MR. MACDONALD'S DEFENCE OF PALESTINE POLICY

Amazing Extent Of Illegal Immigration

JEWISH AGENCY REJECTS APPEAL

ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION INTO PALESTINE—THE AMAZING EXTENT OF WHICH HE REVEALED—WAS CONDEMNED BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES, MR. MALCOLM MACDONALD, IN THE COURSE OF A LIVELY HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATE.

He appealed to Jewish leaders and people to co-operate in the suppression of this traffic, which he said was organised to try to smash British policy and might have results as serious for the Jewish community as for anyone else.

In reply to Opposition critics, he denied that the White Paper breaks pledges to the Jews.

London, July 21.

... present at the Council and present their arguments. He believed that the White Paper policy was essential if peace was to be realised in Palestine, and it was entirely within the terms of the Mandate.

The British people alone, he said, had defended the Jewish National Home. After millions of British taxpayers' money had been spent, and the lives of British soldiers and civil servants had been sacrificed, it was obvious that Britain was not going to desert the Jewish National Home now.

He rejected a suggestion that the British Government's policy should be suspended while the League of Nations Council was considering it.

On the question of illegal immigration, he denied that the suspension of legal immigration was the result of the White Paper policy. On the contrary, it was in harmony with that policy and the Government would have been breaking its policy if it had not taken this action.

Extent of Illegal Traffic

He said that 40 per cent of the illegal immigrants were from Poland and Rumania, and what was going on at present was a flagrant attempt to smash the immigration laws and the White Paper policy. It was causing grave unrest among the Arabs, with results at least as serious to the Jewish community as to anyone else. That position could not be tolerated.

Mr. MacDonald appealed to the Jewish authorities to do all in their power to check illegal immigration. There were 1,500 illegal immigrants between January 1 and May 31, since when British patrols had captured 3,500 more, while between 500 and 1,000 entered the country undetected. Some 4,000 were on the way in ships, intending to force their way into the country.

That total of 8,000 cancelled out the quota granted for the next six months, but there was the rest of the five years.

He entirely denied the suggestion that the Government was abandoning the Central European refugees and had barred the door to Palestine. Palestine could not provide the whole solution of the refugee problem but it could make a very considerable contribution.

Jewish Agency's Attitude

The London Office of the Jewish Agency today rejected Mr. MacDonald's appeal for co-operation. It refuses to be made in any way responsible for the inevitable consequences of the Government's new immigration policy.

Check On Letters In Germany

NEW ZEALAND CREDITS

Increasing Trade With Britain

London, July 21.

New Zealand has secured from the British Government trade credits totalling nine million pounds. Negotiations to redeem New Zealand's seventeen million pounds loan which matures shortly are proceeding satisfactorily.

Mr. Nash, New Zealand's Finance Minister, said in London last night that the British Government had agreed to grant credits up to five million pounds for the purchase of United Kingdom goods by the New Zealand Government. A short term export credit up to four million pounds would also be made available for approved exports from Britain to New Zealand importers.

Restriction Inevitable

A White Paper on the trade talks between Britain and New Zealand was issued in London last night. It says that United Kingdom Ministers recognised that in the circumstances existing in New Zealand since December measures to reduce total imports were inevitable. The British Government would not object in principle to the method by which the New Zealand Government hoped to restrict imports.

The New Zealand Government, however, promises to do its utmost by relaxing import restrictions to increase trade between the two countries, consistent with its obligations to existing industries in New Zealand. Cases causing particular difficulty to United Kingdom interests will be examined, and the import licensing policy will not be used to prevent reasonable competition [illegible] in New Zealand uneconomic industries.

The Times, commenting on the announcement, says that at a time when armament credits are being granted to countries outside the Empire, whose capacity to defend themselves is regarded as a British interest, there could be no question of withholding such credits from a Dominion which has shown such patriotic devotion to the defence of the Empire.—(Reuter).

HUNGARIAN BOOK BANNED

Minister and German Friendship

Budapest, July 21.

In Hungary there has been a huge sale of a book entitled "Germany's Chances in a War". It has been written by a University Professor, who quotes only German official literature and shows that Germany's chances of success in a war are extremely remote.

The book has now been banned, and the Hungarian Foreign Minister, last night referring to it, said that in recent weeks unknown attackers had tried to prove that Germany's intentions with regard to Hungary were not strictly honourable and that if war broke out Germany would be defeated.

He repudiated these [illegible] and threatened to use all legal [illegible] against those who posed doubt on the sincerity of Hungarian-German friendship.—(Reuter).

STOCKS RISE IN JAPAN

Some Progress With British Negotiations

Tokyo, July 21.

The British Ambassador in Tokyo met the Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita again today, in an effort to find a basis for negotiations about Tientsin.

After two hours it was reported that some progress had been made, and the fourth of the series of conversations will take place tomorrow.

Contact is being maintained in Tokyo by Sir Robert Craigie with his French and United States colleagues.

The Japanese newspapers this morning declare that Mr. Arita has decided to reject the British counter-proposals handed to him on Wednesday. The newspaper report is accompanied by threatening and abusive comment directed against Great Britain.

More Optimistic View

The view taken of the latest conversations, however, caused heavy buying on the Japanese Stock Exchange. The entire list of stocks showed gains, amounting to sevenpence up to 2s. 4d.

It is reported that the Japanese Premier is remaining in Tokyo and has called a special meeting of the Cabinet for tomorrow. From that meeting he will report to the Emperor.

The spokesman of the Japanese Foreign Office, this morning commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons, said Japan had not the slightest intention of trying to force Britain to change her Far Eastern policy. He added that it was hoped that Britain recognised realities and would change her attitude of her own accord.

Japan claims to have taken two more towns in the course of fighting in the South-east of Shansi Province. At the third attempt, troops have made a landing at Swatow, 70 miles north-east of Hong Kong.

In Shanghai yesterday the Chinese dollar fell to -/4½d. as against -/8d in June, and 1/2½d. before the present war. Business is paralysed and the price of goods is soaring.—(Reuter.)

THETIS TO BE TOWED TO ANGLESEY

Rugby, July 21.

The weather has been so favourable of late in Liverpool Bay that it has been possible for divers at work in connexion with the attempts to raise the submarine Thetis to stay down longer than usual.

An announcement yesterday, after stating that a moderate swell on a rising tide had interrupted the work, added: "We will lift the stern of the submarine on tonight's tide, if conditions are suitable, and place the seventh and eighth lifting wires under the keel."

If conditions are favourable, the first lift of the Thetis will, as already reported, be undertaken at low water this evening. If the first lift is successful, the submarine will be taken only a few hundred yards, the first of a series of hops that will be necessary before Anglesey is reached.

The enquiry into the Thetis disaster has been adjourned pending reports from the divers who are trying to raise the submarine.—(British Official Wireless Service).

R.A.F. MAN'S HEROISM

Saved Boy—Then Killed

London, July 21.

A Royal Air Force bomber pilot, Sergeant Buller, gave his life to save a public schoolboy passenger after a collision between two aeroplanes at Stamford yesterday.

