YOUTH MURDERED IN CITY CHASE

Thief shoots driver of car in his way

Last night, shooting Mr. Moiner's car crashed near Rovers Hotel in Masindi, Vihiga Street.

Every available policeman was turned out to search Nairobi last night for a gunman who killed a driver and shot a prisoner while making his escape from the scene of a panga gang raid on a city bookmaker's shop.

After the two shootings, in the centre of the city the killer held up another driver at pistol point and forced him to drive him away.

When the driver deliberately crashed the car near the New Stables Hotel, the gunman leapt out and ran away. Within minutes the police had set up roadblocks along the city.

The dead man, Mr. Christopher Moiner, 24, was driving with his father, Mr. Heather Wallace, 49, past the United Lining Company entrance in Masindi, Mombasa Street when the gunman hacked into his chest.

The fugitive fired six shots at the man, three hitting Mr. Moiner in the chest, two in the arm and one in the head. Mr. Moiner's car was heading for the Central Post office.

Mr. Wallace, who had been driving the car, was also hit in the chest and arm. He was driving towards the Rovers Hotel when the gunman fired at him. Mr. Wallace was injured but escaped.

Police were tonight combing the area for the gunman as part of a nationwide search for the killer. The Rovers Hotel was set up all over the city. A search for the gunman was also carried out in the search for the car.

A woman police officer said that the car was a light-colored Volkswagen. She said that she was driving it when the gunman shot at her. She was driving from the city towards the Rovers Hotel.

The police are also trying to trace the car. The car was last seen in the city on the night of the shooting. The car was a light-colored Volkswagen. The car was last seen in the city on the night of the shooting.

TV at the Coast 'by July'

With the recent clamour about the retention of the temporary Mauritius television transmitter at the Coast, it is high time to speak to the Chief Engineer, V.O.K. Mr. Ronald J. Davely, V.O.K. L.R.D.U.C.K.

Q: Can you please tell us how long it will take to move the transmitter from the Coast to the Mauritius?

A: As far as retaining the transmitter it concerns us because we are not a radio engineering profession. The problem would be engineering. If the vehicle later moved it would mean that the transmitter would have to be transferred. It would be a matter of a few days if it would be moved to a building and still need to be moved to its old site. It is going for some time.

Q: I know that those people who say "I've had television for a long time" but I don't know what they mean. It is not a television set, it is a television service. It is not a television set, it is a television service. It is not a television set, it is a television service. It is not a television set, it is a television service. It is not a television set, it is a television service.

Q: What kind of equipment is there at Mombasa?

Mombasa, 14 miles up the road towards Nairobi, and will cover the whole of the area which is the moment law power.

The thing we are not sure of is how things will be at Malindi. There is a chance of things not being as good as Malindi. To offset and overcome this we can put in extra towers in it and the service area of the main transmitter is not capable of covering that part.

Q: I take it that these televisions that are at the Coast are not the same as the ones that are at Malindi. Is that right?

A: No, they are not. This is a bit of a problem. The thing we are not sure of is how things will be at Malindi. There is a chance of things not being as good as Malindi. To offset and overcome this we can put in extra towers in it and the service area of the main transmitter is not capable of covering that part.

What the viewer thinks

This week I went out into the streets of Nairobi and asked people what they thought about television.

I asked three boys, two girls and one woman what they thought about television. They all said they liked it very much. They said they liked to see the news, to see the sports, and to see the entertainment programmes.

One European woman who did not know what television was, I explained to her that it was a way of seeing pictures and hearing sounds from a distance. She said she had heard of it before but she had never seen it.

When I asked her if she would like to see it, she said she would. I told her that she could see it at the television station in Nairobi. She said she would like to go there.

