No one would have thought it of Brown. He was always a little hard up and had to weigh any additional expenditure carefully in his mind before deciding what to do. But then, they didn't know that on his 34th birthday he took out the Manufacturers Life Guaranteed

Income Plan and now, at age 55, he has just been paid a lump sum of £1,650 and will also receive a guaranteed payment of £30 per month for the next ten years, whether he lives or not. "Lucky Brown," say some. "Forethought," replies Brown. "Why don't you do the same thing?"

Write for full details of this Plan (giving date of birth) to W. Neesham, Clerk, Manager for East Africa.

ANGLO-U.S. TRADE BATTLE IN SOUTH AFRICA

THE "STANDARD" correspondent Johannesburg.

THE recent visit of two senior officials of the State Department of the United States to the Union has caused several responsible newspapers to predict that South Africa will become the leading competitor of British-empire goods. The American officials, including a large number of American businessmen, South African officials, and prominent and important figures in the economic and industrial life of the country.

This trade harmony on an official level is not surprising in the Union, where the first quarter of this year the United States—head of British goods exports, before the war, the Union was very far down the list. In 1937, for example, it ranked a half of one per cent of American exports, whereas now a far more favorable trade balance exists. During the first quarter of this year, South Africa exported to the United States, at the rate of £28,000,000 a year, while American exports to the Union were valued at £44,000,000.

It is a matter of interest.

In addition, America has over 2000 foreign-owned establishments, factories and plants in South Africa. There are now four American-South African-American shipping companies, several motor car companies, plants and rubber factories as well as many other similar firms. This, as an important factor in the development of the Union, is the result of the fact that the American Rubber Company of Natal, which has a capital of £1,000,000 and is to establish a work priority of rubber plantations in the Union.

These new concerns, like a number of existing South African-American concerns, are expected to export goods to the United States. The fact of the African continent, the United States and the Middle East, is expected to set up the near future also have a similar trade field in view, and also India. In addition, the amount of British capital invested in the Union

"And a Rose in Her Hair..."

THE fashion of wearing flowers—real or artificial—is just about the latest touch to an evening costume. It is decidedly popular in the United States. And very nice it looks. In the following article a few more ideas for gay evenings are suggested. Perhaps some of them will be seen soon at our parties; they sound so though they would be worth trying out. Though we wonder whether there is anyone courageous enough to try the "dramatic" style which, according to the article in the star's most distinctive.

ROMANCE OF CHEMICAL RESEARCH

8 Major British Achievements

By GORDON LONG

AN exhibition of the achievements of British chemistry during the last six years has recently been held in London. The exhibits were Penicillin, the sulphamonomides, Paludrine, Diammonium Methanesulphonate, Artil, Pyropex and Polythene.

The "Chemistry at Your Service" Exhibition, which has been held in London during the summer of 1949, was the first of its kind. It was the public's opportunity to see the results of the research in chemistry in its everyday life.

This is not a new development. In the past, research chemists have increased in number and in importance. It was necessary to bring about a transformation. People then, unaware of the fact that Britain's chemists were a great national asset. Unfortunately, they were not so well tended to build up a conception of their work as the modern chemist. Rather than as the architects of molecules which they create. The exhibition set out to correct any false impression, by showing the scope of achievement, the methods of development, the many great possibilities in a world of people, each concerned with a new discovery, and the absolute necessity for the term of "discovery".

The Wonder Drug

The exhibition is divided into sections. The first introduces British scientists contributing to research. Of them the first and greatest, Penicillin, the "wonder" drug, Penicillin. The story of its discovery by Dr. Alexander Fleming and Dr. Chain is told in a most interesting way. The exhibition revealed one interesting fact. Penicillin is a natural product of a fungus. It is a substance which is found in nature. It is a substance which is found in nature. It is a substance which is found in nature.

Judging Dairy Cattle: Judging Training

JERSEY CATTLE BREEDERS SOCIETY'S NOTES

Dairy cattle breeders have to some extent aped the breeders of fat stock and horses and set up arbitrary standards of dairy type. There is a great difference, however, between the selection of beef cattle for example and dairy cattle. In the one case the animal will languish the first winter with straggling, prostration or abortion and die, while in the other the animal will produce milk and give up satisfactory milk yields at the end of the year. The court also found that the vessel was overloaded and that the master had failed to take proper precautions against the storm.

In previous press announcements we have promised to bring you more of the things you need. In defence of this statement we write you to place through the items below. Perhaps amongst them are some of the things for which you have been waiting for months—or even years. We have kept you waiting but we want you to appreciate that it has been against our will to do so. Even the best will in the world cannot immediately overcome such short supply as exists and we can only continue to pursue our policy of sparing no effort to secure and bring into the country East Africa's share of the best of the world's machinery and hardware manufactures.

You can depend on G & R to do this for you.

CONFLICT IN BRITISH CABINET
Should Capital Punishment Be Abolished?
FOUR POINTS OF DISAGREEMENT

A CONFLICT in the British Cabinet over the abolition of capital punishment may hold up the Labour Government's plans to introduce legislation for wide reforms of British Criminal Justice procedure. While the Home Secretary, John Christopher, is holding strongly humanitarian views, wants to abolish the death penalty for at least an experimental period of five years—and in this he has the backing of the majority of Labour members in the present Parliament—the rest of the Cabinet is still trying to make up its mind on the issue, according to reliable sources.

The specific points on which the Cabinet has convened in these sessions, failed to agree include the following:

Firstly, on the British Government's intention to legislate to abolish the death penalty in Britain when the date of its execution is set, but to allow the death penalty being passed on them in a case of a foreign court in which British judges sit. Secondly, should the abolition of the death penalty include persons convicted of treason and military offences, and should it be extended to cover crimes in which the death penalty is still retained in some other countries.

Thirdly, should prisoners who are sentenced to death be kept in custody and scrupulously plan the death of their victims as mandated from the death penalty in the same way as a man of ordinary intelligence would plan the death of a convicted murderer under high emotional stress such as several instances.

Fourthly, in view of the fact that the death penalty is still retained in some of the most civilized countries in the world, should the Government be asked to consider the possibility of a limited abolition of the death penalty in the same way as a man of ordinary intelligence would plan the death of a convicted murderer under high emotional stress such as several instances.
