DISREGARD FOR THE FUTURE TAX PROPOSALS Accusation made against Finance Ministers BILL DEFENDED AS REALISTIC

EAST AFRICA'S three Finance Ministers were accused yesterday of "taking the future of the territories" through the proposed Income Tax (Amendment) Bill, which is being debated in the Central Legislative Assembly, sitting in Nairobi. A Tanganyika National Member, Mr. W. Tyrrell, said he would have opposed second reading if there had been a Select Committee to follow.

Mr. Tyrrell contended that the next decade in East Africa could allow development beyond anything experienced in the past ten years; if the right atmosphere were created, but the Bill would not encourage this, if the Bill and its principles were allowed to go forward in their present form.

The new tax measures drafted by the Finance Ministers were described as "regressive" by Sir Alfred Vincent (Kenya), who deplored the Administration's "failure" to take advantage of established sources of taxation. Sir Alfred, who is a member of several Members who criticised sections of the Bill, said legislation should be through consultation and discussion. He stated that if there had been such consultation these errors which had already had to be put right by modification would not have happened.

Commerce Congratulated

Deploring the Bill as a piece of architecture designed apparently not so much to help the Government as to help the Chamber of Commerce for Income Tax, Mr. Wedderburn, who is also a member of the Finance Ministers, said that it was a pity that the Government had not had a wider view of the needs and demands of each class of taxpayer.

Mr. Tyrrell was extended by a number of members of the various public bodies, including the Chamber of Commerce, in providing advice and arguments to the proposed tax legislation. The Bill is still being debated when the Assembly adjourns on Friday.

'Tragedy' that could have been averted

DR. ALFRED VINCENT (Kenya), who supported the Bill, said he felt all members had one thing in common: they were wise to wipe out income tax evasion. The man, however, who took care that the legitimate income was not lost was the one who had taken the tragedy.

On any matter relating to administration and general policy, Mr. Vincent said, the Government should be consulted. He said the Assembly would have had the benefit of discussion if the Government had consulted the Finance Ministers who had said on this subject that it was not possible to have a bill which had already been discussed in the Finance Ministers' Committee. He said the Finance Ministers had not taken the trouble to consult the Finance Ministers who had said on this subject that it was not possible to have a bill which had already been discussed in the Finance Ministers' Committee.

Some people were making enquiries about the new Bill, but they did not even know where to get one made a day, but they were required to the Administration. They would pay a great deal of money to buy a copy of the Bill.

Mr. Vincent concluded that the Bill was not a good one for the new Bill was a tragedy. This was only the first of a series of bills which would be introduced.

Supporting Sir Alfred Vincent's committee in the Central Legislative Assembly, Mr. Vincent said that the Bill was a tragedy. This was only the first of a series of bills which would be introduced.

A SIX-POINT RECOVERY PROGRAMME

Some years ago I wrote a letter to you in which I stated that the Government should have a six-point recovery programme. It is interesting to see that the Government has now adopted a similar programme.

P.L.C. policy
I am glad to see that the Government has decided to allow the P.L.C. to continue to operate as a public corporation. This is a very wise decision, as it will enable the Government to continue to receive the benefits of the P.L.C. without having to incur the expense of running it as a Government department.

Railway spending on two stations criticised

As a private individual, as well as a public member, I would like to express my views on the Government's decision to spend a large sum of money on the reconstruction of two railway stations. I believe that this money would be better spent on other public works.

Personal Tax

RECENTLY I received a notice from the Inland Revenue, stating that I had to pay a certain amount of personal tax. I am sure that the Government should do more to reduce the burden of personal tax on the public.

Engine designers are doing a great job. Modern, high compression engines deliver more power with greater fuel economy than ever before. Every type of motorist benefits—and that means you.

These wonderfully efficient engines must have petrol of highest basic quality to produce their sparkling best. And Shell provides it. Supershell with I.C.A. Shell's exclusive Ignition Control Additive is now more vital than ever before. Modern engines, with their higher temperatures and pressures, are especially sensitive to power-wasting deposits which build up in combustion chambers. Supershell, with its I.C.A. neutralizes these deposits in running and so allows engines to develop, and keep their smooth unforced power.

Can you afford to do without this vital petrol ingredient which only Shell gives you? Millions of motorists have proved it cannot.