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT

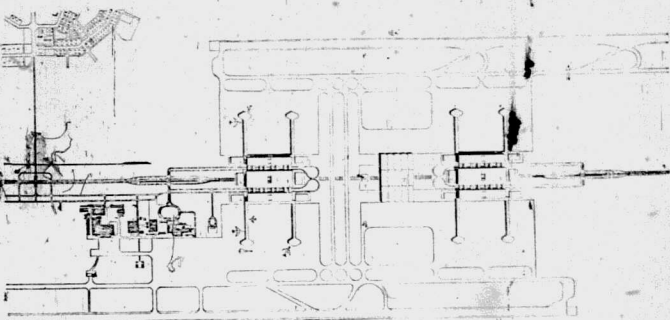

For once, the old adage can be taken literally. Aviation, the most sophisticated and fast-growing industry of all, is entering upon an era which will take the next ten years on its biggest leap forward since the invention of the airplane. East Africa will not be left out of this exciting adventure. In the following eight pages will show.

A decade of miracles

Airports of the future

The great nations of the world are racing to build the most advanced airports of the future. The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France are all vying to build airports of the future. The United States is leading the way with its new airports of the future. The Soviet Union is also building airports of the future. Britain and France are also building airports of the future. The United States is leading the way with its new airports of the future. The Soviet Union is also building airports of the future. Britain and France are also building airports of the future.

France's new airports at Narbonne (right) and in Germany (below) show the streamlining bill show for one-landers. Both diagrams are described fully in the text below.

Preparing for giant demands

Throughout the world and in East Africa, Governments and airport authorities are looking to the 1970s with some trepidation. They visualize fleets of giant jets disgorging thousands of passenger-carrying, Customs-worshiping travellers all eager to pass through their terminals the same day they arrive.

In East Africa, Governments and airport authorities are looking to the 1970s with some trepidation. They visualize fleets of giant jets disgorging thousands of passenger-carrying, Customs-worshiping travellers all eager to pass through their terminals the same day they arrive.

The number of men and twice the size to cope with the plan for Nairobi Airport proved how the impact method of growth in the main terminal is put forward. The whole plan covers a ten-year period.

At the bottom of the plan is the existing runway with the present buildings in the dark leading to a new access road carriage-way would run along the airport and under the new runway period.

As can be seen the aircraft would line up at the fingers from which control of the airway would extend to the airport.

The proposed second parallel runway would extend from Embakasi village on the left to a little more than the length of the present main runway, about 11,000 feet. The terminal and finger on the right are in the later phase with the first jet to the right of the existing complex.

The plan would appear to be adequate for the expected increase in traffic to East Africa. It is in respect the plan for the East Africa area of 1967, the construction of the terminal proposition.

As aircraft have increased in size and speed so have the majority of major airports been static in improving passenger and throughput facilities. Now, faced with the prospect of additional aircraft on the ground, many airports are being approached to meet the challenge of the jumbo and super jumbo jets.

REVIEW OF THE AIRLINES

EAST AFRICAN AIRWAYS

The three cornerstones

An international concerted expansion of operations based on contractual practices was one of the main aims of the General of East African Airways, Mr. Lutata, when he spoke to them this week.

It is the intention of the firm to expand its fleet of planes with other major airlines who are going to achieve this by the promotion of continued growth and efficiency.

The following is a summary of the information about airlines which fly or operate in East Africa and throughout the world.

It has been a disappointment to many people that more airlines have not become pilots and that some who have have not made their initial promise. We would like to see many citizens who are competent on our pilot strength. Nobody could be satisfied with the present number of pilots in circumstances, as we go on to allow the standards of operations and safety of our and passengers to be lowered in order to accommodate Africanisation. We will endeavour to find and train and assist citizens who wish to become pilots and who are prepared to live on the highest standard expected. Our profession is not a luxury.

It is hoped to bring into the network some of the areas of Northern Kenya and Tanzania but this depends on the results of the next few years. On the contractual use of pilots in East Africa a matter which I fear will be resolved in the next few years. It is my hope that the next few years will be a period of growth and development for the airline industry in East Africa.

been set recently in the three East African States. It is my hope that the next few years will be a period of growth and development for the airline industry in East Africa.

