CAN DO FOR YOU...

PROTECT your food! In this country food cannot be safe for long at the normal temperature of the climate. It can become dangerous before you can get to a FRIGIDAIRE in protected food.

SAVE YOUR MONEY. It prevents losses due to spoilage and enables you to buy and store larger quantities of perishable foods. A week's supply of perishable foods at a time can be bought and kept fresh in a FRIGIDAIRE.

HELP VARY YOUR MENU! More varied menus and diets are easily rendered, and problems of entertaining visitors are simplified. Even flowers keep fresh and can be revived in a Frigidaire.

Remember that FRIGIDAIRE is a pioneer of modern refrigeration principles, with unique engineering craftsmanship as perfect a product as can be manufactured today.

PLAN FOR CLOSER UNION OPPOSED

Central Assembly debate INDIAN TELLS OF 'FEARS' OF SOUTH AFRICAN RACIAL POLICY

As already been exposed, there was strong opposition to the Assembly's motion, moved by Mr. (Tony) M. J. Maseko, to request the Commission to approach the Central African Council for the purpose of recommending to the Central African Council and the Assembly.

Mr. J. C. Maseko (Uganda) said that he had thought it would be better to all the inhabitants of East Africa if there could be an exchange of views with the Commission on matters of a more technical nature, such as railways, roads and tele-communications, civil aviation, and so on. He said that it was not desirable to discuss the motion in order to make it quite clear that the Commission should be confined strictly to technical and administrative matters in the study of the East African High Commission.

Mr. J. P. Fraser (Uganda) said he felt a certain amount of suspicion and doubt because of the speech of the mover. He felt that the Commission should be asked to study the subjects of defence and communication.

UGANDA ASKED TO SUBSIDISE LOCAL TRAINS

BELIEVED the Railway Administration of other countries, it is an obligation not to provide service at less than cost and because in a memorandum submitted to the Transport Advisory Council it was shown that the substantial services rendered in Uganda could not be self-supporting, it was considered by members of the T.A.C. that the Government of Uganda should be asked to say whether it would be willing to share in the cost of the service to the extent that these were not covered by revenue.
The Commission for Transport, which is the body responsible for the operation of the East African Central Railway, advised the Government of Uganda that it was willing to continue to run the service at a loss of £100,000 per annum. It was stated that the Government of Uganda should be asked to say whether it would be willing to share in the cost of the service to the extent that these were not covered by revenue.

Considered in 1947
Assessing further options, the Railway Administration in 1947 considered the possibility of providing a service at a loss of £100,000 per annum. It was stated that the Government of Uganda should be asked to say whether it would be willing to share in the cost of the service to the extent that these were not covered by revenue.

The reasons
The reasons for the loss are stated to be the high cost of maintenance of the railway and the high cost of the service. It was stated that the Government of Uganda should be asked to say whether it would be willing to share in the cost of the service to the extent that these were not covered by revenue.

Population
The Commission said that it did not believe that the population of Uganda was sufficient to justify the cost of the railway. It was stated that the Government of Uganda should be asked to say whether it would be willing to share in the cost of the service to the extent that these were not covered by revenue.

Fashion discounts previous rule, allies black with brown

Esco Sanders, in her London letter this week, discusses fashions and hair styles.

WOMEN'S fashions have settled into well-defined lines and will give them a temporary stamp of its own identity in the history of the world's changes of straight, uncut, wavy lines, free of practical concern as to the needs of modern women today have a clear idea of what they desire. They will follow whatever the fashion gods may say.

Paris, naturally, is the center. Here women were tired of the dark and severe lines of the late autumn and feminine again. But they had to keep their hair as they tried to get them into the winter and winter dresses and coats.

They are in a process of trial and error. They look through the window of a shop, and they see a hat that is not a hat. It is a hat, but it is not a hat. In England women were tired of their hair, and they tried to get it into the winter and winter dresses and coats.

HOLIDAY IN THE SNOW

Winter sports may seem a far cry from sun-drenched Kenya, but the right clothes for winter sports are now following the progressive fashions very closely. Here are some suggestions, although carried out in wool, strike a cool up-to-the-minute note.

A star's taste
Valerie Hobson who has the reputation of being one of our best dressed women, gave definite advice. She believes in the elegance of a simple dress. Her favorite evening dress has a draped, open-ended bodice. For evening wear, she much prefers midnight blue. In fact, she thinks red seems to her rather colorful. Her clothes are always plain and unadorned and she does not wear jewelry.

Some fashionable hair styles are already taking the return of the bob as if they too were not likely to prove popular.

ONLY CHAMPIONS CAN CHANGE TENNIS FASHION

By Brig. J. G. Smyth, V.C.

