FORT TALL LEADER RETIRES AFTER 26 YEARS IN OFFICE

Kisumu saves on Budget estimates

"Standard" Correspondent, Kisumu. A review of estimates by the Government of Kenya for the financial year 1939-40, as compared with the estimates for 1938-39, shows a saving of K2,230,000. The estimates for 1939-40 are K27,000,000, as compared with K29,230,000 for 1938-39. The saving is due to a number of factors, including a reduction in the estimates for the Kenya Police, the Kenya Mounted Police, and the Kenya Constabulary.

'Fragmented attitude' of Kenya politicians

BECAUSE of the present "fragmented and individualistic attitude among the many Kenya politicians" it was necessary that as many as possible should attend the constitutional conference, Mr. M. Blundell said in Nairobi.

He added that due to the large measure of agreement among members of the New Kenya Party—launched on Wednesday night—not all of those who were eligible to go would do so.

Asked about the reasons for choosing London as the venue for the talks, Mr. Blundell said he thought the most important point in favour of London was the fact that the Colonial Secretary would be able to devote more time to the problems of Kenya than he would if the talks had been held in the Colony. Apart from that, the Colonial Secretary could have left Britain for so long a period.

He said the party intended to discuss the widening of the electoral college system by which local college members were elected. He said that the new party members were elected in the whole country rather than just the Legislative Council.

As this was one of the topics which would be discussed at the conference he did not wish to anticipate it too much.

Longer wait
Mr. Blundell considered the delay before independence was reached in the Colony would be "the longer that many people are anticipating".

He said that the Kenya people in government they would need to be an anxious street in London.

Students ask for awards

Kenya Makerere Students' Union has asked the Director of Education to institute special consideration for C.P.U. students (including) in maintenance and tuition fees in all Kenya secondary schools.

In a letter to the Director, the union says that the shortage of graduates in Kenya can be solved many hands than recruiting students from other schools.

"We are convinced, however, that if this heavy burden falls on the graduates in light of a special award as evidence, a much greater number of Kenyan students will go in for education."

Urgent problem

The New Kenya Party is trying to evolve a mechanism which would reduce the number of white jobs in the public sector, while making it work. The party is trying to solve the "white problem" by the number of white jobs in the public sector, while making it work.

Mr. Blundell said he believed the European community would be very interested in the principle of the lowering of the salary and the end of the remaining was the question of the mechanism.

Bice research

Research carried out over the past few years has had little effect on the price of wheat in Kenya, says the present research, carried out by the Kenya Agricultural Research Board.

The results of the research showed that the price of wheat in Kenya was determined by the world price, and that the local price was determined by the world price, and that the local price was determined by the world price.

Retirement plan for Somali-Lanil civil servants

Mr. A. B. Thomas, who has been appointed Director of the Public Service Commission, has announced that the Government is considering the possibility of a retirement plan for civil servants.

Mr. Thomas said that the plan would provide for a pension scheme for civil servants who have served for a certain number of years.

Moderate opinion

There was considerable doubt as to whether the state of the economy in the Colony would be a problem for the African community, Mr. Blundell said.

He said that the economy of the Colony was in a state of transition, and that it was not yet clear what the future would be.

OVER 600 COLOPS

Alterations to trade campaign Bill

"Standard" Correspondent.

UGANDA Legislative Council adjourned after giving a third reading to the Bill which, if passed, will outlaw 'trade' campaigns. Two amendments to the Bill were made at its committee stage.

One was an amendment to the Bill which would give the Governor the power to suspend the Bill if it was found to be prejudicial to the public interest.

The second amendment was to give the Governor the power to suspend the Bill if it was found to be prejudicial to the public interest.

Some confusion

Mr. A. M. Odoe (Lango) expressed his feeling that he had been given prior information that the Bill was to be amended. He said that he had been told that the Bill was to be amended, and that he had been told that the Bill was to be amended.

BRITISH FABRICS WIN 37

WORLD-WIDE HONOURS

By DOROTHY FOX

Of all the awards for fine fabrics which are open to British manufacturers, those of the annual International Fabric Exposition at Sacramento, California, are among the most sought after. The competition is open to manufacturers of all types of textiles throughout the world, and the 1958 entries were judged by an independent "panel" of 15 expert designers and four meretricians who were divided into four panels.

Each entry was judged by merit, style, whoop, colour, richness of the fabric, the designer's use of the material. These which received four ribbons were awarded gold medals.

Thirty of the 25 gold medals awarded went to 34 entries from the U.K. which showed an increase of a total of 159 fabrics. In fact Britain won more awards than any other country, with the U.K. winning 15, Denmark with 12, Sweden with 11.