Immediately after the collision Sergeant Buller told the boy to jump from the 'plane, but the boy was too nervous to do so. The pilot then lifted him from the cockpit and as he dropped him over the side pulled the rip-cord of his parachute. The boy landed safely.

The Sergeant jumped from the 'plane but was too near the ground for his parachute to open. He was killed instantly.—(Reuter).

Naval Visit To Istanbul

Rugby, July 21.

Preparations are being made in Istanbul for the official reception of Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, the Commander-in-Chief of the British Fleet in the Mediterranean, who will arrive there in his flagship the Warspite (30,600 tons) on August 29.

On the same date the battleship Malaya (31,000 tons) will call at Smyrna. The Warspite will extend the visit over three days.

In welcoming the announcement of the visit, the Turkish newspapers say that the presence of British ships in Turkish waters will be an occasion for a striking demonstration of the ultimate nature of Anglo-Turkish relations.—(British Official Wireless Service).

B.M.A. CONFERENCE

Rugby, July 21.

The British Medical Association annual conference opened at Aberdeen today.

A motion by the Council that the Association's membership with the Association Professionelle Internationale des Medicines be discontinued, was, after a sharp discussion, rejected and an amendment favouring the continued membership was carried by a large majority.—(British Official Wireless Service.)

HITLER'S HOPES

Determined To Get It—Without War

Berlin, July 21.

A statement by a Berlin official spokesman today makes it clear that Herr Hitler has not in the least relaxed his claims on Danzig, but that in fact he expects the Free City will be handed over to him without war.

The spokesman said that Hitler was fully determined to get Danzig, without giving way an inch, but he was equally anxious not to go to war.

He suggested that Poland might be offered some quid pro quo which would enable her to accept a peaceful solution without loss of prestige.

German military circles, who regard the fortification measures in Danzig as merely a matter of protection, say it is quite clear that war is possible, but they do not regard that as a right or desirable solution.

The Fuehrer's attitude, it is believed in Warsaw, is based on some kind of impression that, in the last resort, Britain would use her influence with Poland to avert war. It is pointed out in London, however, that there is no basis for this belief and that Poland has said that she is ready to fight for Danzig in any case.

"POLAND CAN'T BE SWINDLED OUT OF DANZIG"

Poland's determination was reiterated in an official statement in Polish, German and Italian which was read from the Warsaw Broadcasting Station last night. It was in the following terms:

Poland will fight for Danzig. Let these words be understood by those who believe that Poland can be swindled out of Danzig. Let the rulers of Germany realise that it depends on their decision alone whether there is to be war. Poland has said her last word. She does not include bluff in her policy.

German General's Speech

General Von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, spoke last night at Tannenberg, where Marshal Von Hindenburg beat the Russians in the Great War. It is ten miles from the Polish frontier.

In his speech the General emphasised the German character of East Prussia in what he called an answer to those who wanted now to establish a pretended right "to this ancient soil which has been associated for over a thousand years with German culture and history".

He added: "We do not seek a conflict, but we fear it still less".

Sir E. Ironside Returns

The Inspector-General of British Overseas Forces, General Sir Edmund Ironside, concluded his visit to Poland today and flew back to England.

Yesterday he spent a long time watching exercises carried out by infantry, artillery, tanks and bombing planes. He also visited a number of military establishments, and had lunch with the Minister for War.

On his departure from the airport the General found, in addition to the Air Guard of honour, a detachment of the Legionaries who fought under his command in the Great War. They were drawn up to see him leave, and he addressed them in Polish.—(Reuter).

NAZI HARVESTERS

Berlin, July 21.

More than half the entire Nazi Student Organisation, comprising 45,000 youths, is now engaged in harvesting, most of the work being in East Prussia.

A German Decree dissolves and prohibits all the youth organisations formerly permitted in Austria, including the Nazis and Boy Scouts.—(Reuter).

"THE MIKADO"

AT LAST, after a quarter of a century of waiting, the first Gilbert and Sullivan opera has come to the screen, copyrights all squared, music as written by Sullivan, words as written by Gilbert, and produced by an ex D'Oyly Carte conductor with the blessing of the D'Oyly Carte office. Thousands of people all over the world have been waiting for just such an occasion.

Is it then a happy experiment?

Well, I must admit I don't really know. I, for one, have never been an ardent Savoyard though I have no quarrel with those who are—after all, Gilbert and Sullivan is largely a matter of personal taste and individual upbringing, and if one is brought up to sing "Three Little Maids" from the time you enter the schoolroom, that is not a thing that is easily forgotten.

But, not being an enthusiast, I am also not really capable of judging the film, so will quote the opinions of those who are. Mr. Geoffrey Toye and his collaborators, I may add, had a knotty problem before them when they set out to film a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. [illegible] jungle.

The natives give in in terror, the sun rises—rather nervously, I thought—and Harry raises his head to mutter the number of his sister's receiving station.

This startling tribute to the invention of the newsreel cameraman is something the factual ones would do well to study; it might give them quite a new idea of their romantic duty towards their audiences, and I recommend to their attention Mr. Gable's pretty little speech on the nobility of the cameraman's calling.

Honestly, though, it may be a trifle ridiculous, but it's lively and it's fun.

True Confession

—EMPIRE—

Either you like screwy films or you don't—there doesn't seem to be any middle way. If you like them, you'll like this one, for Carole Lombard certainly does take the rule for crazy comedy.

Actually, it really is excellent in its own peculiar style and in rather better taste than NOTHING SACRED which was her last film to appear here; it is certainly toned down a little and one really can begin to believe that there are girls like Helen Bartlett who are temperamentally incapable of telling [illegible]

what almost amounts to a genius for most vigorous and hilariously absurd miming—wait till you see him do "The Portsmouth Goalkeeper"—and an easy, grave way of making the most ridiculous little jokes sound the funniest thing you've heard.

Then there was "The Horse Pipe"—a pretty good bit of horse-play at that, which drew special applause from an enormous Great Dane who somehow (don't ask me) happened to be in the audience! E. R. Prichard, with his dumb and delightful stooge of a stage hand, had us very nicely with his conjuring tricks (no sooner done than explained away most satisfactorily) and ended up with a grand leg-pull which caught most of the audience. By the way, if you're going tonight, don't forget to take a large square clean handkerchief with you—you may need it. No, I won't explain.

Impersonations

A. B. Wrighton's Impersonations of guests at the Dorchester Hotel were both clever and witty and outrageously recognisable. I liked the Strong Man act, too, in the real circus manner with H. Street's highly serious patter introducing Jock Lindsay—who weighs the anchor by hand, they say, and breakfasts off dozens of plates of porridge and a glass of iced water—stern and silent and fairly puffed up with—em—muscle, is it? E. D. Attwater's idea of recitations at a church social were good, but poor Professor B. A. Lance claimed "the silent indulgence" of his audience for feats of equilibrium in vain. However, his other performance as Mercedes Bleitze—the lady who once performed high-diving exploits at the old Empire, and who was rediscovered by the 4th Cruiser Squadron living on a coral atoll off coconuts among the palms—very nearly, in more ways than one, brought the house down.