What happened? Nothing at all! Thanks to the Firestone patent Safety Linc, Not an ounce of the linc from the tyre which was pierced by no less than three large nails, through tread and sidewall... proving that for convenience and safety under the worst conditions, FIRESTONE Tubeless Tyres cannot be beaten.

The Firestone Tubeless Tyre is so called because it does not need a separate tube to hold air. The function of the tube is built into the tyre - fused inseparably to the cup body. This patent inner liner is a layer of soft rubber completely impervious and not under tension, as is an ordinary inflated tube. When the inner liner is pierced the wall, compressed rubber closes firmly around the object. You can normally drive your car for hundreds of miles without ever suspecting that the tyre has been pierced.

'The Royal' opening up new horizons

THIS year's Royal Show was distinguished by the number of overseas judges and visitors who attended it and also by the fact that its reputation as an important agricultural and social occasion is rapidly spreading far beyond the Kenya borders.

Judges came from as far afield as Britain, New Zealand, Holland and South Africa, and visitors from the United Kingdom, Australia, South Africa, Rhodesia, and all parts of East Africa.

At the Royal much interest centred in the commercial exhibits, and the ever-growing number of items who spent lavishly on their displays must have been well rewarded by the throng of visitors.

It seemed to me that this year's Show had stretched its arms to embrace the whole of East Africa, and brought in people who had never before thought of agricultural shows not in their line of country. It had the distinction of being the only country display of its kind.

It was also led to the realization that the results of the show would be far-reaching. It had the distinction of being the only country display of its kind.

LOAN MARKETS AGAIN SHOW LITTLE MOVEMENT

Share prices in coffee price levels ONLY TWO LOTS SOLD

SHARES were again in a state of stagnation at the opening of business on Monday. The market was characterized by a lack of movement, with only two lots of shares being traded. The price levels remained relatively stable, reflecting the overall uncertainty in the market.

STRAIGHTNESS was once again the keynote of stock activity prevailing. There were a few isolated and unimportant advances in the market.

AFRICAN CRAFTSMEN CARVE A REPUTATION AND PROFIT IN WOOD

WHEREVER tourists go in East Africa there is someone ready to offer them wooden carvings—figures of Masai warriors, wild animals, elephants and a host of others.

There are to be found in shops in every village and in game reserves, not to mention those who sell from house to house or from door to door.

ALL BY HAND

Who are these men and why do their carvings come from the hands of the great majority of Masai warriors, from whom they are carved. They are a product of the Masai people, who are a primitive and primitive people. They are a product of the Masai people, who are a primitive and primitive people.

WALTER ELKAN, Senior Research Officer in Economics for the East African Institute of Social Research, has done a study of the Masai woodcarving industry.

One of the locations in particular, Wanyawa in the woods of Masai, is a good example of the industry.

There is an insatiable demand for these carvings. The official statistics give the value of exports in the year of 1950 as 2,000,000 shillings. This is something like 100,000 worth of carvings leave East Africa every year, many of them by direct export.

Not all the money goes to the Masai, a great deal of it goes to the hands of European and Kenyan agents.

There is already a great deal of competition and specialization. These woodcarvers are then able to produce a wide range of items in Masai style and to cater for the tastes of the industry.

However, the sale of all these carvings may be hindered in an extraordinary way, unless the Masai are able to keep up with the demand for their products.

CAPTAIN CARROTS AND THE CANNIBAL QUEEN

by RUBINA WRIGHT

HER MAJESTY QUEEN MAFOTTA was in a bad temper. All her life she had been a cannibal. And her doctor had said that she must give up eating meat or she would surely die. Queen Mafotta did not like being a vegetarian — which is what you call a person who does not eat meat.

To save matters worse, the Queen's cook knew nothing about making vegetable dishes and made Queen Mafotta had to refuse his help. She could not refuse to eat meat.

"What shall I do to win all these splendid suitors?" Queen Mafotta asked her doctor. "Make gardens of your own," he said.

Queen Mafotta thought that was a terrible waste, but someone had to work in the vegetable gardens, so she put the gardeners to work.

The gardeners dug. Some of them were very good gardeners, but the Queen still did not like the things they grew. "I don't care what the doctor says," she decided at last. "The next splendid suitor who jumps here is going to be cooked, and I shall eat him myself!"