The judges are said to have been particularly impressed by the technical innovation of fabric design that Britain is still one of the world's great designers and also for their selling quality, taking price into consideration.

This year it was decided that the winning fabrics were to be made in London, that they should be of a high standard of design, and that they should be of a high standard of design, and that they should be of a high standard of design.

NAIROBI TO THE UNION FOR £52

By JOHN COTTON

DURING our three and a half years in East Africa it was our custom, with two children and hotel charges sleeping in Government rest houses or in the car and eating by the roadside.

Thus when my contact ended in August and we decided to drive to South Africa and catch the boat home to Britain, we determined to keep the total cost of the road trip down to £50 or less.

For this end we bought a rather ratty but strongly made ex-army test, six feet square, for £67, and a couple of sleeping bags. I had never pitched a tent before so was given a quick lesson in this complicated process on the crowded motorway in front of the shop retaining my wretched gear, patiently tripped over the ropes and poles and generally got in the way.

We set off from Nairobi on a fine and windy morning on August 23, our small 1½ hp car crammed with food, blankets, dishes, pots and pans, mugs, tent, folding chairs, my dinner tacker (some favour knives) and water bottles made, petrol and four crumpled human beings.

First taste

The first night we spent in a rest house at Hathi in Tanganyika. About 200 miles south of Nairobi, it was very primitive, but there was no charge. The rest house is situated on a hill and is an imposing building of the surrounding mountains. The hills below and distant bush first.

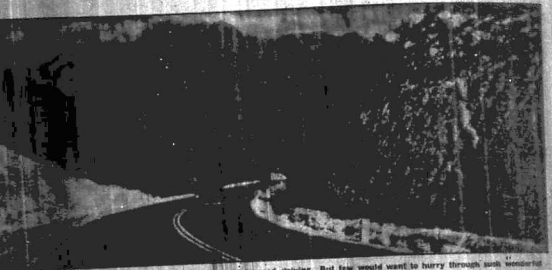

We were on our way at 7 a.m. winding through the Dan Pienze Empire in the thick mist I have seen outside London.

About 180 miles we were not intended to stop at. A turquoise white-washed rest house perched on top of a high rock like a castle on the Rhine, we reluctantly climbed, we ought to push on a few more miles.

We came to expect this decision because (a) We didn't pass any rest house and had to put up the tent; (b) We got too near Iringa and had to ditch the tent among a lot of banana shambas and their owners who thought we were putting on a sort of Pumph and lady show for them; (c) I took up hours to put the tent up and organize a meal and a further two hours to take the tent down again and re-load up and the car loaded next morning.

That was our first taste of tent life which went of quite well apart from a few minor annoyances, such as not being able to sleep, the hardness of the ground, a belief that we were about to be attacked by lions or tigers, and the occasional loud noise which sounded like a mixture of a doctor's beating and a punctured bicycle and was probably made by a bird.

At six next morning we were visited by an African, wrapped in a blanket who looked very welcome. He brought us a cup of tea and a blanket which he actually dropped in the over one of the sleeping bags. Just as artfully I took the blanket away, while he made a great show of astonishment.

As we drove down the steep hill while the rain ran down the road, we found we were following an excellent road, following an excellent road, following an excellent road.

Prison bell That day, Tuesday, we passed through Durban, a very busy town with many big buildings in the main street with Artex and the occasional horseless.

That night we stopped in a good rest house in the town of Durban. The night was very quiet, and we were very comfortable.

Next day we hit the road again, and we were very comfortable. The road was very good, and we were very comfortable.

ELECTRICAL EXHIBITION

SHOW How to avoid accidents FOR HOME

By J. E. HUDGON, Secretary of the Association of Supervising Electrical Engineers, East Africa Centre.

THE second Electrical Exhibition opens in the City Hall Nairobi, next week. Once again we have endeavoured to give everyone an up-to-date picture of just what electricity can do in the home and industry.

In fact in this exhibition we have tried to cover all aspects of electrical equipment for which we depend so much in these days.

Electricity is becoming more and more our servant in the home to give us light, heat, water, ventilation and cooking. It has been used to give us refrigeration, and in the kitchen it helps to prepare and store our food.

EAHER WORK
Dishes can be washed cleanly by taking a bath or putting on a scrub. By the same token all housework is made easier.

Each year that passes brings more development in the application of electricity to domestic establishments, and in particular, schools, and similar institutions, where large numbers of people are fed and housed are using more electrical appliances.

With all these developments it is still up to us as individuals to play our part and make certain that all equipment we use is a new piece of repair and that we fully understand the very simple precautions that should be taken for safety.

There is an view at this exhibition a very interesting and instructive display of 11 safety equipment a wall to use them.