There is, I think, no major sports in the world in which the players come under closer scrutiny of the spectators than tennis. Not until the early 1920s did any sports attract so large a public as tennis. Then, when American tennis players began to dominate the scene, it was not long before tennis was being played in every large town. Every class expression and every level of society can be noted and noticed. Expressions have not changed greatly, though the terms, though they have not been without their changes, have not changed. The main porters of Helen Wills, who played for Great Britain, were, for example, Perry, Hodge and Miss, all struck religiously to tennis. The fashion of tennis for men aged about thirty.

Even after this war the first Wimbledon championship has been played in the same way as it was in 1877. The dress and dress, in its turn, has not changed.

His traditions have in fact become so much a part of the stock-in-trade of novelists that they are almost unrecognizable... A Tom Grantley says, "British novels are becoming more like horse races..."

At the same time new poets are giving way to the new critic... In other words Miss Gervilly was once a beautiful young lady who was once a beautiful young lady...

MEMOIRS OF A ROYAL GOVERNESS

"STANDARD" COMMENTARY... KENNEDY is interested in being taken to the "Standard" by the "Standard" which has been published from the memoirs of Miss Marjorie Crawford who was governess to the late Princess of Wales...

WHILE Margaret took a very early interest in children—she who her sister, in youth at any rate, was called "the governess"—she had a streak of the timidity in her that was not shared by her sister... The late Mrs. Crawford used to "hasten" to the "Standard" as the "Standard" was always covered by her...

IN her official position the governess has always tried to stimulate her pupils to their best... One of our readers writes to us: "I am a daughter of the man who has been mentioned in one of the King's letters..."

An outstanding example of twentieth century Gothic architecture, responsible to Hinton Colquhoun, the church of St. Nicholas is the most notable of the 260 churches which lie within the boundaries of the whole city of Nicosia. Now used as a museum for the Mohammedan population, the building is an addition to the richness and prosperity of Cyprus during the rule of the Lusignans. It is a magnificent specimen by the Venetians and the Ottomans helped reduce the fortress of the island to a low wall, but from the end of the nineteenth century Cyprus began to recover some of her ancient importance as a centre of Mediterranean commerce. Today the port of Famagusta has much of the island's trade, though citrus, wine and citrus have replaced the previous staples and silks of former centuries. Full and up-to-date information from our brochures in Cyprus on industrial conditions and commercial trends in the island is readily obtainable on request.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S OLD HAUNT IS NOW AN R.A.F. STAGING POST

MANY and widely scattered are the wrecks of the R.A.F. overseas, and scattered is the isolation of not a few of them. Some of the most desolate tracts on the earth's surface, across nevertheless of the greatest strategic significance, come under the aegis of that service.

The Middle East Air Force has perhaps the best share, these barren lands, and in the whole of their sprawling domain, from Tripoli to Karachi, Aden to Karachi, no station is more remote, none has a more desolate and more remote home than Masirah Island, in the Arabian Sea, off the coast of Southern Arabia. It is a tiny, flat, sandy tract of the Far East. There are some five houses in the command, virtually nameless outside.

Rising two hours' flying time from Aden, the R.A.F. station is further east. And the last of the islands ever has landed stores and instruments—wires miles from the legendary Captain Kidd. It is not unlike a Christmas-cake, with a slim water table extending to the coast from roughly parallel with the shoreline, it rises across the island to a height of 700 feet crown to crown, with a peak of 1,000 feet in a broad sandy coastal belt, with scattered rock and clusters of coral coral.

Strange volcano
Sharks infest the sea within three miles of the island. The island's tremendous coral reef is a natural barrier to the sea in the past. Volcanic islands are not unlike a Christmas-cake, with a slim water table extending to the coast from roughly parallel with the shoreline, it rises across the island to a height of 700 feet crown to crown, with a peak of 1,000 feet in a broad sandy coastal belt, with scattered rock and clusters of coral coral.

The existence of the small R.A.F. command, which occupies the island's north-western portion, is conditioned by the provisions of an agreement with the Sultan of Oman, who has a small settlement in the south-east corner of Jim Sauid's kingdom.

With a complement of 17 personnel, the R.A.F. detachment is currently commanded by Lieutenant P. H. Drabble, of the R.A.F. detachment on foreign soil, and is responsible for the general servicing facilities for the aircraft which are based at the station. The islanders who come of mixed Indian, Arab and African stock, and whose number fall substantially short of a thousand, are demonstratively friendly to their white neighbours. Their staple diet consists of fish, which is local, and vegetables.