One day the ship of Captain Carrots and his crew arrived. Captain Carrots was only a boy, but he was a very good sailor and a very good cook.

"I shall still be very good at my job," said the captain. "I can promise to give you the best of my crew."

"If your Majesty will allow me, let me first make a list of my famous vegetable dishes," said the captain. "I will give you the best of my crew, but for all men, let me give you the best of my crew."

The Queen had a very good idea. "I shall still be very good at my job," said the captain. "I can promise to give you the best of my crew."

Stories of old Kenya

WHEN Group Capt. Charles H. Simpson was appointed Senior Air Officer in Kenya, he has already a great deal of knowledge about the Colony which has been gathered in many previous visits in the last 25 years.

His first visit to Kenya was in 1896, being one of the first White men to visit the Colony. He was then in the colors and later held the rank of Major in the 1st Battalion, London Regiment, during the Boer War.

In Sweden

Group Capt. Simpson was included in 21 years of service in the Swedish Army, and was appointed to the rank of Colonel.

After they were married at the end of the war, they spent 12 years in Stockholm, where Group Capt. Simpson was air-attached to the Swedish Air Force. He was then transferred to the Royal Air Force, where he was appointed to the rank of Air Marshal.

Nazi aspiration

Group Capt. Simpson was in charge of a St. John Ambulance unit in Berlin during the war. He was then transferred to the Royal Air Force, where he was appointed to the rank of Air Marshal.

EMPIRE APPEAL IN A VARIETY OF DISGUISES

By HAZEL HEYWOOD

Now that the atmosphere of next season's clothes has been officially released, it is our duty to advise everyone who sees the effect of these designs that they are treated with a raised eyebrow to judge just how far the fashion designers have taken the "mod" in their designs. For the most part, the designs are not so far from the old-fashioned, but they are not so far from the old-fashioned as they once were.

After the shooting of the road-to-ruin manifesto, the designs have been subjected to a further check. It is obvious that the only line that counts this season is the high-waisted one-piece. This is the only line that is shown in London.

One of the most striking changes has been the change in the collar. The collar has become a more important feature than ever before. It is now the mainstay of the design. A collar that is not only a part of the design, but also a part of the fashion.

HUCK COLLARS

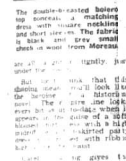

Most of the new designs have a huck collar. The huck collar is a collar that is made of a soft, pliable material. It is a collar that is easy to wear and easy to care for. It is a collar that is a part of the fashion.

OCEANIC HOTEL SUPPLEMENT

Luxury and quiet service provided for the visitor

GEORGE PERE recalls the intensive and careful planning behind the construction of East Africa's foremost hotel. The dominating Mombasa hotel was planned to be the most luxurious hotel in East Africa. This hotel was to have been of a standard previously attempted outside the United States.

The name was to give a very room and the dance floors were to be made of glass.

Understandably, due to the beginning of the May 1914 trouble and the decrease of construction funds in Europe, the work, this famous building was not started.

In February, 1926, the Oceanic Hotel Co. decided to proceed with the renovation of a 400-room hotel of international standard.

During the intervening four years it had become apparent that a number of new ideas had been developed by the architect and the contractor. The new building was to be a masterpiece of modern architecture. It was to be a hotel of international standard.

INDIVIDUALLY - COLLECTIVELY AT HOME - AT WORK - AT PLAY

this affects you!

Every intelligent man and woman realize the importance of the railway in the economic structure of East Africa and more personally—the part it plays in their daily lives. Look around you—the food you eat, the clothes you wear, the house you live in, the office, the factory, the shop, the industry—wherever you go you'll see a thousand and one everyday products which you probably take for granted. Where did they come from—how did they get there—the answer, in the majority of cases, is by rail.

In fact, by YOUR railway. For the railways of East Africa belong to the people of East Africa. They are YOURS. They are there to serve YOU.

The Railway's constant aim is to provide cheap transport to help the development of agriculture, industry and mining in East Africa. From the earliest days this has been required of them by law. To do this their rates vary according to what the goods on which a tariff is levied. The average rate for carrying one ton one mile is 20 cents—for exports it is only 12 cents—but the actual rates vary from as low as 6 cents per ton mile on basic commodities (wheat, raw materials, primary products) to 60 cents per ton per mile on the most highly valued commodities. This is what is known as the differential tariff.