How to avoid accidents in house

By AN ELECTRICAL INSPECTOR

MOST people have experienced an electric shock at some time or other, and probably thought very little about it. I can still remember my first shock clearly when as a child of about 10 years I was playing with the handle of a very old-fashioned, broken switch cover in the locker room I had just entered. It was a completely novel experience.

I did it several times and introduced a great comradely of my own. Whether dirty-minded or not, I got a kick out of it from their many foolish comments on good conduct for an old boy. I would not consent to be shocked again, but today, in the light of many years of experience, I am glad to have been involved.

Some shocks do not come from electric shocks. There are probably many instances that have occurred, but here are the statistics in Kenya in a rough order of their frequency.

SEVERE EFFECTS
If you don't wear your shoes you have about one chance in three of receiving a shock from an ordinary domestic electrical supply or several inches to about ten to 15 feet.

If you are wearing shoes that are not made of rubber or other insulating material, you are in the habit of the garden in fact to be in contact with the ground.

There are many ways of avoiding shocks from electrical equipment, but here are a few that are simple and easy to do.

some verandah roof. It had rained on the fatal day and the clothes were usually fixed in before dark, had been left and standing the end of the verandah.

The report mentioned on the verandah light and rack had been used to dry clothes. It was the most common cause of the fire. It was killed.

Just one more account of how it happened before I wind up.

A man wired an extension to his radio. He used a very shabby bit of old wire with lots of bare patches. It had been used for years. He had no idea that there were no insulation on the wire covered by his good enough.

At one point he led the wire to the top of a verandah. He had not been told to do so. He had a bare patch at that point. The man's clothes were packed in such a way that the wire touched his shirt.

WITHOUT SHOES
A woman without shoes took a bath. She was standing on the floor. She was shocked.

A man was shocked when he was standing on the floor. He was wearing shoes.

I should have to occupy great deal of space to recount all the unhappy events that have occurred since I started writing. It is not possible to do so.

It is not possible to do so. It is not possible to do so.

X-RAYS USED TO 'FINGER-PRINT' RARER MINERALS

By A. BATTERSBY

Electrical methods of measurement and identification are widely used in industry today. In fact, the measurement of moisture content in paints, temperature measurement in furnaces, measurement of length with an accuracy of a fraction of a thousandth of an inch, identification of elements by spectroscopy, and X-ray photography, which is used in the diagnosis of malignant tumours and for the detection of metal objects.

Most people are familiar with the use of X-rays either because they have at some time been X-rayed themselves or know someone who has. The main uses of X-rays in medicine are in the diagnosis of malignant tumours and for the detection of metal objects.

The structure of the body by means of a shadowgraph, which is a shadow of internal body structures is photographed and examined in detail. This is possible because, unlike the body, the X-rays pass through the body and are not absorbed. The X-rays are then captured on a photographic plate in the same way as light. The effect is similar to shining a light from a torch through a hole in a board. The shadow of the hole is cast on the wall. In the same way, the shadow of the body is cast on the photographic plate.

The latest in electrical methods of measurement and identification are widely used in industry today. In fact, the measurement of moisture content in paints, temperature measurement in furnaces, measurement of length with an accuracy of a fraction of a thousandth of an inch, identification of elements by spectroscopy, and X-ray photography, which is used in the diagnosis of malignant tumours and for the detection of metal objects.

Another use of X-rays, which has been mentioned above, is the identification of materials. This is done by using X-rays to produce a spectrum of the material. The spectrum is then compared with the spectrum of a known material.

A particular instance where this system is used is in the mining industry. standard to move it. It was placed in both the stands on the standard line I was off and the lamp not stuck. The floor was cement. The man, who was not wearing shoes, was killed.

LIVE CONTACT
In another case an amateur repairer to the wiring of a house had left a live wire in contact with the electrical supply. The wire was only live when the verandah light was on and the defect had undoubtedly existed for some time before it led to this.

The washing line was used as a length of fence wire and was in contact with the ground. The man who was shocked was standing on the ground.

LIGHTING PLAYS IMPORTANT PART IN OUR EVERYDAY LIFE

By T. PROCTOR, who has won the Lenin Prize for the best colour magazine, the Magara magazine.

WHETHER we like it or not, our environment is largely affected by light, natural or artificial. It is a fact that the climate is deteriorating, but few of us realize that the changing light values in Britain are largely responsible for the degree of deterioration.

A cold, crisp morning with an equally cold but visible sun is described as invigorating but an overcast day of the same temperature is associated with resignation and Britain's terrible weather is a factor.

A few of us realize that the sun is not the only source of light. The sun is not the only source of light. The sun is not the only source of light.