Then there was a hilarious sketch, "Calling the Commander," dealing with the sort of misadventures one gathers may occur on the day of commissioning—though perhaps it is too much to hope that this is usual. J. B. C. Porter made an admirable Commander and received more than adequate support from the other players.

In a more serious vein, there was Jan Turner's Dutch song and dance with a spot of yodelling that went down well; of W. E. Wilson's Songs, though I thought the second more suited to his full baritone voice. H. A. Bateman, a versatile member of the orchestra—The Manchester Melody Makers—played some pleasing selections as violin solos, as well as an excellent saxophone solo later. C. A. Rice's Swing Music medley on the piano was really good; while J. A. E. Stanton, the M.M.M's. pianist, sang songs at the piano in a very pleasant tenor. W. Bowgen had an extremely original act of Paper Tearing, and produced dancing figures, lacey tablecloths, lofty trees (a cross between a coconut palm and a banana) and a vast ladder, all torn while you watch from thick wads of paper—a feat requiring extreme accuracy and, I imagine, very strong fingers.

Some people may say I have left the best to the last. Perhaps I have. The Hill Billies singing their prairie songs of the West in an easy camp-fire manner were encored and encored. But as for the Manchester Melody Makers, very ably conducted by Bandmaster H. W. Ditchfield, well, all I can say is that I only wish they would stay here. Some of the very best night-club stuff this,' accented by really first-class crooning from "Jimmy."

Trouble Over Jazz

There are always squabbles, or rather differences, over something but never over anything more than jazz music. The B.B.C. has always been one of the worst sufferers in this respect and they have always been the sardine between the sandwich of the high-brow and the low-brow, or age and youth, or the musical lover and the dance-music lover.

Now the controversy has reached the cinema. Jazz lovers are up in arms over what they term the "neglect of jazz" and are demanding pictures containing exclusive jazz pictures. This neglect may be news to many people but it is a serious accusation, and no doubt these people will get their wish. In fact, sometimes jazz might be a relief after the distortions of many well-known musical phrases and songs which we often hear in so-called musical numbers.

In Danzig Today

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 16.

No stranger to Danzig, not having read the Press of the world for the past month, would suppose this ancient city, with its Teutonic architecture and quiet squares, to be a political storm centre.

Superficially there is little sign of tension. Nothing could be more tranquil than the appearance of Cologne, when the Rhineland was occupied in March, 1936, or the gemütlich foreshore of Lake Geneva in September, than the smiling, leisurely life of Danzig today.

Herr Albert Forster, "gauleiter" of the Free City, produced traces of German impatient at a Nazi rally last week-end, when he referred in passing to the "reported" sufferings of his followers.

"The British and French Press declares that we are endangering a test of psychological endurance," he believed from a gleeful-looking 10,000 uniformed men at Gdyn, a district of Danzig then engaged in annual celebration. "Are we nervous?"

Derisive shouts answered him. Digging himself, the brave lip wiped his forehead had sought refuge from the hot sunshine.

Later that day there were merry crowds as usual on the beach at Zoppot, Danzig's playground, and in the roulette rooms of its casino.

Yet, beneath the surface, out of earshot of the Gauleiter, there is deep anxiety and smouldering fear and hatred. More than one Danzig housewife has asked me in a whisper in the past few days if war will come (writes Denis Wessner in the News Chronicle).

Behind the confident laughter of the Danzig Senate officials there is real concern, plainly evidenced by the recent arrival from Germany of troops and arms. Indeed, it is said, to reinforce the police as a defence measure in case of a Polish coup.

10,000 Police

Two weeks ago Danzig's "police" force totalled 7,000 men. Those, including various grades of S.A. and S.S. troops, there are roughly 10,000.

Armaments, chiefly light armaments, machine-guns and anti-aircraft guns, have been brought in nightly for the past ten days at Schichau, the naval dockyard in the Motlau river. Between midnight and 2 a.m. lights burn and there is much activity behind the 20 ft. wall round the dockyard and all unauthorised enquirers are sternly discouraged from close inspection.

Arms have been stored in school buildings and placed in position, also under cover of night, on two hills, Bischofsberg and Hagelsberg, both within a quarter of a mile of the Marienkirche. The magnificent and Winter barracks are packed with conscripts. Though the frontiers between the Free City and Poland, north and south, have been closed enough lately, the main road to the south-eastern border has been cleared completely between Tiegenhof and Elbing.

German circles in Danzig pooh-pooh reports that any heavy artillery has arrived. While this may be so, should the other arms there can be no doubt.

Nevertheless, the light guns and machine-guns, a large proportion of which consist of young Danzigmen recently returned from military service in Germany, clearly do not constitute in themselves a serious menace to Poland, or even an adequate protection for Danzig if a real putsch were contemplated.

Advice to Poland

But they do represent an affront to Poland, to whom the constitution of right belongs to reinforce the peace of Danzig if necessary (though scarcely against herself), and a gesture of defiance to the Senate reminiscent of Herr Greiser's celebrated gesture at Geneva. It is noteworthy that further arrivals of men and arms have ceased since the position of Count Helldorf has been made clearer.

Many level-headed Danzigers are beginning to perceive that the real issue of the Free City is in reality two questions—that of Danzig's chance to be "free" to share itself under German rule if it so wishes, and, secondly, that of whether Poland will use the Danzig pocket-ship in the game being played elsewhere to slaughter vaster powers.

Vested Interest

At first glance there is much that seems favourable in the fact of these Danzig's population is pre-dominantly German. Nothing could be more striking than the violent contrast between the short, bright-eyed men in Danzig and the sober Teutons of the Free City only a few miles away.

If Danzig owns its prosperity to Poland it is not less true that Poland's export trade would be reduced by half without Danzig. They are mutually dependent and Danzig feels big enough to point this out.

But on the other hand Polish-Danzigers do not consider their rule as comparable in a struggle of aggression than Danzig. They do not remember that their fate, and doubtless our solution to their problems, may be decided in Katowice, or in Bucharest or even in Berlin.

Some days of careful enquiry here have convinced me that, should and parade as they will, the Nazi rulers of Danzig have in fact no small a voice in the solution to the present problems as that of the Polish minority, a minority which Herr Forster contemptuously dismissed in my hearing as "present in our German town."

Certainly matters are not yet ripe militarily for any violent action in Danzig itself. Armed toleration exists at the frontiers and in the hearts of Danzigers and Poles alike.

In Gdynia

In Gdynia there is resignation, since it is realised clearly there that if war came its fate would be sealed rapidly. In Danzig there is at least a simmering suspicion that of decisions lie elsewhere.

When I asked a German spokesman when the promised return to the Reich was to take place he replied vaguely and mysteriously something about August.

Perhaps he was thinking of a certain mountain-top in Oberammergau. Danzig, like the rest of us, will have to "wait and see."

"Bush Telegraph" in Britain

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 16.

The "bush telegraph"—the means of communication between Central African tribes—still plays a splendid warnings for lonely farms in Northumberland if experiments being carried out on one big estate are successful.

Impressed by the speed with which news is sent through the African jungle by means of hollowed trunks of trees, Colonel Gerard F. T. Lesher, of Middleton Hall, Berwick-on-Tweed, has fitted a modern farm, at "bush telegraph" at his service.

