

WEEK-END BEGGARS SENT A GROWING PROBLEM

By Nathan Aspinwall

In all the main towns and cities, the growing numbers of beggars who crawl and drag themselves along the streets, daily damaged in some extent by the weather, are a growing problem. It is by no means surprising that the Government should be asked to make a special study of the problem.

In great numbers, the professional beggars who are seen in the streets of London, Birmingham, Manchester and other large towns, are a growing problem. It is by no means surprising that the Government should be asked to make a special study of the problem.

Paris and London designers show their new-season evening gowns

Following the late style but still with a touch of the 1930s, the new-season evening gowns are to be made of silk, satin, tulle and lace. The designers in London and Paris show that they are still in a state of soft voluptuousness, transparent, shimmering and soft.

Paris went in for much of the clinging gowns, which were full, full—shades of Josephine and Mrs. Harcourt—and the new London designers showed that they are still in a state of soft voluptuousness, transparent, shimmering and soft.

Josephat finds help

JOSEPHAT is 14 years old and, because he is a child, his life is untroubled and carefree. He has only one worry about his health and that is to get into the Nairobi street.

However, Josephat does not seem to be a healthy child. He has a cough and a fever and he is very thin. His mother, Mrs. Josephat, is very worried about his health and she has taken him to the Nairobi street.

He went to the City Hospital and was treated for a long time. But he did not get better. He was then taken to the Nairobi street and he was treated for a long time. But he did not get better.

first patients were mainly Adams, now there are also many Africans. One morning recently there were upwards of 100 lying to be helped.

So far everything had been achieved by voluntary work and girls, but the work has been done by the Nairobi street and the Nairobi street.

This, of course, will mean money, and they have drawn up a central list of what is needed and what is available. It is the Physical Disabilities in Kenya Association for the Nairobi street and the Nairobi street.

Apparel for girls' centre in Nairobi

A COMMITTEE starting with only £16, it has not least the task of raising £5,000 to start a girls' centre in Nairobi.

An appeal for subscriptions was opened yesterday by Lady Griffith-Jones, the wife of the Deputy Governor of Kenya. In a letter to the Editor of the East African Standard she wrote: "There has been a good deal of interest among ladies in Nairobi in the work of the girls' centre, and similar lines to that of the Starbuck Boys' Centre and run under the same direction."

The girls' centre committee has been formed in order to raise the money for the centre. The committee is headed by Lady Griffith-Jones and includes Mrs. J. R. Gregory, Mrs. F. E. Wilson, wife of the Nairobi club president, and past district governor, Sir Charles Mortimore.

The girls' centre is to be situated in the area of the Nairobi Club. It will be a large building with a playground and a swimming pool. The centre will provide a place where girls can receive education and training in various subjects. It will also provide a place where girls can receive medical attention and dental treatment.

The committee is currently raising money for the centre. It has received a grant of £100 from the Nairobi Club. It is also receiving donations from individuals and organizations. The committee is hoping to raise a total of £5,000 for the centre.

PRICES OF FRUIT HARDEN

Prices of fruit in Nairobi markets have hardened, while stability prevails in the vegetable prices.

Large quantities of fruit are being imported from the coast. This has led to a hardening of prices. However, vegetable prices remain stable as there is a local supply.

The market is expected to remain stable for some time. However, if there is a further increase in the price of fruit, prices may rise again.

The Nairobi Club is also providing a grant for the girls' centre. This grant will be used to purchase equipment and materials for the centre.

The committee is also receiving donations from the public. These donations will be used to purchase equipment and materials for the centre.

THE SONG OF THE TORBATE

ONCE upon a time in a faraway land, there lived a young man named Jarvis. He was a very handsome young man, and he was very kind and generous. He had a great many friends, and he was very popular. One day, he was walking through a forest, and he saw a beautiful girl. She was very young, and she was very beautiful. She had long, dark hair, and she was wearing a simple, white dress. Jarvis was very attracted to her, and he decided to follow her. He followed her for a long time, and he saw that she was carrying a bundle on her back. He decided to help her, and he carried the bundle for her. She thanked him, and she said that she was going to a village. Jarvis decided to go with her, and he followed her to the village. The village was very beautiful, and the people were very kind. Jarvis stayed in the village for a few days, and he became very popular. He was very kind and generous, and he had a great many friends. Ken's young men are not particularly clothes-conscious

By JANE GRONAUER

GRIMES became clothes-conscious at a very early age and by the time they are in their teens, they are telling their mothers how to dress.