NATIONAL MINISTER PLEDGES EARLY REVISION OF VOTERS' ROLLS TO MARK TIME

The treasurer and one of the founders of the National Party, A. B. Janjuzar, said yesterday that the Kenya National Party was, as far as it was concerned, in 'total storage' until after the January constitutional conference.

A BILL to amend Kenya's existing electoral law will be introduced by the Government as soon as appropriate, the Chief Secretary, Mr. G. A. G. G. said yesterday. Every effort would be made to ensure that voters' rolls were brought up to date by the next General Election. Mr. Coult said that this should be done before the Government's reaction to a question by Mr. E. L. Njiru, who had pointed out that the Government had for several years promised that the rolls would be brought up to date and numerous deaths and missing persons removed. He asked when these provisions would be implemented.

REPORT ON MAU MAU

Mr. Coult also told the House that the report of the inquiry on the origin, methods and growth of Mau Mau had been received. As it was a lengthy document it had not had time to be printed.

Answering a third question put by Mrs. E. H. G. W. G. Coult, Mr. Coult said that until recently copies of the rolls were not sent to the United States.

Transport by road threat to rail rate

CONSTIPATION'S gone for good!

ALL RAIL (Rakes)

SPEAKING during the debate on the Government's speech in the Kenya Legislative Council, the Minister for Lands, Mr. Mathison, made the following statement:

Most members have touched on the reference in the outside the Kenya Lands. The Government's approach to the Government's speech to agricultural land outside the Kenya Lands. The Member for Nairobi North (Mr. E. L. Howard-Williams) with a display of amiable ferocity, looked forward to having an opportunity to speak on the heart of our country's most important problem.

I think it is not generally realized, certainly not by all, that the Government's policy of concentrating public funds on road transport is a threat to the railway rate.

KENYA SETS HIGH STANDARDS ATHLETICS

Dolphin is winner of K.Y.A. flag

MUCH has been said and written about the performance of the 1950 Kenyan Olympic standards set for the 1950 Olympic year. The object, of course, is to limit the number of competitors to a manageable number. Very high standards indeed have been drawn up for all events save the 100 and 200 metres, and 500 and 1000 metres, which are the province of the amateur competitors. In each event, the standards set for the 1950 Olympic year are 10 per cent above those of the 1948 Olympic year. This means that only a few athletes will be able to qualify. Only thrills of game saved for closing minutes

ENGLAND beat Northern Ireland 5-1 with a last-minute goal in a British international championship soccer match at Wembley Stadium after leading 4-0 at half-time. England thus avenged their 3-2 defeat by the Irish when they last met at Wembley two years ago. The Irish, who shared the championship title with England last year, have now lost the chance of retaining it.

A crowd of 90,000 saw a very ordinary game which lacked sparkle and contained few flashes of brilliance. The only real thrills came in the last three minutes when Ireland equalised and England scored again to win.

NORWICH KNOCKED OUT BY READING

NORWICH City, which had been in the English Football Association Cup last season, when they were knocked out of the final, have now failed to progress beyond the first round.

They were knocked out by their Division III Reading, 2-1, in a replay at Reading. On a sticky day at the changes there were a lot of goals scored. Only one goal was scored in the first half, but Reading scored twice in the second half.

Penalty missed

The Irish missed a great chance to begin the second half in level terms when they failed with a penalty five minutes from the interval. Jimmy McCoy, the Irish captain, who was trapped when going through, tried a soft kick, but it was too slow and the England goalkeeper, Brian Hart, was able to bring it to the right to save.

OTHER WAYS THE K.N.F.U. CAN SERVE PLANTATION FARMERS

Other uses could be found for £300,000

I WAS shocked to read that a group of 2000 K.N.F.U. members had been found for £300,000. I am sure that the plantation industry in Kenya is not aware that it is so important that there is a very large fund available to be used in the most efficient agricultural producer.

I felt it is most invidious to have a group of 2000 members in one section of our agricultural industry, and farmers, who are all right in their own country where the Government has a need for only among the most efficient and well-to-do of the plantation industry. It is not fair to have a group of 2000 members in one section of our agricultural industry, and farmers, who are all right in their own country where the Government has a need for only among the most efficient and well-to-do of the plantation industry.

Railway strike

THE East African Railway strike has caused a lot of trouble in the East African countries. It has caused a lot of trouble in the East African countries. It has caused a lot of trouble in the East African countries. It has caused a lot of trouble in the East African countries.

By pressing for and obtaining the right to negotiate prices with Government at an annual price review, which the voice of the plantation industry, as consumers, would be fully represented.

By providing an association to strengthen the hand of all agricultural producers in final analysis, the property of the whole part of the industry will depend on that of the whole.