Bare-faced

Nobody knows who invented shaving. It is a self-imposed torture that goes back long before the days of the Spanish Inquisition. Probably, some cave-maiden with a tender skin got all up-stage after a Stone Age bunny-hug party at the local night club and told the young man of the moment that if he didn't want to be mistaken for a brontosaurus or something worse he had better get cleaned up before he came to the next party. Objecting to her woad and castor-oil make-up being rubbed off on the mat so often she no doubt informed him that when he showed his face at her cave door again she would like to see it without the fungus. Anyhow that first primeval shave must have been an ordeal horrible to watch. The growth of a few good rainy seasons makes a difference, even if you tuck the loose ends in like a kei-apple hedge. What with the birds' nests, and the ant heaps and the bee hives and things nestling so close to nature in these far away and unregenerate days, it is little wonder that the bright young things refused to come up to scratch.

Nowadays, with all this civilization, man is of finer and more delicate fibre but the habit has grown. Many an adoring wife likes to see the bearded stranger from the blue, but she insists on her own husband showing a clean pair of jaws to the world even though there are holes in the heels of his socks. So it comes about that on fine clear mornings and dull, millions of men stride with determination into the bathroom and, seizing soap and brush and razor, proceed to inflict on themselves those fearful wounds which make a face with which Nature has done her worst already, even worse than that. Bleeding from many pores, with tell tale spots on a virgin collar, they make their sacrifice to fashion and domestic peace. And you may say what you like about newspapers but they have other uses than lining the pantry shelves or wrapping up the fish and chips. A corner of the day's crisis, or what Hitler said about the British Empire, may not make a clean job of a razor cut, but it has its uses if you can once get it to stick. The English language, too, owes something of the richness and variety of its vocabulary to those morning operations, performed without even a local anaesthetic. Golf and shaving have perhaps left more ineradicable marks on the human phrasing than anything else. You know what you are sure face what the architect meant when he said that through the building is rigidly rectangular there is no harshness in the physiognomy.

Beards have played a part in history. The other day an antiquarian established the fact that the Romans began shaving about 300 B.C. because somewhere in old England he dug up a Roman razor which seems to have been a cross between a butcher's cleaver and a lawn-mower. A Russian Czar once put a tax on beards because he regarded them as a luxury and clerks stood at the city gates collecting the roubles. In Turkey on the other hand slaves had to shave their chins as a sign of their servitude, and that may possibly be an explanation of the domestic slavery so universal today.

Women who insist on all this bare-faced exposure would not be so keen on telling their husbands that they cannot go out to dinner like that if Nature had been less selective. If they would only get back to the old Shakespearian view that "he that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is less than a man," life would be easier and the disturbing problem of what happens to old razor blades would not trouble the economists.

But when all is said and done, if a beard were everything the goat would be the winner.

REFUGEES AND THE EMPIRE

Home Secretary's Views

London, July 21.

The Home Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, in a speech last night, welcomed the suggestion by the President of the United States for a conference of Governments who were trying to aid refugees.

He was addressing the members of the Evian Inter-Governmental Refugees Committee at a dinner given by the United States delegate, Mr. Myron Taylor.

Sir Samuel Hoare.

Sir Samuel said the refugee problem must not be allowed to drift. Every possible facility for the settlement of refugees would be provided within the British Empire. The British Government was also prepared to consider the possibility of making a financial contribution, providing that it was part of the co-operative effort by other Governments in the world. (Reuter).

NEW DALAI LAMA DISCOVERED

After Five Years' Search

Chunking, July 21.

A Chinese peasant boy is to be the fourteenth Dalai Lama of Tibet.

He was discovered recently after a five years' search by Tibetan monks and soothsayers in a tiny village in the Kokonor Province of China. He is now on his way to Lhassa with the searchers.

The previous Dalai Lama died in 1933, and the belief is that his spirit passed into the body of a child born at the exact moment of his death. —(Reuter).

MARS IS IN THE NEWS AGAIN

Cape Town, July 21.

A well-known American astronomer has observed at Bloemfontein a distinct change in the spot on Mars known as the Great Eye. It has not assumed its present shape for 50 years, if indeed ever before.

The astronomer thinks that the change in shape may be due to the growth of vegetable matter, and says this would lend support to the theory that there is life on Mars. —(Reuter).

The Weather

The British East African Meteorological Service yesterday supplied the following note on the weather:—

He was Councillor of Embassy in Berlin and in Paris before the war, and in 1917 became Diplomatic Agent in Salonika. Later he was British Minister at Copenhagen and The Hague, and Ambassador in Brussels. He was 67.

RAIN AND SUN IN BRITAIN

Palace Garden Party Off

London, July 21.

Britain experienced curious samples of weather yesterday. Two places 50 miles apart had the wettest and sunniest days for the whole country. Lowestoft had the heaviest rainfall and Margate enjoyed eleven hours sunshine.

There was a good deal of rain in London and the Royal garden party at Buckingham Palace had to be cancelled. Several hundreds of guests had already arrived when court officials inspected the ground and decided that it was unfit for the party.

Two of the most disappointed people were the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret. They stood at an upper window watching the rain tumbling down.

There was little improvement in the weather today.

The King and Queen dined last night with the Duke and Duchess of Kent in Belgrave Square. Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Yugoslavia were also present.

Their Majesties today paid a surprise visit to the Exhibition of Royal and Historical Treasures at 145 Piccadilly, their home for many years as Duke and Duchess of York. The exhibition has been organised by Princess Alice in aid of schools for crippled children.

Naval Building

Moscow, July 21.

The Commissar for ship building has stated that Russia aims at equalling the leading Naval Powers in numbers and tonnage of warships launched. The present Russian submarines he said equal the world's best, and the battleships and cruisers to be launched in a programme up to 1942 would be the fastest and best armed in the world.

There is now a concentration of Russian warships in Far Eastern waters.

It was announced in Paris today that France has ordered eight new warships—two 8,000-ton cruisers and six 800-ton submarines. —(Reuter).

Mr. F. Darvell, (Liberal)	[illegible]

M.P. and Soil Erosion

London, July 19.

Dr. Pole-Evans' recent report on soil erosion in Kenya was mentioned in a Parliamentary question yesterday:—

Mr. Sandys (C., Norwood) asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he had studied the recent report of Dr. Pole-Evans on the problems of soil erosion and the regeneration of grasslands in Kenya; and whether any action would be taken on the lines recommended in the report?

Mr. M. MacDonald: I have seen the report to which my hon. Friend refers, and I am now awaiting the recommendations on it of the Government of Kenya.

The reason given by Guardsman Reginald Frank Thorne, aged 21, for being absent from the 1st Battalion Grenadier Guards was that he was "genuinely frightened at having to wear a tunic and bearskin."

Today's Royal Air Force Display

BIGGER AND BETTER THAN EVER

Today's Air Display on the Nairobi Aerodrome by No. 223 (Bomber) Squadron, the third annual event of the kind, will be an even bigger and more comprehensive one than its predecessors, each of which has been an outstanding success.

In addition to the Royal Air Force, the Fleet Air Arm and the Rhodesian Air Unit will take part, the former with Vickers Walrus amphibia craft and the latter with Hawker Hart and Audax planes.