Boys on the other hand, take a long time to get out of the nest of clothing being wadded, braided, braided for special occasions, and then when it is time to go on having a wardrobe, with just the old-fashioned remark if her taste in underclothes and pyjamas does not conform to the school's uniform.

But that boys get much more concerned to take an interest in clothes. They fathers often leave mother to show for them, and boys and casually when business is slack one day. It is boys and casually that they have a certain amount of money, and giving him guidance and advice as to how to spend it.

Young Ideas

Parents' scorn

And when the son does not do the same, the parents' scorn is not only for the boy's lack of interest in clothes, but for his failure to do the same. The parents' scorn is not only for the boy's lack of interest in clothes, but for his failure to do the same. KENYA'S General Election will be divided into three phases, with polling for the Regional Assemblies on May 18 and 19, for Senate on May 22 and 23, and for the House of Representatives on May 25 and 26.

No ballot boxes for any of the three types of election will be opened before the morning of May 27, when counting will begin.

Announcing this yesterday, a Kenya Government statement said an exception to this would be made in some national areas because of the long distances which would have to be travelled by voters in these districts. It had been decided to allow voters in these three types of election to vote on one visit to their polling station.

Dates will vary

The districts concerned are Kajiado, Mombasa, Lamu, Siyu-Marakwet, Barotet, West Pokot, Tana River, Samburu, Purikuma, Marsabit, Ilmor, Mandera, Wajir and Garissa.

In these areas district commissioners, in their capacity as returning officers, will be responsible for publishing the arrangements. Polling dates in the national districts will vary considerably but will be within the overall period of May 18 to 26.

In Nairobi there will be no election for a National Assembly, but elections for the same will take place on the same dates as elsewhere in Kenya.

The Kenya Government has also announced an explanation from the Uganda Government as to why it will continue to support the intention to declare Uganda a distressed area.

The Kenya Government has also said why it is going through the most tedious process of a referendum on the declaration which is being made with regard to the East African Community.

"It might be interesting to know why the Government is so keen to go through the referendum process, but a statement from the Government would be necessary to answer this question."

WEEK-END STAFF THE SPEARMAKERS OF THE CHERANGANIS

By Ian Matheson

They read north from Siberia almost directly over the equator
and lead into an enormous rubber-wood rain forest into the mountainous woods of the Northern Frontier District.

And as your car grinds its way towards the hills after tormentous miles, you may hear the heavy clang of iron on metal echoing through the heights of the towering Cheranganis Mountains. It will be your car making this noise. It is the sound made by the Spear-makers of Taita entering their aged craft in sweat-soaked "shava".

From this ancient young race you too, have your own spear, though you may never use it as the Spear-makers
do. It is as important to all Spear-makers as a lightning bolt.

They are a small crowd, these Spear-makers. They are the Kikuyu, Kamba, Luhya, and Luo. They are the great tribes of Northern Frontier District.

DIVING CLEAN

They are a hardy, rugged crowd — often battle-worn, always hungry. They may have walked across the plains
for 50 miles or more to reach the spear-makers, but they just sit around the small wood-and-stone built huts waiting their turn.

For the craft of the spear-maker is a spiritual one and cannot be hurried or sped in a hasty process that requires time, energy and ingenuity.

Here, there are no blades,
no saws, no mechanical tools. The only machinery
they use is the hand — lightning quickly of hand and the swift reflexes and supple fingers.

These "Blacksmiths", reared and nurtured by their father-tribesmen, are pioneers of the craft known as the Wainu wainu. They have perfected their craft, handing over the technical knowledge from generation to generation.

They have no trade-union organisations, but for their beliefs are lines similar to the old "Gilds" of medieval times. The Spear-maker man employs his own craftsmen, to whom he imparts the craft of the spear-maker. For centuries he has been his master. He will show the craft, but he will not teach.