Employers more selective SUPPLY OF LABOUR EXCEEDED DEMAND

SUPPLY of workers exceeded demand in many areas of Kenya during 1953. When the trade recession and the low price obtained for agricultural products underlined the need for employers to make better use of their labour force.

The Labour Commissioner, Mr. J. L. Hubbard, says in his annual report that this surplus helped employers to become more selective in employing workers. Labour forces were reduced and increased output was often achieved by better supervision of the smaller units.

Many farmers and planters employed the services of the unemployed and free not minding the increased cost of the labour. The increased output made, the increased cost of the labour was accepted as a necessary evil to accept long-established ways of doing the work.

It was, however, pointed out that the country had entered a period of transition, a period where the general employment situation was changing. The Government was encouraging the economy's ability to generate new work opportunities for the unemployed. The agricultural labour force was being trained in various ways to meet opportunities in other parts of the economy.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS CONTINUES IN KENYA

INDUSTRIAL development continued in Kenya during 1953. The number of projects registered under the Factories Ordinance rose to 457—an increase of 290 over the 1947 total.

As a large number of unregistered factories had been discovered in the year, however, the rise of acceleration, this rise did not reflect the actual number of factories. Development is being carried on at a slower rate, the year being a period of transition in the view of the Government.

There were 1110 factories as against 1066 in the year 1952. Of these 528 (47 per cent) were African-owned and 582 (53 per cent) were European-owned. The total number of employees was 22,288 (40 per cent) African and 27,388 (50 per cent) European.

Of the total number of employees, 17,000 were African and 5,288 were European. The total number of employees was 22,288 (40 per cent) African and 27,388 (50 per cent) European.

90 per cent African

By mid-1953 there were 281,700 people employed in the Colony. Of these 253,733 (90 per cent) were African and 27,967 (10 per cent) were European. The total number of employees was 281,700.

Of the total number of employees, 17,000 were African and 5,288 were European. The total number of employees was 22,288 (40 per cent) African and 27,388 (50 per cent) European.

Fever death

When certain epidemic was used it was evident that a need to have it examined periodically. It was found that the local population was not sufficiently familiar with the law of the Government. There were 12 prosecutions for neglect of the Ordinance.

More than 700 accidents were reported under the Workers' Compensation Ordinance and 600 under the Compensation Ordinance. The total number of accidents was 1,300.

Accidents continue

The accident incidence continued to be greater in the manufacturing and construction industries. The total number of accidents was 1,300.

THE TEENAGERS—AND THEIR OUTLOOK ON PRESENT-DAY LIFE

HEALTHY bodies and lively brains are the qualities we look for in teenagers. To decide whether a boy or a girl has the first requisite is an easy task among the well-developed teenagers of Kenya. To discover the quality or the quantity of the second is not quite so simple.

In the past few weeks, I have learnt a great deal about Kenya teenagers. Interviewing liberal boys and girls was not easy but, on the whole, it was pleasant. That is, since I had got over a feeling of panic the first group of boys gave me. Most of them simply answered over me and I felt certain the cards had turned and they were going to interview me.

Generally speaking they were very polite, though a little superior. The method I adopted to carry out this survey, with the approval of my principal headmasters, was to write a questionnaire to various groups of boys and girls.

My survey included questions on their home and school life, school and residential provision of work, their interests, history, physical education, sports, music, medicine, and their attitude towards the Government and the future.

The article is primarily directed to boys. The girls will receive very little attention, but in a forthcoming issue I will attempt to deal with them. I am glad to say that the fact and figures of their own lives are being put to rest.

LEDA FARRANT asks Kenya's teenagers a few questions about themselves. Today she reports on the boys' answers. Next week she will deal with the girls and their answers.

KENYA POPULAR

"Do you like being in Kenya?" 94 per cent answered "Yes" and many of them added "Very much." Many of them want to work in Kenya after they have finished school.

"I have some lovely answers from the boys," she says. "The fact that some boys do not like Kenya but still want to work here leads to an interesting theory. Could it be that they do not like Kenya because they are not used to it? They say they cannot have everything."

NOT KNOWN

"The most definitely need advice that these were mostly boys of more than 17. So, perhaps, although in a sense of your home, at least, they are not so young as they seem to be."

Most of the boys said that they liked to play cricket and this picture, taken at a Nairobi school, seems to confirm it.

Close attention is given to a question by the writer who carried out the survey.

Education in the Colony praised

"Parents forget all too easily their children and do not understand how a son would be treated," if not a teenager, but I fully support this view."

"One wants to talk it over with the boy's father. Another, a 15-year-old boy, said that he was not cooperative. One boy says he makes suggestions all the time but it does not seem to make any difference. I detected letters from him. Cannot his parents listen to him—sometimes?"