The differential tariff—and the cheap rates to assist agriculture, industry and mining which go with it—cannot be maintained if the most highly priced commodities are not in other forms of transport. The situation can only be met by changes at the railway.

With effect from 1st January, 1959, therefore, a new tariff will be introduced. This will impose moderate increases in most of the lower rates but—to make them less vulnerable to competition—will concede extensive reductions on the higher rated traffic.

On the Air
Radio's MacPhee

CONFESSIONS about the radio business in the United States, as well as the radio business in other countries, are the main feature of this column. It is a place where you can find out what is going on in the radio world, and where you can express your own views on the subject. The column is written by MacPhee, a radio writer and producer, and is one of the most interesting and informative columns in the radio world.

Collecting addresses and names is a necessary part of any radio program. It is a way of finding out who is listening to the program, and who is not. It is also a way of finding out what kind of program people like to hear. There are many ways of doing this, and each has its own advantages and disadvantages. The most common way is to use a questionnaire. This is a form that you give to your listeners, and they fill it out. You then collect the forms, and use the information to plan your program. Another way is to use a telephone poll. This is a way of calling up your listeners, and asking them questions. This is a more expensive way, but it is also more accurate. There are many other ways, and each has its own merits.

Although I never thought of the radio as a business, I have now come to realize that it is. It is a business that is growing rapidly, and it is one that is becoming more and more important in our lives. There are many reasons for this. One of the main reasons is that the radio is a convenient way of getting news and information. It is also a way of getting entertainment, and it is a way of getting education. The radio is a part of our lives, and it is one that we cannot do without. It is a business that is here to stay, and it is one that is becoming more and more important in our lives.

Quicker turn-round?

Yes, with the VANGUARD

Special design features of the Vickers Vanguard cut time on the ground—and therefore operating costs—to a minimum. Cabin doors fore and aft, with built-in folding stairs, ensure rapid passenger handling. With its wide doors, the Vanguard freight holds permit simultaneous loading and unloading, and the large doors allow spacing out of individual packages for rapid unloading, at successive steps. All services are readily accessible, and the actual pressure re-rolling for a 1,000-mile flight takes only six minutes. With its low tyre pressure, the VANGUARD does not have to wait to use a particular part of the apron. All this saves the transport more time than it would be—on the air!

For your notebook...

Minimal turning circle, and excellent visibility enable you to see both the outer engine and wing tips, even when the VANGUARD can be taken in and out of the most crowded apron safely and quickly.

Part of the problem of exporting from East Africa has been described as a "difficult refrigerated transportation" and in the fullest sense of the phrase this is undoubtedly true of the bulk of the produce of the region.

It is a fact that the bulk of the produce of the region is perishable, and that it is difficult to transport it in its natural state. MAGIC IN THE AIR—AND SCENERY—OF A MIGHTY TROPICAL PLAYGROUND

BUSBY PETERS writes on the beauty and varied attractions of Tanganyika's playground... the Usambaras.

STRETCHING over an area of some 1,300 square miles of Tanganyika's northeast coast, the Usambaras Mountains are a fairland of beauty and charm on a magnificent scale. The lush valley of the Luwngara River into the Eastern and Western Usambaras.

The Eastern Usambaras, which surround fewer facilities and limited accommodations, are much to offer and makes at least a one-day trip from Tanga well worth while. A vast network of shady lanes and roads, built and crept by its gardeners.

The roads and paths meander along deep valleys down which budding vegetation shows how offering splendid views pale before the views of the Indian Ocean 50 miles away across the Tanganyika Sea, and to a perfect and sub-tropical climate to be found everywhere, while its herbarium and arboretum were world-famous—comparable to Kew in England and the University of California in Berkeley.

Build by the Germans at a reported cost of more than £1,000,000, Amanzi is now sadly deserted. Plans to keep by members of the East African Institute of Marine Research who occupy the old buildings. As for the rest? Africa is claiming her own.

Deep Ravines
It is in the Western Usambaras, however, that the greatest spectacles of above ground.