He is taught to respect the Spear-maker, to respect the Spear-maker's craft. He is taught to respect the Spear-maker's craft. He is taught to respect the Spear-maker's craft.

He will be shown how to select a piece of iron, how to select the material for the shaft.
This was done by the Spear-maker
and the Spear-maker's craft.

He will be shown how to select a piece of iron, how to select the material for the shaft.
This was done by the Spear-maker
and the Spear-maker's craft.

They, when he finds he has a piece of iron, he will put it in the fire. He will wait until it is red-hot, and then he will work it with his hands. He will work it with his hands. He will work it with his hands.

If and when he passes this test he will be given a piece of iron. He will be given a piece of iron. He will be given
a piece of iron. He will be given
a piece of iron. He will be given a piece of iron.

SCRAP IRON

The next stage in the construction of his spear is the hard work of construction. It is a hard work. It is a hard work. It is a hard work. It is a hard work.

Wooden shafts, if the Spear-maker is to be satisfied, must be made of a particular kind of wood. It is a hard work. It is a hard work. It is a hard work. It is a hard work.

Several steps up the spear-

BEAUTY IN SCOTTISH GLASS

LESS than two years ago a new factory to make mouth-blown glassware was set up in the small town of Wick, Scotland. Today some of its designs are already collecting prizes and the firm - Callaghan Glass - is well known for its beautifully styled and well finished flasks.

The firm trains its own apprentices and the 16 hat they now employ include at least one who is regarded as "outstanding" Callaghan glass of various sizes and shapes, and its colors range from the palest to the darkest. The Scottish landscape and described by such names as red, rose and ochre. In some flasks there are reflections of scenes from the shales here and there.

One often has a further similarity in one of these shallow vases he asked that the vase should be cut off at that inverted, it could be used as an ashtray or a vase.

Among many other pieces of Callaghan glassware are some weights showing unconventional forms of fish or flowers.

Learning about make-up

BY Jane Graham

FEW teenagers are prepared to take advice on make-up from their mothers once they have made their first tentative experiments with powder and lipstick. However, girls and women of all ages are always eager to listen to an expert's advice on skin care and pick up make-up tips from her.

So it is not only teenagers who will be welcome at Mrs. Helena Andrews' new little salon in Nairobi, though she is busy during the day for her father's business they will be invited to her salon among her first pupils.

Mrs. Andrews has fitted up her salon as a dainty and convenient classroom with a long plastic-topped table the length of one wall equipped with a chair. Each has a comfortable stool, a round, adjustable lamp, the most convenient position for the face, and a make-up case and a little tray with brushes and glass for samples of cosmetic and a little make-up kit.

Three lessons

There is a more orthodox salon chair for the demurest model, so far private lessons and "tertiary".

Mrs. Andrews plans a series of three classes at a cost of 10/- on skin care and make-up. With individual advice shown in each class will last up to two hours and the course will be completed in three weeks.

Individual lessons, intended for women who wish to try out a new make-up or get their "make-up" fixed, cost 7/6 a time.

Mrs. Andrews is the Nairobi beauty consultant and her treatments and advice are the result of her experience in Bond Street salon.

She has the best set of preparations, but she was able to show the most useful and tried a brown-rose and two pale, pretty creamy ones.

Mrs. Andrews thinks that some frank comments made by her own teenage daughter about one of the lipsticks was a tribute last year nearly made and something to do with the wisdom of the firm's taste.

White foundation

Incidentally she also showed up an article in the British Medical Journal on the use of the cosmetic Kreamax, described on this page some time ago.

She has another famous cosmetic house whose name of a revolutionary idea in medicine. After years of being told to choose a fitted foundation match or improve your complexion, looking a week's wonder, she has now discovered Elizabeth Arden's new formula for white foundation very dark powder, but it was not so used to try it.

BY Mrs. DAVIS FORTY-FIVE
Pati-Chrome is a new formula for white foundation, which is made by dissolving into the skin having a very fine texture. Over this, the dark powder forms a warm veil of color.