It is my hope that the next few years will be a period of growth and development for the airline industry in East Africa.

because of cross-subsidisation with routes from the international operations. If we are to operate successfully with the Community practices, as indeed we are required to do by the Treaty for the East African Community, it is the rates and rates in the final new people.

It was the profits which provided the reserves which at some stage in the life of any business will be used as a financial cushion. It was likely that East African Airways would face such a time early in the 1970s.

Good profits have been made in the talks to enable East African Airways to charter market to transport Mr. Lutata's return to the African continent.

It is my hope that the next few years will be a period of growth and development for the airline industry in East Africa.

BOAC

Profits and the passenger

Some airlines are reluctant to publish their profits because they are afraid that the public will be misled by the figures. This is a short-sighted approach, for the public has a right to know about the true state of affairs in the airline industry.

An airline, like any other company, must be profitable to provide a service and to make a profit. It is not a charity and it should not be treated as one.

It is my hope that the next few years will be a period of growth and development for the airline industry in East Africa.

Be chary of other airline chairs.

The seat you're expected to sit on for several hours without a stretch is rarely brought to your notice. The reason's simple: most airline chairs are virtually identical, so there's nothing to say about them. Except for ours. BOAC are in the fortunate position of offering the best economy seat in the world. On a long trip, you'll be glad you knew about it. We took the international rules on airline seat design and interpreted them with imagination. For our troubles, we got the first economy seat that doesn't feel 2nd class. Now it's standard on all our planes. Most of our passengers have noticed it. And feel chary about anything else as a result. We think you will. See your BOAC travel agent.

NEW COMPANY FORMED

A new company is being formed by Kenya West Africa, the major aeromedical flying firm in East Africa, and Kenya Air Charters, the major firm in the charter business at Wilson Airport, which will take over the existing Airway hangar and workshops.

The company, for which a name has yet to be decided, will have three directors: Mr. Alec Kinn, managing director of Airway; Mr. John Fallovo, former chief engineer with the service from his amazing business has done more. It has given every passenger, with the men anyway, three mainstay moments.

— MALCOLM PAYNE

About 110,000 is involved in the arrangement, which will provide maintenance for both firms aircraft. The existing Airway staff have been asked to stay with the new company.

The firm will provide maintenance for all types of aircraft but will deal mainly with jetliners.

Kenya Air Charters will probably get off the ground next week, operating a Boeing 707. A Cessna 441 and another light aircraft will also be in the fleet. Staff will be recruited from the existing Airway staff.

Part of the arrangement between the two firms will involve the purchase of a financial interest in the charter company to be used for passengers.

The world of publicity and public relations is a world of constant change and constant challenge. It is a world where the public is always looking for something new, something different, something that will catch their attention and hold it.

Mwangi. The production is a joint effort of the school and the Kenya National Theatre. It is a significant step towards the development of drama in Kenya.

The problem of excess weight seems to be a worldwide epidemic. Many of us have tried to tackle the problem by exercise, massage, strict diets or treatment with pills. But none of our efforts have had any lasting effect. We have had to start over and over again. The reason is that the problem remains, even if it is not immediately solved. In addition, it can also be a real danger to health. Ask your doctor, he will tell you the amount of weight you should lose is reduced by excess weight. It is equally important to reduce weight. You'll look better.

GOOD BUSINESS AT EXHIBITION

Record business was reported at the International Medical Exhibition in Kampala yesterday and concluded that regional schemes of cooperation, not necessarily limited to the Commonwealth, should be developed to meet the needs of developing countries in skilled manpower. The Sunday conference, attended by Health Ministers from 22 Commonwealth countries, opened in Kampala on September 11. The first Commonwealth Medical Conference was held in Edinburgh in 1957. The conference noted the existing intercontinental cooperation in family planning and the need for increased local training facilities. It also noted the need for regional cooperation in family planning. The conference was held in Kampala from September 11 to 13. The value of money

What matters most to the average citizen is the value of his money. It is not the amount of it that counts, but its purchasing power.

The prospect of a new opportunity—yet not directly mentioned in the paper on the currency situation... The eight signing the letter are people prominent in Kenya's agricultural, industrial and commercial sectors.