As well as the flying events, there will be the usual "static" display and all who attend are advised to give this section serious attention for while it is less spectacular, it shows in some detail how craft are kept in the air in a state of efficiency.

From a preview of the preparations for today's Air Display No. 223 (Bomber) Squadron it is evident that it is going to be a first-rate show in every way.

The guns to the Nairobi Aerodrome will be opened at 9-15 p.m. and at about 10 p.m. and this will be a much more varied number than that of last year when there were no other of the events.

In addition to the Squadron's Wellesley bombers, there will be a number of aircraft which are identical with those which took part in the flight record of over 7,000 miles, and which are a familiar feature of the Nairobi aerodrome, namely, the giveaway Vickers Vulture amphibian of the Fleet Air Arm, Royal Air Force craft may be easily recognised. They are biplane flying boats which are extraordinarily suited for land alightings is fitted and might be appropriately termed the "Bellowing Bull" or the "Bull Nosed Marlane" for they are equally at home on the sea, in the air or on land. They differ from all other craft in being "pusher" types, that is, the engines are mounted in front of the fuselage. Those who have never heard one will not mistake them as, due to the short stub exhausts, the noise of the engines is unlike that of any machines all the cabin in all the dropper' planes in the world being of a different type.

The Hawker Hart and Audax biplanes of the Rhodesian Air Unit will be two seaplanes of a small, single bay, braced cantilever type. They are undoubtedly very fast and will strike an answering chord among all who take a real interest in this type of work. They are powered with Rolls-Royce Kestrel engines and the Hart is fitted as a dive bomber, the Audax being used for the display of aerobatics, which promises to be something quite out of the ordinary.

So much for the aircraft; now for the flying events. Both Audax and Hart will take part, and here it should be pointed out that when the R.A.F. are "on" the Rhodesian Unit will be "off" and vice versa.

1-45 p.m.—Not more 10 hours and 15.45.

Air Drill

Air drill by means of inter-craft wireless telephony, with Wellesley bombers, the R.A.F. unit then, all the Service routine formations will be carried out, and the Wellesley will wave Guards on parade, the latter giving his orders by radio telephony to the pilots of the aircraft and broadcast to the public address apparatus. After this the display will be over, which will carry on for about 15 minutes.

Aerial event—3-35 to 3-45 p.m.

An aerobatics by a Hawker Hart and Rhodesian Air Unit which should keep everyone on tip-toe as the Hart, in addition to a speed test can give points to the young man on the flying trapeze.

Dive Bombing

At 3-45, the Hawker Audax craft will pick up and drop messages from a height and shortly after, will dive bomb a target of elongated shape and the accuracy with which this manoeuvre can be made, tried with scattered ground posts will be noted under the observation of the pilot, so whose gear has got a bad touch of the atmospherics, or not.

Event No. 6

Event No. 6 begins at 4-00 p.m. and immediately will be seen two aircraft demonstrating their landing and take off, in which their speed and the way in which they handle their landing gear problems, experience foremost. One aircraft will also do part of this event and another will overtake it and, showing the very best of speed, will strike an answering chord among all who take a real interest in this type of work. They are powered with Rolls-Royce Kestrel engines and the Hart is fitted as a dive bomber, the Audax being used for the display of aerobatics, which promises to be something quite out of the ordinary.

AMERICA'S WIMBLEDON TRIUMPH

British Hopes Dashed Again

This year's Wimbledon, the results of which have already been published, was the second successive occasion on which American swept the board and won all five championships.

So far as the men's singles and doubles, and the mixed doubles are concerned, the United States has now scored three successive victories.

It was notable, too, owing to the absence of Mrs. Moody and the fact that Donald Budge is now a professional, that only in the case of the women's doubles were the holders defending and they won for a second year.

Miss Alice Marble, too, in winning her first singles title, completed the hat-trick as she was also on the winning side in the women's and mixed doubles. It is a very long time since this was last accomplished, the last women player to do so being Mlle. Lenglen, in 1925.

The saddest, the opposite to that, the defeat of H. W. Austin. Competing in his thirteenth championship, he was seeded No. 1 and was the strong favourite, but it was evident that lack of practice was at the root of his failure and he seemed destined to go down in lawn tennis history as the greatest player who never won a championship. His fall was a sorry one, as he lost to F. T. Cooke 6/3, 6/4, 9/7 and at one disastrous period lost ten games in a row. His length was good and his powerful fluency of stroke seemed, for once, to have deserted him. Time and again his returns were barely more than half pace and he missed service returns. He appeared to lack mobility. He attributed his defeat to "inconvenience and not lack of confidence."

Riggs' Victory

The final of the men's singles enabled Robert L. Riggs to add another to his string of victories over F. T. Cooke and to win a World's championship at his first appearance there. G. L. Peterson, the Australian, and Wilmer Allison Tilden and Ellsworth Vines of America, are the only other players to have earned this honour.

Cooke took the first and the third sets, but Riggs rarely severed control and the match lacked sparkle and fire, many of the long rallies being wearisome. It was fluency and perfection of stroke, rather than speed and power which won the championship for Riggs and he is to be hailed content to many champions in this respect. The crowd at the final was one of the smallest for many years.

In the women's singles, Miss Kay Stammers raised British hopes by a magnificent victory over Mrs. S. P. Fabyan, after having beaten Miss Jacobs. It was a very hard match in which Miss Stammers fought better than ever before. She was particularly tense and although it seemed at one point as though Mrs. Fabyan collapsed with fear, a perfect length for most of the match.

Miss Alice Marble reminded one of Miss Lenglen at her best when disposing of Frl. Sperling at Denmark in 20 minutes, without the loss of a game. She was irresistable and never gave her opponent any time in which to settle down.

Invincible Miss Marble

In the final, Miss Alice Marble beat Miss Kay Stammers in 30 minutes. She played a magnificent all-court game of exceptional severity and accuracy, in every department, serving, ground shots, drops, volleys and smashes. she was strike perfect and attacked throughout, never giving her opponent a moment's respite in which to settle down. No one save the incomparable Suzanne Lenglen has ever shown an exhibition of such completely judges considered that Miss Marble would have taken any.

Puga Murder

The appeal of Ujenge s/o Njoki, convicted of the murder of Puga s/o Mwiruki, a native detective at the Kisumu Prison, during one of a series of great cruelty and savagery on an entirely innocent woman, was dismissed by the Court of Appeal sitting at Mombasa this week.

Mr. Justice Sheridan was quoted that the deceased woman had 10 distinct wounds, inflicted with a panga, on the head and hands, and that the deceased was found lying in a pool of blood in the house. The evidence showed that the appellant had had a great deal of trouble with the deceased woman, who had been accustomed to other natives, in connection with the sale of native beer. Other witnesses was the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Sheridan and Mr. Justice Thirkle. The latter said that the deceased had changed the accused's money for him and that the accused had refused to have a further dealing with him. The deceased had then reported the matter to the police, who arrested the accused, who was although she was in a dying condition.

The appeal which came before the Chief Justice of Kenya, Danvers, and Justices Sheridan and Thirkle, was dismissed at such conclusion.

