be developed.

"Doctors, nurses, social workers, health engineers and architects can all contribute in maintaining the physical and mental well-being of the worker."

NOISE—A HIDDEN ENEMY

By A. Sriganyov

Modern civilisation depends on the machine, on the internal combustion engine, the jet aircraft, and a technology which makes noise. To find human beings who are not constantly exposed to artificial noise, the scientist today has to seek out safe timber in the jungles of South America or Africa, or in the polar wastes.

Everywhere else, noise, the invisible enemy, is virtually omnipresent. It escalates from mere nuisance to a level where resistance involves an effort of endurance. One may climb to a point where it becomes an assault on the body, causing both mental and physical disturbance.

Yet the problem of noise is still far from receiving the attention it deserves.

Unlike other forms of attack on human beings, noise is not always punishable in law. Whether sudden, intermittent or continuous, noise is not so evident a form of assault as a blow on the head, but it is, nonetheless, likely to cause some kind of damage.

According to Dr. Alan Bell of WHO, noise is both an occupational hazard and a public nuisance. That noise creates problems in industry is, however, no recent discovery. Nearly three centuries ago the Italian medical writer Ramazzini noted in his book on occupational disease, De Morbis Artificum, that workers engaged in a craft deal. Later, in the 19th century, as the industrial revolution began to get into its stride, a considerable literature began to accumulate about noise and its effects on hearing.

Today, when the majority of workers are surrounded by some kind of machinery, the noise situation is total, and the problem it raises are correspondingly greater. Industrial research in many countries has shown that noise in the work environment is the main cause of occupational deafness.

Some form of hearing damage, either temporary or permanent, is likely to affect men subjected to constant noise in a workshop.

A sound is essentially a vibration, and its intensity is described in decibels (dB). A sound of 5 dB strikes the human ear as faint, while 100 dB is aggressive. Experts are not unanimous regarding maximum noise levels, but there is fairly wide agreement that above 85 dB there is a risk of permanent deafness. Some specialists maintain that no worker should be exposed to 135 dB or more without appropriate protection. Certain national legislations limit the permissible maximum levels to 75 to 85 dB for workers doing an eight-hour shift daily in noisy surroundings.

The table following indicates the approximate intensity, in decibels, of a number of familiar daily noises:

Whisper	20 dB
A watch ticking at 1 metre	30 dB
Conversation	60 dB
Street noise	80-90 dB
Sports car	80-95 dB
Motocycle without silencer	120 dB
Lawn	85-95 dB
Pinch press	95-105 dB
Typical saw	100-110 dB
Sand blasting	114 dB
Reverberating	130 dB

Laboratory and field tests show that noise alone, even as an individual factor, in some circumstances may cause output, depression, irritability, morale, and behaviour factor in accidents. Noise also causes stress, fatigue, particularly in individuals who are not used to it.

Prove, therefore, that noise, though it is not only a physical but a psychological factor, is a hidden enemy. Before the last few years, noise was estimated to be the second most important cause of occupational deafness, after the loss of hearing.

In spite of all this, the progress will neglect the problem, though it is, possibly, the most improving work. In general, the noise situation is still at the substitution of one noise for another, but not the elimination of noise. In general, the noise situation is still at the substitution of one noise for another, but not the elimination of noise.

Work on the building of an office and power installations block at Rongai is at an advanced stage under the supervision of the building engineer, Mr. A. Karda.

One of this year's African drivers, Peter Shiyukah, Permanent Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Communications, takes the floor with a partner. He drove a BMC 1800 which was time-barred at Mtwara.

The stresses of victory and defeat were forgotten during the Safari Ball at the Charter Hall on Tuesday night:

Upright finish B.B.C. FILM OF SAFARI

Early on in the Safari it was reported that Car 46, driven by Hemsworth and Barrow, had rolled in the Elmentaria area. This was incorrect. The drivers completed the course in their Alfa Romeo, incurring 974 penalty points. Viewers in Britain will be able to share all the excitement of this year's East African Safari in a B.B.C. television programme to be shown on Saturday. A camera crew followed the event and the film they made of it, entitled Midnight in Mombasa, will appear in the regular motoring series, Wheelbase.