Some of them, at least, are arguing against their own when they advance the country's interests... The usual charge of self-interest can be dismissed for it seems they enter their plea for devaluation without any strings attached.

Kenya is virtually self-sufficient in foodstuffs. Certainly, the East African common market can be seen without any substantial recourse to imports... The Governor of the Central Bank of Kenya has said devaluations of sterling and Kenya's assets at £160,000.

Nonetheless, the case made out in the letter merits the closest scrutiny. The arguments are based on two primary considerations: First Kenya depends mainly on agriculture and, second, must look to overseas investment for a substantial portion of development capital.

Admittedly, the East African countries save from the servicing of their same debt... The East African countries save from the servicing of their same debt.

WEST AFRICA

Ghana's new outlook to its neighbours

Ghana and the Ivory Coast under the two together.

Ghana's Head of State, Gen. Acheampong, last week made an official visit to Ivory Coast and concluded agreements on close relations between the two countries.

Dr. C. CAMERON DUODU explains in this article from Accra, the new Ghana, how the two nations have totally different outlook towards their neighbours in West Africa.

In the two and a half years since the country was ruled by the late President Nkrumah, Ghana has totally different outlook towards its neighbours in West Africa.

Before Dr. Nkrumah was overthrown, the country was divided into four provinces with each province having its own leaders.

Now fear has been removed and there is fraternal accord. For one thing, only one country, the Ivory Coast, is not governed by a regime which the military authorities have the upper hand.

It appears, therefore, that regional cooperation between Ghana and her neighbours may soon become a reality.

Ghana has a most productive factory and a tannery. But she produces relatively few livestock, Upper Volta, on the other hand, produces more cattle than she herself.

It would appear that eventually the Ghana dam might become the nucleus around which a whole new distribution network, covering most of West Africa, might develop.

Those of us who know the country are well aware of the fact that the people are not yet united.

The co-operative movement will not be achieved if for some reason or another, the board of directors could not be directed by the time to time by the Ministry of Co-operatives and Social Services.

It is a pity that the Government representatives in this country are not co-operatives.

Let me be frank with you. I am not a member of the co-operative movement, nor am I a member of the family.

EMILIANO JOANES took a trip to swinging Britain and found...

It's a Mad Mod World

EMILIANO JOANES

England swings in the hands of the mod. He peered three years ago at a world that was swinging like a pendulum in 1965. The pendulum has changed to a dizzy, rattling roundabout in a world where anything goes and the crazier the better.

Emiliano Joanes, a staff photographer with the East African Standard, brought back these impressions of the world's coolest capital, caught by his camera on a series of trips in and around London.

His pictures catch the carnival atmosphere of the world of "you've never had it so good." Devaluation, balance of payments problems, the Gnomes of Zurich - today's teenagers, speaking a language only they can understand, just don't want to know.

As never before, the world is the young people's oyster. And they're so busy trying to open it that they just haven't time for anything else.

Happy, shodden Suppy hats. If you've seen the mod, this is the fun zone.

The traffic jams, the buses - he scores, but the loonies concentrate on their cards. Putting his skills on Britain, this American teenager presently holds first.

What big glasses you have, little girl. All the better to hide behind.

Have guitar, will travel, is surely a well-known phrase. But does he really know where he's going?

There is a line from Milton's Paradise Lost which reads: 'With thee conversing I forget all time. What a pity this thought is not engraved in letters of bronze over the control console at Voice of Kenya.'

Those stolen moments

Two weeks ago a programme was switched from the air with about five minutes more to run than scheduled. It was to be replaced by another but was not to start exactly on the hour last Friday the evening session was called off. Fred the Great started his program earlier than scheduled. Who cares if a show starts a little earlier than scheduled? Who cares if a station loses for the day ten or fifteen minutes later than planned?

When the censorship committee fell on V.O.K. back on July 15 they said that one of the reasons for the ban was that it would teach people how to steal.

Naturally I will not detail the method but if any people are who are pre-occupied towards the fact that there is almost a certainty that more than one person has had his car entered this morning as the way shown in the film.