"Will Fight To Keep Flag"

ULSTER AND PARTITION

[* STANDARD CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 21.

Speaking at an Orange demonstration at Hanger, County Down, on the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne Lord Craigavon, Premier of Ulster attacked Mr. De Valera for his efforts to end the "mutilation" of Ireland.

Mr. De Valera, he declared, had "invaded" the sovereignty of Northern Ireland in the Dublin Senate a few months ago on the "vague and unfounded that the whole of Ireland was the national territory of the Irish Free State nation." Anyone who had read Irish history, Lord Craigavon asserted, knew that there was no such thing as the "historic Irish nation." Ireland, he said, could only be called the "historic Irish nation" as Eire, if it were united and that was not such a state. There never was at any time in the history of Ireland a nation in existence of a whole people imbued with common ideals and loyalties.

Stamped Flat

Mr. De Valera, among other assertions repugnant to the very soul of Ulster, had declared that the people of Eire by the Union Jack. He had shouted the right of appeal to Privy Council, he had refused to recognise the King's representative, he had abolished oath, and he had established an archaic tribal language for the Irish. Ulster, Lord Craigavon said, all it stamped flat the war cry, and die or Ulster's Ulster. While there was breath left in them they would fight to maintain the Union. Ulster would maintain the Union. Ulster would not be slaves. That was their answer to Mr. De Valera.

Mr. De Valera had said that he was but a pacifist, and that if he did see a "war of aggression" coming he would "resist," as he put it, "by all means at my disposal." Those words, Lord Craigavon said, South Down, South Armagh, South Down, South Armagh, and Derry City from their graves to attest to Ulster's loyalty. Ulster was suffering at the present time from the "pacifist" and "resist" specter, more especially when Ulster's interests were concerned, and he could assure Mr. De Valera that they were ready prepared to "resist" any aggression. That was their answer to Mr. De Valera was "Ready, oh Ready!"

"R.A.F."

The Government was also aware of the possibility that if war came Ulster would be bombed by the air forces and their home front, which meant that Ulster would not only be A.R.P., but to "R.A.F." The Government had its plans ready, and the Ulster Defence Force, which was already in existence, and whose numbers would be substantially increased—doubled, if necessary.

Nairobi Beat Navy XI

The Royal Navy were a much improved side on yesterday's Soccer match at Nairobi, and were unlucky to lose by the odd goal in five.

The Nairobi scored for the Navy, who led by 1-0 at half-time, with a goal by Mann after 15 minutes play.

After the interval, Mann equalled for Nairobi after good work by Hall and Mann, and Nairobi scored the winning goal a few minutes later from a pass by Nicholson near in.

A NAVAL OCCASION

The Mayor Entertains

The sherry party given by the Mayor of Nairobi, Gladys, Lady Delamere, on Wednesday evening in the Town Hall as a reception for the officers and ratings of the Gloucester and the Manchester who are visiting Nairobi, was an entirely new venture and an unmitigated success.

It was held in the galleries at the head of the great staircase, and they had been most attractively decorated with massed flowers and ferns by the Parks Superintendent, Mr. Mountford, and by "Plants." It was an extremely gay and friendly evening and had the pleasant easy atmosphere of a private party. Len Greene's band played for dancing in the Council Chamber, and was augmented later in the evening with the ship's band from the Manchester, and the music was lively, rhythmical, "hot" and generally compelling.

The guests were received as they arrived by Lady Delamere, who looked both gracious and elegant in a long dress of lichen-green crepe with gold scroll embroidery and wearing her long gold chain of office; she was assisted by the Deputy Mayor, Councillor T. A. Wood. His Excellency the Governor arrived later in the evening with Lady Brooke-Popham, who wore a smart black dress and tiny cap of sleek black feathers with a spread-winged swallow aloft. NEXT WORLD ROVER MOOT IN KENYA?

Chief Scout's Praise For The Colony

A suggestion that the next Rover Moot should be held in Kenya was made by the Chief Scout in the address to the World Rover Moot in Scotland which he made from Nyeri and which was recorded and broadcast by the B.B.C. this week.

In the course of his address Lord Baden Powell said: "I credit you with the determination not to continue the war-like hash that we, of the older generation, have got into."

The Chief Scout's address was as follows:

What ho! Rovers.

Here I am, a million miles away from you in East Africa. So I cannot be with you in person at the Moot. But I am lucky in being enabled to butt in with my voice, to say a word of greeting to you all. (I say: Talking of voices there was a sort of sound in the air just now; could it have been your singing round your Camp Fire? Oh no, I see it was an old hyaena yowling).

I trust you will be enjoying to the full your visit to Bonnie Scotland. No doubt by now you are learning to speak Scotch, and to dance the Highland reels.

Next time however you should hold your Moot here in Kenya, so that you can realise for yourselves one of the most beautiful countries and climates in the world: and it is most Scouty too—with its backwoods and mountains full of big game of all sorts.

I am at a place called Nyeri—and there is a saying that "the nearer you are to Nyeri, the nearer you are to happiness." Excuse the quip, but it's true.

I am afraid that the dangerous state of politics in Europe will have largely reduced your numbers attending the Moot, since in every country the young men will be busy in preparing themselves for its Defence Services—and very rightly too.

Pursuit of Peace

It is really a wonderful tribute to the Scout Spirit that, in spite of critical times, so many of you have managed to come together in Scotland. It shows that, besides the duty of being prepared for demands of war, you recognise the still higher duty there is for you, of building up the assurance of peace in the world.

YOU—the coming manhood of your several countries—are giving a real contribution to this pursuit of peace by coming together as you are doing, from all countries, to make friends with one another, and mutually to strengthen your belief in your ultimate success as an Army of Peace.

Remember you are only a small detachment of that "army," which numbers not hundreds only but millions of Scouts and Old Scouts about the world, all following the same ideal.

The evil of the present times is that the leaders of some countries have a too narrow sense of patriotism; they have a selfish desire to promote the ambitions of their own country, without regard to the interests of others.

On the other hand, whatever their leaders' aims may be, the PEOPLES themselves, in every country under the sun, desire peace.

It is obvious that nations MUST work together for the common good, if there is to be prosperity and happiness for all.

In these days of easier communication, and the closer international relationships of trade and commerce it should be practicable.

You are the new generation.

I credit you with the determination not to continue the war-like hash that we, of the older generation, have got into.

So it is up to you to think over these points with a wider outlook, to see how they affect your own countries, and where YOU can come in to help.

Essential First Step

You will recognise that the first step towards peaceful co-operation between nations is that the different peoples should get to know each other better, and should practise that out-standing principle which is as important in your own individual life as it is between nations—namely, to understand, with toleration, the other fellow's point of view.

This is why I have just said that you Rovers are doing a real service towards international Good-will; you are doing it if you use the opportunity afforded by the Moot to make friends, and to get to understand the ideas and the feelings of your neighbours of other countries.

Let this be your aim during the short time you still have here together.

Differences of political views, or of religious forms, or of nationality, do not influence you here, where you meet as brother men—Brothers in Scouting, and Brothers as sons of the One Father—all following the same aim of doing all we can to help to bring Good-will and God's Peace into the world, in place of selfish bickering and war.