TRANSPORT VITAL
A good 96 per cent of the boys were unanimous in answering "yes" to the question "Are you getting a good education here?"

TWO SCHOOL CHAPELS

TWO of Nairobi's leading schools—the Kenya High School for Girls and the Duke of York School for Boys—will have their annual dinners at the same time, December 27.

SCHOOL DISLIKES

What do you dislike most about your school? The natural dislike, "The food, exams, sports, authority with social activities," was the commonest answer. Some boys would not enjoy the climate in England (who would?) and others like the freedom here, but the greatest answer was that of the boys who said they would miss their parents' home.

ADVOCATE OF ECONOMY

THE veteran Liberal peer, Viscountess Sarnath, has just celebrated two anniversaries. The first was her 81st birthday the second, the 41st anniversary of her appointment as a member of the House of Lords. Only one other man has a comparable record, who completed 81 years as a P.M. last year.

Lord Sarnath is working a new book. He has already written 12. With such a long and successful career behind him, it seems likely that Lord Sarnath has accumulated quite a handsome fortune. Yet to many, he is a frugal and economical man, an ideal model for the young.

Also, he may careen in London within 100 miles from his 16th floor flat in Grosvenor Gardens. The baronet with whom he is acquainted has a house in London which he could not rent for less than £100 a week. He is a great reader, and he has a great respect for the letter. He has written a great many letters to the press, and he has a great respect for the letter. He has written a great many letters to the press, and he has a great respect for the letter.

THE woman who leads the largest free political party in the world is expected to retire at the end of the present term of office. She is Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of Mr. Nehru and president of India's Congress Party.

In less than a year ago Mr. Gandhi, who is 63, played an active part in politics. As Mrs. Nehru's only child (his wife died in 1932) she was one of the world's leading hostesses, entertaining for her father in Delhi. Her guests included Mr. Macmillan, Mr. Bulganin and Mr. Khrushchev, the latter no returning and unaccompanied to enter the stormy area of Indian politics. And Mrs. Gandhi, who taught French in London during the war, was content to stay in India with her mother. She is the wife of the head of the Government of the State of Kerala.

Michaela Denis writes sequel to 'Leopard in My Lap'

By LESLEY CLAY
If ten years ago, I had been told that I would be reviewing the second book of a Victorian young woman whom I first met when she was discovered dancing in the centre of a group of Wakamba tribesmen at Mwashiku, I would have to say, by the least surprised. Yet it was easy to recognise, even so long ago, that there was something special about Michaela Denis.

At the time of that first meeting, she was acting as a double for Deborah Nya, who had come to East Africa to film King Solomon's Mines. Her husband was already well known as a wildlife expert and big-game photographer and was acting as technical adviser for the film.

the contrary, she was attempting to identify herself with the life of the people in other words, trying to 'get into the skin' of Africa.

One of her stories I had been in Ride a Rhino and the book is composed of individual adventures among wild life, some old, some historical, and the Denis's painstaking efforts have been rewarded by the result.

There is a rapidity here which is not only in the writing, but in the plot, although it is kept up masterfully with the rest of the book, it was present that sooner or later it was to be trouble.

Michaela Denis riding on the back of a rhino. She is at Mwashiku in the game area at an elevated position as in the picture above. She is wearing the smaller animals she describes in her book.

At Longata at this moment the Denis's have 150 animals from a leopard and a cheetah down to bush babies and gerbils.

With this her second book, Michaela Denis has got fully into her stride. She is so easy in her writing, her story or series of incidents, so readily and a vivid picture of their lives in her book.

Throughout the book her mood and the efforts made by her to get her husband to see and preserve the wild life which surrounds their never ceases.

Michaela Denis says: 'Animals do not acquire a personality simply because they come in contact with human beings. If you are lucky enough to find animals you will soon discover that they are not individuals and that they are not individuals'.

There is a human in the book and a deep understanding of the habits of nature. Pictures abound, better even, I think, in Leopard in My Lap, and this time the author, as well as her husband, has taken many of them.

WISE WORDS ABOUT FOOD

By DEREK COARE

FOUR generations, French food and wines have been considered the epitome of gastronomic delights. French chefs have been in demand as cooks at the courts of kings and princes and in all the world's leading cities and restaurants.

Along with French wine, French cooking has set European standards throughout the world. In "The Food of France," an American encyclopedic work, which has traveled the length and breadth of the country, year after year, how France is known thoroughly and affectionately, discusses in detail, those who prefer the dishes which have made France its country's paradise.

After a brief history of French food and wine, the author discusses the evolution of French cuisine, its ingredients, and the art of the French chef. The book is a valuable reference for anyone interested in French food and wine.

which makes a reference book absorbing reading. "The Food of France" has done for France what "The Food of Italy" has done for Italy in Italian, "The Food of Spain" for Spain in Spanish, and so on. It is a book that every gastronomic enthusiast should have on his shelves.