Instead of Raymond High high put a performance for Count Raymond came in for V.O.K. of minutes at the end. Myriad Klemperer, who played Col. Kluge in the movie, was seen this time as a shabby figure in a mystery that had been 20 years.

The film that night was O.S.E. made in 1966 and starring Alan Ladd. Gerald Fitzgerald and John Hoyt. It was an exciting story that more or less took to the trash about the U.S. Office of Strategic Services operations in France during the war.

ROAD SAFETY SUPPLEMENT

State of emergency

The current accident rate on Kenya's roads is so high that I firmly believe that we have reached a state of emergency."

rise. Similarly, as the standard of living of the people improves and the economy expands so will the traffic density increase.

"I know that, some people think we are ignoring the problem too much, but all I can say is that in my view it is quite impossible to exaggerate the gravity of the situation which conditions people are being maintained every day.

"As in other countries, this money must come from Government, although the private sector can help. We know Government has many calls on its funds but one thing is certain - progress in road safety cannot be achieved without a major allocation of funds for such projects as road improvement, sign-posting, education and increased inspection services.

A grim message of death and destruction... Pictures such as these bring home to the public dramatically the horror of death on the road and the realization that what is done to make driving a safer activity.

Police join battle to cut down the grisly toll

Serious though it is, the accident rate in Kenya is neither abnormally high compared to other countries, nor has it shown any more than a very slight increase over the years with the rise in numbers of vehicles which proves that the problem is worldwide.

Police are determined to reduce what is still an alarmingly high rate of deaths and the public too has been checked by recent accidents, which have been unaccounted for their horror anywhere in the world.

ACCIDENTS CAN HAPPEN

The Royal East African Automobile Association was founded by the late L. D. Gilson-Ferre, O.M.E., in 1918. He was the first Honorary Secretary and remained in office until 1937.

During that long period he made many notable pioneering vehicle safety including the first ever from Nairobi to Mombasa in 1926 in a 1923 Riley car and the next year Nairobi to Kisumu in a Salazar in a first prototype was mounted on a Raleigh bicycle, which was an up-to-date model of travel in those days.

From these modest beginnings the R.E.A.A. which became the present day Automobile Association of East Africa has grown to an organization comprising 100,000 members operating nine four-wheeled vehicles and five motor cycles.

It is the A.A. affiliated to the Alliance Internationale de Tourisme (A.I.T.) and the World Touring Organisation (W.T.O.), the former of which entitles the holder of a valid passport to facilities and the latter of which entitles the holder to a number of international driving permits and international certificates for motor vehicles.

The Technical Department does much in the way of technical inspections, legal advice on technical matters and in cases of disputes with garages.

A driving school is provided for members and their families. A "radio rescue" service is available on days marked by A.A. personnel every day from 0700 hours to 2000 hours and thereafter on an emergency telephone number 22444. Members can obtain details through advertisement of how to obtain assistance.

The Association is responsible for motor sport in East Africa. Most of competition fixtures and permits for race and other motor sports meetings and the organization and operation of the East African Safari Rally, one of the foremost international motor rallies in the world.

Keeping the problem before the public

The fifth and last in a series of articles by W.C. de A. N. Francombe, Secretary-General of the Automobile Association of East Africa. Following on the previous four articles are reprinted.

This is my last article in the series about road safety and I intend to confine it to the question of publicity. I feel strongly that it is no longer sufficient for the A.A. and all responsible authorities making every effort to introduce and implement the new legislation we have been advocating, but that the public are aware and understand the new laws.

Similarly the public must be made aware that the final analysis is amount of legislation on the road safety for the country. Only the public, by bringing the road toll to the attention of their children at an early road sense, can bring the road toll to the attention of the public at which we all are concerned.

The role therefore of publicity in the promotion of road safety is paramount. A publicity programme, however, should not be mounted by the A.A. alone. It should be the property not only of Government but also of the private sector, as required.