Alcof women
The villages are primitive, their mode of life simple. The inhabitants are of the Arabian race, and are descended from the abundant camel herds of the island, which are being gradually exterminated by the British. The women are strictly decent in their dress, although sometimes, as when the wife of the previous command commander visited the island, curiosity overcomes their reserve.

The island's water supply is obtained from the sea, and is pumped to the island by a small pump. The water is then filtered through a sand filter, and is then pumped to the island. The water is then filtered through a sand filter, and is then pumped to the island.

The maintenance of the island is done by a squadron of Aden Provosts. The island is a very remote and isolated station, and is a very remote and isolated station, and is a very remote and isolated station.

MASIRAH ISLAND is in the midst of shark-infested seas is one of a chain of three lonely islets, the only links in the R.A.F.'s drama routes to E. Africa and the Far East. Here an R.A.F. officer of life on the island, gives a picture.

An R.A.F. Regiment officer, Pilot-Commander, is in the middle of a flight over the island. The island is a very remote and isolated station, and is a very remote and isolated station, and is a very remote and isolated station.

The Aden Levies spend themselves away on duty by swimming. Here are two in a scene from their leisurely pastime.

A strange range for a addition to the 'Fas'-water, however, the most of the general purpose water comes from the sea by sea-lifting, into wells at a height of 700 feet crown to crown.

Water from sea
Masirah's service population depends on it from sea or on its own supplies. The island's water supply is obtained from the sea, and is pumped to the island by a small pump.

London Parks show signs of spring

ELSA M. SANDERS writes from London on what women police, outsize clothes and unexaggerated styles.

THE WINTERFUL, mild weather continues so that it seems as if winter has missed its spring. It is already in its fourth week and the sun has been shining for the last three weeks. The parks are green and the birds are singing. The women who are seen in the parks are dressed in a way that suggests that the winter is over. They are wearing long, flowing dresses, and their hair is styled in a way that is simple and elegant. The overall impression is one of a new beginning, a fresh start.

It is a great deal of thought and care that has gone into the design of these dresses. The fabric is chosen for its texture and color, and the cut is designed to flatter the figure. The result is a collection of dresses that are both stylish and practical. They are perfect for the weather, and they are a reflection of the fashion designer's vision.

Women police

With her hair pulled about our ankles, I saw a woman who was dressed in a way that was both practical and stylish. She was wearing a long, flowing dress that was perfect for the weather. The overall impression was one of a woman who was confident and elegant. She was a sight to behold, and it was clear that she was a woman who knew how to dress for the occasion.

Conservative

Wholesale goods manufacturers have their own slant on fashion. They are designing dresses that are both practical and stylish. The result is a collection of dresses that are perfect for the weather, and they are a reflection of the manufacturer's vision.

Merrell Dalton recalls

EARLY DAYS AMONG THE KENYA GOLDFIELDS

Among the ridges and gullies of Lorigor in the deserted shafts of Kenya's first gold-miner. Illustrating her story with his own pictures Merrell Dalton tells of her own experiences there in 1933.

Small districts of Kibera in the corner of Kenya first opened into the world in 1923 when our parents returned from California. For several years these were the only gold fields in Kenya, but in 1926 the new discoveries were made in the hills of Merrell Dalton. The gold was found in the hills of Merrell Dalton, and the small districts of Kibera and Merrell Dalton were the only gold fields in Kenya.

sort of temporary camp for our parents. The hills were put up on the hillside and a fairly good system of paths was laid out for bathing and dressing. The great thing was that the hills were so close to the sea that the gold was found in the hills of Merrell Dalton, and the small districts of Kibera and Merrell Dalton were the only gold fields in Kenya.

The whole of Lorigor was one of the most beautiful and fertile of any country in the world. The hills were so close to the sea that the gold was found in the hills of Merrell Dalton, and the small districts of Kibera and Merrell Dalton were the only gold fields in Kenya.

Loring was very and comparatively open. For most there was a very fine supply of game, and an evening walk with the hills was a very pleasant one. We were often out for three or four miles a night, and the hills were so close to the sea that the gold was found in the hills of Merrell Dalton, and the small districts of Kibera and Merrell Dalton were the only gold fields in Kenya.

They will eat 10,000 oysters

NEXT October, if plans materialize, 100 people will assemble in Colchester's dignified Town Hall and between them eat as many as 10,000 oysters. They will be invited to the annual custom since 1833 and various "casualty" mourned by gourmet circles. The feast, which is given by the Colchester Oyster Society, will be a grand affair attended by members of the society and the opening day of the St. Dunon's Oyster Festival in the country. The present King was chief guest in 1933 when he was Duke of York. The late Duke of Kent, killed in an air crash during the war, was guest of honour in 1938, while the Duke of Devon and Cornwall was present in 1951.