Reliable guide

"What better theme for a book than food, wine and drink in the civilized world?" Mr. Chambers does not confine himself to the gastronomic delights of Italy. He states categorically that the volume "covers the whole as a reliable guide book to Italy, telling not only the things to eat and drink as well as the places to visit and stay overnight."

Recipes are discussed in a general manner in one cook might tell you another, but they are not accompanied by exact directions for quantities and method of cooking. HISTORY OF COMMERCE

Money has been considered in various forms other than the well-hated carry-over of notes. One of the earliest was the stone and many of Yap in the Caroline Islands.

A business man would be followed by a pile of stones, each carrying with it a definite value. The inventor of the stone was fortunate to have more mobile forms of currency than the carrying of the STANDARD BANK.

Nanyuki's first doctor did rounds in mule buggy

DR. CLAUDE MARTIN VERNON died on Wednesday, aged 61. Here Joan Vaughan pays tribute to one of the pioneers who served the Colony during its first years.

ALTHOUGH Nairobi and the surrounding districts were settled by pioneers who arrived well before the outbreak of the First World War, some up-country areas were not opened up for settlement until after the war, and the "pioneering era" in those parts ended comparatively recently.

Arriving in Kenya in 1920, Dr. Claude Martin Vernon was settled by pioneers with a practice that became Nanyuki's first doctor, with a practice that extended to Meru, when that township was cut off from the future Veroon Range. Dr. Vernon offered to guide the Pioneer settlers from Nanyuki and he set to the Tianshi Valley where Dr. Vernon abandoned his car and went on foot.

The farm was 2,000 acres covered in oat grass and burnt forest and completely under-tended and completely unproductive.

Being a doctor and a hardy man, Dr. Vernon did not feel able to tackle the task of being the sole of a household family who were scattered to construct a bush-hut and settle home from the Colony.

Early days in another country

BY THOMAS HICKMAN

A woman who went to Canada from London 30 years ago springs stoutly to the defence of emigrants if the hearsay speak badly of them.

For Mrs. Lillian Neustrom, the 65-year-old husband of Thomas Neustrom, who died in the first world war, the children were struggling to get on their feet in a new country, an emigrant's life was not so easy, woolly wool.

POLI AND MEAT

When the Headmaster decided more than half a century to embrace the country of London for the first time, they knew that it was not to be taken lightly.

They did not, however, expect the frequent changes which they encountered in their first days in the adopted country.

For a long time, it was not to be taken lightly, they had to board a steamer to reach their first glimpse of the adopted country - blackened windows.

'WOODED' WARRIES

'What a lot of disturbances they have here,' said the Headmaster. 'I have never known a more peaceful place than this one.'

They were not, however, in the least bit disturbed by the fact that the Headmaster was a 'wooded' warrier.

COUPLE BEGAN 'KENYA CLAN'

Each time he met a girl, he was not carrying a rifle. He was the second place where shopping could be done and only in a limited way. On the other hand, when there was a shortage, he became a very busy man.

On the day of the Christmas they arrived at securing the dress of the same fabric. The girl had had only one roll in stock.

It was probably on the same occasion that an African was dismissed out of a native market, that being the most suitable word available.

The doctor's practice outside of Nairobi was in the form of a small, particularly suitable, and often in a mule buggy, and often in a mule buggy, and often in a mule buggy.

He might be called on as a general adviser to the public, but he was almost invariably, but he was almost invariably, but he was almost invariably.

Back to practice

But they had some money they had invested and so they had to practice at the time of the war.

At the end of the war, and aged 61 he retired, leaving a house in Nairobi.

His son, Jack Maurice Vernon, who had the Nanyuki practice, had the Nanyuki practice, had the Nanyuki practice.

He returned to Nairobi with his grand-children, but he was almost invariably, but he was almost invariably.

Dr. Vernon was 61, his wife 58. They founded a clan of their own, and their son, Jack Maurice Vernon, who had the Nanyuki practice, had the Nanyuki practice.

There are 10 in the grand-children, and Dr. Vernon had 10 in the grand-children, and Dr. Vernon had 10 in the grand-children.

New designs bring foreign orders to U.K.

THE British furniture industry, which was before the First World War largely a craft industry with a preponderance of small makers, is today going through a minor revolution.

There has been a drastic reaction in the number of makers in the industry since the war and now the factors in the lower end higher, more efficient firms competing for the client first, and supplying furniture to the value of about £12,000,000 annually.

Contributing to this total are a number of much smaller plants relying upon specialised design often led to high quality standards for their products.