When Sadolins have finished you won't recognize these rally cars.

ears working for the Commonwealth fascination of the Commonwealth is that it is always... So much has happened and to the Institute which miniature collection, since the 16 years ago that now I must peer over the void retirement. I find it much pleasant to look back over... I have made these changes... I am directly responsible to all of it as it sounds... I have come to believe that the realities of the Commonwealth lie not in political relations... I wish I could say the same about my children... The public in Britain and elsewhere has not so over-looked with trouble stories from the Commonwealth countries.

Millions of people have visited the Commonwealth Institute in London since it moved to new premises seven years ago... Here, the retiring Director, SIR KENNETH BRADLEY, who has guided the Institute since 1952, explains its aims and his ideas of what the Commonwealth means... I am directly responsible to all of it as it sounds... I have come to believe that the realities of the Commonwealth lie not in political relations... I wish I could say the same about my children... The public in Britain and elsewhere has not so over-looked with trouble stories from the Commonwealth countries.

It is acceptable to other people... But it is there, and it uses form a unique and remarkably serviceable foundation on which the peoples of the Commonwealth can, and are, building an increasingly useful and effective co-operative society in almost every field you can think of... This is the philosophy which, in recent years, has come to underlie our teaching at the Institute... More than 30,000 schoolchildren a year come to learn from these exhibitions... They are taught about the peoples and how they live and what they do for a living... For us the young are by far the most important people... The future of the Commonwealth lies in the hands of the young... We have been pioneering new ways of promoting cultural exchange... I wish I could say the same about my children... The public in Britain and elsewhere has not so over-looked with trouble stories from the Commonwealth countries.

The "back-cloth" to this picture is a handsome curtain... The room of the Commonwealth Institute... schoolchildren as a record of their educational visit to the West Africa last year... The week trip for 700 students was arranged by the British Tourist Company in conjunction with the Institute... The certain vivid record of some of the impressions they gained of the peoples of Ghana, Sierra Leone and Nigeria.

By Ralph Hawkins
The curtain goes up this morning on Kenya's biggest, and potentially most spectacular, Open golf championship, with a field of 54 players awaiting the event at Muthaiga Golf Club over the next four days.

When visiting professionals began arriving in Nairobi this week, news reached the K.G.U. that six official entries would not, after all, be competing.

The professionals, Hugh Jackson, play, and I believe, have created a good impression among the Open committee.

Muthaiga has used lift grass, for three successive years, and Peter Thomson, remarked two years ago that the existing lift grass was the sixth, fifth and fifth — were the finest on the course.

The course itself, 6,627 yards long and over 72, is looked upon as being one of the best in the world, considering the long stretch of hot, dry weather we have just experienced.

It is playing a little on the short side, but not nearly as short as what was played for the 1967 Open, when Guy Wolstenholme, the eventual winner, and Malcolm Greaves both created a course record with rounds of 66.

In fact, in that championship, the field ranged off to a 72, and the 1967 Open was a new under par 279, and one would expect something in that region again this year by the winner.

Manoche Bembirige, who plays today with David Farrar — the penultimate pair — won his title at Kapsal last year with a one over par 289, and a score of 289 but on should prefer this unlikely feat. The 1967 Open will be equally shared. No doubt if an amateur holes his tee shot at the nominated green, the sponsors would present him with a suitable consolation prize.

An interesting feature of this year's championship is that the interval — B. M. Stewart and R. A. Bird, D. J. Brown and J. Jeffrey, G. Grattis and J. Baring, P. M. Cummings and P. Ngugi, J. Lynch and Farrar, E. Jones and J. Kahugu, J. Ndungu and M. Wair, M. R. J. E. Meyers and P. J. D. J. Groody and J. Lamb, D. Douglas, A. A. Rice and J. C. M. Amher and M. B. Mounier, E.

Naivasha wins Perigny Cup

Standard Correspondent
 Mombasa Yacht Club visited Naivasha in strength over the Easter weekend to defend, unsuccessfully, the Perigny Cup, which they had won last year. The Perigny has had a chequered history since its inauguration in 1938 when it was first sailed by Mr. Naivasha.

During the race on April 19, 1969, when it started again in 1969, Naivasha (Mombasa) was the only boat to finish. The boat was taken in by a number of years, during which Mombasa has been the only boat to finish at the start or at Naivasha.

There were ten boats in all, the majority unfortunately on light seas.