Many companies are doing excellent work in this field but some seem to be doing it for no other reason than to have a part to play in it as an advertising exercise and person has a role to perform in regard to the road safety.

My main suggestions on the subject of publicity are:

- (a) There should be regular coverage on T.V. and cinema of road safety films.
- (b) Stickers showing accident figures and highlighting prevalent accidents should be put up regularly.
- (c) All city Companies should set up large display "information" boards in the main squares of their towns showing the latest casualty figures.
- (d) A "National Safety Week" should be inaugurated at which the public are alerted. Figures should be shown in the form of leaflets and the "National Safety Week" should be held in the form of a "National Safety Week". Simultaneously teams of lecturers and road safety demonstrators should visit schools to help in the work of education for road safety.

It is also suggested that a "radio school" should be introduced in the form of a "radio school" which would broadcast the latest instructional material.

equipment, for example, dual control.

In the Automobile Association consider that legislation is immediately required to combat omission and weakness in the current traffic laws of Kenya.

1. Mechanical Tests: All vehicles over six years old should be subject to annual mechanical tests. At present there are many mechanical defects on the roads which are completely undetectable. It would be safe to say that an appreciable percentage of these are due to willfully carrying the public for hire and reward.

2. Mobile Vehicle Inspection: A number of mobile vehicle inspection units staffed by trained Police mechanics should be set up throughout Kenya with powers to inspect vehicles for mechanical defects.

All vehicles found without valid "grounded" on the spot Operators would be forced to carry out repairs at a safe point off the road or have their vehicles towed away to garages.

This measure is necessary because the present conditions now experienced by many motorists when their vehicles are impounded for several days instead of being examined on the spot by a qualified mechanic.

3. White Maintenance Records: Road users should be forced to maintain adequate and correct records of their vehicles which would be available for inspection. Many letters have been received from the A.A. which have been forwarded to the Government and subject to the passing of a Bill which will require all drivers to keep their equipment in good order and their equipment in good order.

4. Safety Precautions: Safety helmets should be made compulsory on all cars and vehicles which are not subjected to speed limits. Similarly, safety helmets should be made compulsory for riders of motor cycles and scooters.

A training course for drivers has recently been organized by the Kenya Transport Company in association with the Automobile Association of East Africa.

The course, which lasted a fortnight, was given to 20 drivers of motor vehicles and was held at the Kenya Transport Company's headquarters in Nairobi. The course was held at the Kenya Transport Company's headquarters in Nairobi.

The course was held at the Kenya Transport Company's headquarters in Nairobi. The course was held at the Kenya Transport Company's headquarters in Nairobi.

Among the measures which we in the A.A. would like to see introduced are:

1. Enforcement: The passing of legislation designed to force all operators of buses and lorries to be subject to annual mechanical tests. Additionally, we feel that the operators should be required by law to inspect their cars regularly and to forward them to the Police for road checks.

2. Road Markings: Legislation should be passed to require the Police to inspect the condition of roads and to have them marked with white lines and other markings. The Police should be given more adequate powers to inspect the condition of roads and to have them marked with white lines and other markings.

As the owner of the vehicle it is your duty to ensure that your Bus or Truck is not a potential menace to life - whether it is within your reach or a thousand miles away. If it can speed it is a potential danger.

By P. B. ROBSON, a Member of the Council of the Institute of Advanced Motorists

The Institute of Advanced Motorists was the first to introduce the concept of giving a discount to drivers who are competent and responsible in their profession. This practice has since been adopted by other motor insurance companies and has become a feature of their policies. It is now possible to earn a discount on your motor insurance premium if you are a member of the Institute of Advanced Motorists.

The Institute of Advanced Motorists is a professional body of motorists who are committed to the highest standards of driving and road safety. It is a non-profit-making organization and its members are drawn from all professions and occupations. Beating the 'coat of armour' mentality

In the whole concept of driving, there is one aspect that is often overlooked. It is the 'coat of armour' mentality that has developed in many drivers. This mentality is based on the belief that a car is a piece of armour that can protect the driver from any harm. This is a dangerous and unrealistic view of driving. A car is not a piece of armour and it cannot protect the driver from any harm. The only way to stay safe on the road is to drive responsibly and to be aware of your own limitations.