Stick to it. Carry back this idea to your own country, and spread it among your fellow Scouts there.

Will you do this?

May God Bless your effort.

Moot's Message

Lord Baden Powell has received from the Deputy Chief Scout, Lord Somers, the following message sent from the Moot:

There are three thousand five hundred of us Rover Scouts from forty two different countries here at Monzie Castle at the start of the third World Rover Moot.

We miss your cheery and inspiring presence, but want you to know that we are not going to let that hinder us from getting to know each other as well as we jolly well can.

As the elder children in your great Scout family we promise that we will keep our family traditions always before us and continue to maintain the standards of Scouting at high level.

SOMERS.

26 Years in E. Africa

POLICE OFFICER'S RETIREMENT

A well-known officer of the Kenya Police, Captain G. Pritchard Brown, left Nairobi for England this week on retirement after a long period of service in East Africa.

Captain Pritchard Brown has had an interesting career. He first came to East Africa in 1912, and at the outbreak of war was attached as a subaltern to "C" Company of the 1st Battalion The King's African Rifles, at Gazi on the Coast. He was then transferred to the Police Service Battalion which was formed in November 1914, and served with that battalion on the first Turkana Expedition on the Kagera River, Uganda, against the German Forces, and in the Northern Frontier District after the seek of Berseli. In 1918 he was on Civil Police duty.

In 1922 he was promoted to the rank of Superintendent, and was selected as Staff Officer, Police-from 1926 until 1931, promoted to the rank of Assistant Commissioner of Police in 1931, being made Deputy Commissioner of Police in 1936. He has acted as Commissioner of Police three occasions.

Captain Pritchard Brown's honours included in addition to the three Great War medals, the African General Service Medal, the Silver Jubilee Medal (1935), the King's Police Medal (1930), and the Coronation Medal (1937). In 1934 he was appointed an Officer of the Venerable Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

THE PERFECT A.R.P. LARDER

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

The housewife who wants to be sure at least one week's food for an emergency can now do it scientifically.

This is what the British Medical Association advises to provide the necessary energy foods and vitamins for a household comprising a man and wife and three children (or four adults) at a cost of about £2.5s.

Tinned foods (quantities all in lbs.):—Corned beef, 2; salmon, 4; sardines (or herrings), 4; milk, whole condensed, sweetened, 2; milk, whole dried, 3, or evaporated, 7½; black treacle, 1; golden syrup, 1; tomatoes, 6; tomato puree, 2; and carrots, 3.

Other Foods:—Sugar, 4; chocolate, plain eating, 1; cocoa, 1; raisins, 1; prunes, 1; apricots, dried, 1; raisins, 1; rice, 2; cornflour, 1; haricot beans, 1; dried green peas, 1; lentils, 1; oatmeal, 2; plain biscuits, 5; drip-ping, 1½; lard, 1; white flour, 14; bacon, 1; eggs, 1 dozen; tea, ½; salt, 1; cream of tartar, 1; baking soda, ½; and dried onions, 1 packet.

Alternative items: Lamb tongues, 24 oz., tin; black currants, 2 lb. tin; and spinach, 151 oz. net tin. Tinned lamb tongues can be substituted for some of the corned beef, 2 lb. of tongue equalling 11 lb. of beef.

Said quantities, of course, serve two adults.

"If you can buy all the foods listed, and have room for storage, you can therefore make no better choice," it is stated.

Among the foods that can be stored in tins indefinitely — for a year or longer — are: Canned lamb tongues, salmon, sardines, herrings, whole condensed sweetened milk, evaporated milk, dried milk, cocoa, chocolate and tomato puree.

Prevents "Monotony"

Simple recipes for one meal are given for the first day or two, plain biscuits, chocolate, raisins, corned beef, sardines and dried lemonades give ample choice without cooking.

Tomatoes, it is pointed out, are essential both because of their vitamin content and also because of their useful flavouring qualities in an otherwise rather monotonous fare.

Glass-stored foods have been avoided because glass is breakable and tin is not.

Lion Park In Britain

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

Mr. Stanley Turpin, of Lan Palms, Sleepy Hollow, Sandhill Meadows, Shepperton, is determined to breed lions at his 12-acre estate on the edge of the Thames.

He told a reporter that next September the first batch of fifty lions will arrive from Africa in charge of his friend, a ranger in the Kruger National Park, who is with him in this venture.

Pupils of a girls' school facing the entrance to the drive to Lan Palms will presently mount it a great day when the lions arrive.

Mr. Turpin loves lions. He has been on a long visit to Africa and finds the city fit as a result.

Streams abound in the low-lying grounds, and Mr. Turpin proposes also to import a few little alligators of the non-maneating variety.

Residents in Enraged

They voiced strenuous objection. They are of converting the hollow of the jungle into their rural quiet. Some residents almost roared like the lions.

But Mr. Turpin is determined. He is not disturbed by a debate of the Sunbury Urban Council which reads:

The Clerk submitted a letter from Mr. S. Turpin asking if the Council approved of this property being used for the purpose of breeding lions. The committee recommended that the proposal does not meet with the approval of the Council.

Mr. Turpin, who is former member of the Council, and of the Middlesex County Council, said: "I wrote to them only as a matter of courtesy. They cannot stop me, as far as I can see, for I have obtained Home Office consent.

"The twelve acres was distilled land, scheduled under the Town Planning Act. It is suggested that it is liable to flooding.

"I don't think that. In any case, I have raised the level of the road by twelve inches and as you see, I am building a bungalow for myself.

Commercial Purpose

"I shall feed the lions on live impala or small deer, for lions "love to kill their own food. I shall import a herd of the impala.

"I am breeding lions for commercial purposes. It is not my idea to open a Zoo. I'd possibly open an odd evening for friends who care to walk among the lions they can do so.

"In the Kruger Park I have walked within a few feet of many lions. Lions do not molest human beings if they have definitely eaten. I have been on my estate. My lions will be safe and 20 feet high."

In the afternoon a bogey mixed foursomes competition on the Stableford points scoring system was played and was won by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Armstrong with ?? points. Irish Open Golf Championship

London, July 21.

The Irish Open Golf Championship, played at Newcastle, County Down, was won by Arthur Lees, of Yorkshire, with rounds of 69-72-74-72, giving him an aggregate of 287.

Reginald Whitcombe, the 1938 British Open Champion, was second with 76-69-72-72: 289 and A. D. Locke of South Africa, the holder, was third with rounds of 73-74-72-72, an aggregate of 291. Richard Burton (Sale), the Open Champion, was not competing.—(Reuter).

THE KENYA CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP

The final of the Kenya Chess Championship takes place this (Saturday) evening at the Railway Indian Institute between G. S. Davidson, the Nairobi Club and Kenya European Champion, and Amar Nath, Kenya Indian Champion.

This is the first appearance of Amar Nath in the final, but G. S. Davidson won the European Championship in 1937 and then went on to win the Kenya Championship by defeating N. N. Kashyap by two games to one.

Tonight's match, which is the best of three games, should produce some very interesting chess as both finalists are playing well this year and were unbeaten in their respective competitions.

