Tsavo elephant dispute

The addest thing about the uch-weiltard dispute over eleghant reaceral project. Taxo which has led to the signation of its director, Dr. whard M. Law, is that it aws Kenya where it was two ars ago — with a serious lemma over whether there too many elephants in the art, and it so how many sould be cropped.

esignation seems to have been not so much over disagreement on policy-as a result of incompatibility of temperament. Statements by Dr. Laws and by officials of the Government and the National Parks make it clear that the clash of personalities was such that a break was inevitable.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Few scientists are opponents of cropping

I was most interested to see Dr. R. M. Laws's valedictory statements on the subject of elephant croppine. One of these inparticular is misleading and should not go unchalleng-ed.

There is no space to go into this in depth, but to cite only one authority: that of an FAO. biologist, Dr. Jacques Verschuuren.

of taking over the project, but few would content that he has a reputation of world standing, and a great number of years or research work to his credit. In any case, the words "the opponents of cropping" are an oversimplification of a complica-ted issue. Few scientists are "opponents of cropping" in principle.

A combination of adverse ircumstants has contributed the cris — the unusually ad weather the needs of the of traffic being handled at Kilindini has expanded considerably, reflecting the growth of Kenya's import and export

At the end of May, with dockers refusing to work beyond normal hours because of dissatisfaction that wage and other claims had not been and other claims had not been met, all working berths were occupied at the port and 17 ships were waiting facing an 11-day wait before they could be dealt with Railway work-ing was also affected, with large numbers of wagons held was also affected.

The De kworkers' Union had in April submitted a list of demand to East African Carpo Handling Services, one of the major ones being for an increase of the manual worker's minimum monthly wage from £17 12s. to £20. Failure to reach agreement on the demands led to the union's decision to refuse overtime. This aggravated ar overtime. This aggravated an already serious cargo "logiam" and led to an initiative by the Coast Provincial Commis-sioner, Mr. Mathenge, who visited the port to assess the situation, and later appealed to the dockers to recon help clear the congestion.

by June 10 the port was again fully active for the first time in three weeks. The union had agreed to a resumption until June 21, pending a decision on its claims.