The 'coat of armour' mentality is a result of the fact that many drivers are not aware of their own limitations. They believe that they are invulnerable and that they can handle any situation that may arise. This is a dangerous and unrealistic view of driving. The only way to stay safe on the road is to drive responsibly and to be aware of your own limitations.

WHAT IS THE DIE-HARD PROCESS

Over a period of years VACU-LUG TRACTION TYRES LTD. have developed an extremely good method of top-capping truck tyres known as the Die-Hard method involving a vulcanising chamber. The great advantage of Die-Hard is that tyres can be retreaded more times than by any retreading method, the tread life exceeds remarkably by a very appreciable margin and any size of tyre from a 700 x 16 to 1600 x 20 can be retreaded by this method.

This method of retreading is ideal for metallic and X-type of tyres, and indeed the Michelin Tyre Company of France recommend "Die-Hard" as the best method of retreading various parts of the world as being the best method of retreading a Michelin X type of tyre.

Technically this is the most satisfactory method of processing a casing and has many virtues by comparison with other methods of retreading.

1. Every size and type of road tyre can be processed.
2. Maximum toughness of tread rubber.
3. Casing distortion is impossible.
4. A variety of tread designs may be offered.

ALL DIE-HARD PROCESSED TRUCK TYRES CARRY A GUARANTEE OF 20,000 MILES.

world from Spain to Sweden, Australia to Tunisia, by the International Federation of Motorists' Association.

The first positive sign in Britain has been to regulate driving instruction.

From June 1970 it will be illegal to anyone but a licensed instructor to give driving lessons for motor cars and those who are granted licences will be equally supervised so they can be to a high standard.

Meanwhile, this doesn't prevent members of the public from teaching their friends how to drive but on the driving schools, it will still be the same, who, too often, are the driving drivers, those who teach and those on their bad road habits to their pupils.

It is international motorists' association are trying to standardise driving instruction and driving tests in a form where all drivers will be internationally acceptable.

A good example of the reforms they have in mind lies in a proposal by the Motor Schools' Association for a new three-part driving test designed so that when the candidate is initially given the road he has the satisfaction of knowing he has already proved his driving prowess to his instructor.

The proposed test works this way:

1. Questions on the road codes will be given first, then, if the candidate passes, he will take on to a private track to show his technical skills.

2. Only after this will the learner take to the road so that the examiner, who now knows that the candidate can handle the car, can observe his confidence in putting his own motorist.

3. At the moment, you are driving a school bus, you may think you are in a safe position, but in driving, taking into account the position in the car and the whole street is looking on.

4. To find out more, contact at least 40 per cent of the new-style driving schools and take place in classrooms equipped with simulators which will make it clear on which points learn to drive.

a stainless-steel tip...
The finest to this was to make a ballpoint with a stainless-steel tip. Everybody knew this was a costly engineering feat, requiring microscopic precision in that very tough metal. We persevered, however, and after many years of research we perfected a technique which means that now for the first time it is possible to make a perfect ballpoint with stainless steel tip — tungsten ball, stainless steel tip, just this!

CHILDREN'S STORY

How grandmother's stories came true

When the grown-ups called her "Grandmother", Nobody knew her real age. Some said she was nearly 70, others said she was nearly 80, but she herself thought she had lived longer because there was fat over the whole village who could remember the figure she knew as a child.

"Once there was a river flowing past our house," she said. "There was green grass growing along its banks and lots of brightly coloured flowers and shady trees. We used to make boats out of log-trunks and sail with fish and swim in the river. It rained every day and we would sit on the bank and look at the evening sky."

"One day, Grandmother, cried the children, they did not really believe her tales, but they loved to hear her stories of long ago. One day she told them about a boy who had a magic bag. The boy had a magic bag and he could make things disappear and appear. The boy had a magic bag and he could make things disappear and appear.