This process of elimination and specialisation is being questioned and recognition by the public has led to many makers in business they must realise that if they are to adopt the modern techniques in the furniture industry in the £30,000 in 1958 on most, and aspects to spend up to £200,000 this year.

Better types Production methods in the industry have set a standard of efficiency which compares favourably with the role of these ideas prevalent only a few years ago.

Yet today visitors to the recent furniture exhibition at Earl's Court, London, are often probably the widest selection of modernity priced furniture in the world.

Duty of the singer to interpret composer's work faithfully

RICHARD CARRIE, in the fourth of his articles on singing technique, discusses correct interpretation and the importance of keeping a balance between sound and sense.

It is the responsibility of a singer, shared with the accompanist, to transmit to his audience a complete and faithful picture of the song, and at the end of the performance the author of the words and the composer's interpretation must be individual for a song's emotional effect. The singer's own interpretation will differ from that of another, and a performer's response to his emotional appeal will depend largely upon how intelligent he is.

Intelligently is one of the most important factors in the singer's preparation, but it is not enough to be intelligent. The singer must also be sensitive, sympathetic and responsive to the mood of the words and the music. He must not be too literal, but he must not be too free. He must be able to interpret the composer's work faithfully.

ACTOR AS WELL
To create a picture, imagination is necessary, to enable the singer to see the scene as it is, and to feel the words. The actor's duty is to interpret the composer's work faithfully.

POWER CONTROL
The singer's voice is his instrument. He must be able to control it, to produce the sound he wants, and to keep it under control throughout the performance.

DRAMA
The singer must be able to create a picture in the audience's mind. He must be able to interpret the composer's work faithfully.

CHAMPION JOCKEY RUINED BY HIS OWN TRIUMPHS

PERCY RUDNICKI rode the last of the "They Have to Fame" on famous jockeys of the English turf.

So backers cheer and bookies groan
As each he goes to meet his doom
On horses themselves
The matter of playing shows.
They need to know them, that is so,
He never won them, but he never
So he never won them, but he never
Of Yorkshire Today

THESE were the last two stanzas of a prize-winning verse competition run by a London newspaper when Tod Sloan, the American jockey, made his short-lived but tremendous impact upon the English racing scene.

Sloan is remembered best as the little man who revolutionised British racing-jockeying by introducing what he himself called the "monkey-on-a-stick" seat. Once jockeys sat straight up in the saddle, but Sloan crunched over the horse's neck.

His success was no sham because he was the champion first jockey who was soon almost—and usually—top-shire.

Sloan said he discovered the secret one by accident. A horse he rode with him and "I rode to hell but I set out of it."

Weddings of the week

A HAPPY study of Mr. A. and Mrs. Richard Buckley driving away from St. Peter's Church, Subukia, after their wedding.

The bridegroom is the only son of Comdr. and Mrs. C. Buckley, of Mombasa, and his bride, the former Miss Anne Marie Boules, is the second daughter of Dr. Roger Boules, of Subukia, and of Mrs. P. E. Boules, of Bourremouth.

The bride's father, a young man of French breeding, met in a pale caftan shade, was met with a train, and her exit was held in place by a cluster of pearls. (Photo: Kayser, Nakuru).

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Reavis, from St. Andrew's Church, Nairobi, after their wedding.

The bridegroom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reavis, of Nairobi, and his bride, the former Miss Mary Mackie, elder daughter of Mrs. Helen Mackie and the late Mr. Robert Mackie, of Falmouth, Dorsetshire, was a sister of the New European Herald. (Photo: Gianni LaMagna).

The Church of St. Francis Xavier, Parklands, was the scene of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Lobo (below).

Mr. Lobo is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Francisco Lobo of Funchal, Goa, and his bride, the former Miss Agnes de Jesus, is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. de Jesus of Sanguem, Goa. (Photo: P. Place Studio).

THIS Holy Ghost Cathedral, Mombasa, was the scene of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremy Arthur Taylor, (right).

The bride, the former Miss Karen Ann Walters, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Walters, who first came to Mombasa in 1821. She chose a classic gown of white embroidered satin, cut with a train, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, carnations and cornflowers.

Mr. Taylor, who is employed at Mombasa, comes from Chiddingfold, Surrey.

Zephyr or Zodiac?

Mr. World wants to know, and in case you are also asking this question, this is the plain fact of the matter. The Ford works at Dagenham are turning out no less than 2,000 units every day. However, such is the unprecedented world-wide demand for Ford vehicles, that even production on this scale is proving insufficient to meet the ever increasing orders. Every effort is being made to minimise delay in delivery so order your Consul, Zephyr or Zodiac - now. When the model of your choice is available, you will see just why those much sought-after cars create their demand... prove themselves such a delight to own.