Surrounded by towering cliffs, they lead down up into the timber line. There seems little hope of reaching the mountain tops.

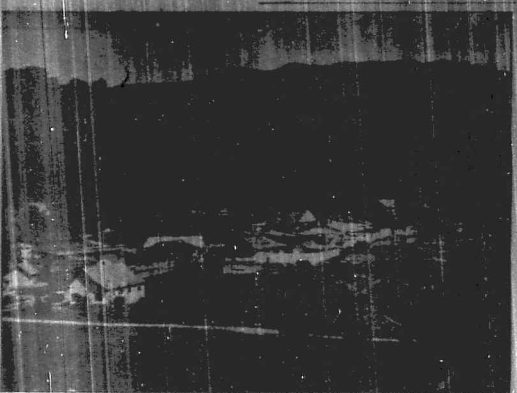

Nevertheless, here and there, as though by some giant's caprice, deep gorges have been cut in the solid rock up which scores of people, built before the days of bulldozers, wind their way out on to the beautiful country above.

The most popular route, though by no means the only one, is the old wooden road. Minimal River from the Agency building at the foot of the mountains and to which roads and air services are available from all over East Africa.

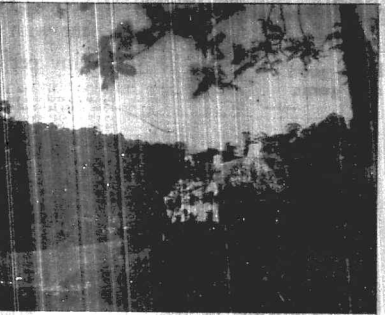

Winding and twisting, this narrow road climbs up the valley passing along the crest of the low-lying, green Mt. Gorge until it reaches shady lanes wander all over the Usambaras.

FINDING TIME FOR COMEDY IN THE AIR

ONE of Broadway's most successful comedies, "This for That" for Broadway, comes to the screen at the Empire next week. It stars Fanny Crutcheon in a story about the passionate Air Force's hilariously unsuccessful attempt to indoctrinate a naive G.I. on a farm boy, Co-Ed and Murray Hamilton.

The play, written by Ira Levin and directed by Maurice Browne, opened in New York in October, 1934, with Griffith and McCormick heading the cast. The play was based on one of the funniest episodes of Griffith's war which included a "hot" night with the screen. In 1934 his production of comedian of the Steve role in the picture, which made a fine job of thought. The picture ranges on the great volume of Mike Carney who had to choose between making his conversion to their country.

SECOND FASHION EMPIRE TURNS BACK THE CLOCK

By Percy Wainwright

There is a new version of the Second Fashion Empire. Every fashion of woman's apparel for the autumn and winter turns back the clock to the beginning of the last century.

Paris fashion has never been completely so far removed from the past, and, accordingly, every article of dress has its own history. The new fashion is a revival of the fashion of the late 19th century, and it is a revival of the fashion of the late 19th century.

It is a revival of the fashion of the late 19th century, and it is a revival of the fashion of the late 19th century.

CHAMPION WHO WAS 'DOWN' FOR 14 ECS.

In the first article in a new series 'Reveries of Harry', results of the recent heavyweight title fight between Dempsey and Tunney are discussed.

As every schoolboy knows, it is a cardinal rule of boxing that the victor in a fight should step down from the ring and bow to his opponent. Yet on September 17, 1936, the heavyweight champion of the world, Jack Dempsey, who has been known as the 'Knockout Kid' for many years, did not do this. Instead, he remained in the ring and continued to fight with his opponent, Jimmie Braddock, for a further 14 rounds. This was a most unusual occurrence in the history of the sport.

One year earlier, in the 'Bismarck' fight, the day after the 'Bismarck' fight, Jack Dempsey was knocked out by Jimmie Braddock in the 15th round. This was a most unusual occurrence in the history of the sport. Dempsey's defeat by Braddock was a great surprise to many people, as Dempsey was considered to be the best heavyweight fighter in the world at that time.

POPULAR HOPE
The popularity of Dempsey was at its height when he fought Braddock. He was the most popular heavyweight fighter in the world at that time. His victory over Braddock was a great surprise to many people, as Dempsey was considered to be the best heavyweight fighter in the world at that time.