NAIROBI MINIATURE RIFLE CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP

A. Orchardson again won the 1939 Nairobi Miniature Rifle Club Small Bore Championship (25 yards) with a score of 396 x 400. After re-gauging the targets it proved that Orchardson won by 4 to 3 points on gauging with the .25 gauge.

The runner-up was H. J. Condon with the same score as Orchardson. This was the closest result so far. Other scores returned by the following competitors show that shooting has considerably improved. The total average over the 60 targets shot by the 15 competitors give 96.916 x 100, proof enough of the high standard of shooting. Here are all the scores:

H. J. Condon: 396 x 400 (396) 2
D. I. Ker: 395: 3

ANGLO-JAPANESE TENSION RELAXED

Agreed Basis For Tientsin Talks

The tension between Britain and Japan has been relaxed by the announcement during the week-end on an agreement regarding the questions forming the background of the Tientsin situation.

The Japanese Prime Minister told Press representatives that the agreement would serve as a favourable factor in disposing of the China incident.

Mr. Chamberlain is expected to make a statement in the House of Commons today.

Tokyo, July 23.

The British Ambassador had another talk with the Japanese Foreign Minister on Friday about the basis of the negotiations on the subject of Tientsin. They were together for two hours after which a Japanese communique said that some progress had been made.

The Japanese Cabinet met on Saturday and endorsed the draft principles agreed upon at Friday's interview.

According to Japanese sources the main lines of this reported agreement were that Britain should recognise that war conditions prevail in China though there would be no question of asking for or granting belligerent rights. It is also reported to have been decided that Britain might give an undertaking to see that peace and order are maintained in the British Concession and that it is not made a centre for anti-Japanese plottings by the Chinese. It is added, however, that Britain would insist on maintaining her full sovereignty in the Concession.

Official Statement

There was a further meeting yesterday between the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie and the Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita. Later the Japanese Foreign Office issued the following statement:—

"Agreement has been reached on general questions forming the background of the situation in Tientsin. Statements regarding this will be issued in Tokyo and London on Monday."

The meeting between Sir Robert Craigie and Mr Arita took place after the Japanese Cabinet had met and endorsed the draft agreement which was reported to have been reached at Friday's meeting between the Ambassador and the Foreign Minister.

Afterwards the Japanese Prime Minister Baron Hiranuma told newspaper representatives that the Anglo-Japanese conference had passed its crisis with the settlement of general questions forming the background of the Tientsin situation.

The Prime Minister added that British rights in China would be respected only if Britain recognised the relations of inter-dependence between Japan, China and Manchukuo.

Blow to Chungking?

He expressed the opinion that Britain would not assist Chiang Kaishek's regime.

The basic arrangement established between Japan and Britain would prove a big shock for the Chungking Government and would serve as a favourable factor for disposing of the whole China incident.

In London it is expected that Mr Chamberlain will make a statement in the House of Commons on Monday after he has received a report from the Ambassador.

U. S. And Tientsin

In Washington on Friday the Secretary of State, Mr Cordell Hull said that Great Britain and the United States had been exchanging information on the broad aspects of the Tientsin dispute. He made it clear, however, that there was no question of American participation in the Tokyo talks.

A Chinese dispatch from Chungking says that Japanese landed on Thursday at Swabue, a port 65 miles N. E. of Hong Kong. It is stated that the town was shelled and bombed before the landing.

The instability of the Chinese dollar continues. On Friday it fell from 4½d. to 4d. which was a new low record but closed at 4¼d.

Shanghai Shooting

A Shanghai message says that three Chinese gunmen entered the International Settlement at Shanghai from the Japanese controlled area. In a fight with Settlement police two of the gunmen were killed and the third was seriously wounded.

Another report from Shanghai says that an American bar owner named Wilson has died in hospital from injuries received in a shooting affray in the International Settlement. The trouble started when a band of terrorists attacked the office of a Chinese newspaper sympathetic to Marshal Chiang Kaishek. Two Chinese were also killed and three constables wounded.

The Japanese sponsored Mayor of Peiping has issued a warning that British people should take care in walking about the streets. He urges an extension of the anti-British campaign and advises non-British foreigners to use their national flags thus making Britons more conspicuous.

The anti-British movement has not been very successful so far in Peiping.—(Reuter).

Britain is Not Decadent

London, July 23.

The Lord Privy Seal said yesterday that the British Government was demonstrating to the world and ourselves that we are not by any means a decadent race and can today, if called upon to do so, make a far better effort than at any time in history. Physically and in spirit we were far better prepared than last autumn. —(Reuter).

AIR DAY TRAGEDY

Two Killed At Nairobi

A dual fatality, when a Wellesley aircraft of "A" Flight, No. 223 (Bomber) Squadron, broke in the air and crashed in front of the enclosure, marred the R.A.F. Display on the Nairobi Aerodrome on Saturday.

The craft, together with another Wellesley, had just completed a demonstration fly past and the two 'planes were diving at high speed towards the enclosures. As they pulled out of the 230 m.p.h. dive, the port wing of the one piloted by Lieut. F. C. Camp, with Cpl. D. C. Smith as passenger, broke some ten feet from the root and detached itself.

The machine dropped on to its port side, immediately burst into flames and skidded for 500 yards, coming to rest some 30 yards from the line of cars to the east side of the enclosure. The Pegasus radial engine, weighing over 1,000 lbs., was torn from its mountings and cartwheeled towards the crowd, cleared the first row of cars and spectators and eventually came to rest against one in the second row, driving the radiator backwards and also shifting the car engine in its frame. None of the spectators was injured.

Burst into Flames

The entire tragedy occurred with startling suddenness. As the wing broke and the craft crashed, it simultaneously burst into flames and great clouds of dense black smoke drifted upward, components and parts littered the ground for many yards around and the grass was fired over a large area. Within a minute the graceful monoplane was a charred mass of twisted metal. Mercifully, both occupants must have been killed instantaneously. The fire engine and personnel were on the spot within seconds, but their task was hopeless as it was impossible to approach within yards of the flaming wreckage.

Cause of Accident

It is thought the accident might have been due to the pilot pulling out of the dive too quickly, causing the craft to break while still in the air and some 30 feet above the ground but until the court of enquiry has reached its finding, no definite reason for the tragedy can be given.

Lieut. F. C. Camp was seconded from the South African Air Force for duty with No. 223 Squadron, exchanging places with Flight-Lieut. Frost, who by a tragic coincidence met his death in an air crash some months ago at Mossel Bay. Lieut. Camp was to have returned to the Union of South Africa at the end of this month.

He was attached to the Squadron for six months, arriving from Roberts Heights on January 18, 1939, and should have returned to the Union on August 1. He was extremely popular among his brother officers and was a good hockey player and a member of the R.A.F. Squadron Rugby football XV.

Cpl. D. J. Smith was 24 years of age and came from Fosdyke, Boston, Lincolnshire. He joined the Squadron from No. 211 Squadron, Ismailia, Egypt, on April 2 this year and was Corporal i/c Squadron Orderly Room. Keen and efficient, he was popular with his comrades and was also a good athlete having played hockey for the R.A.F., Middle East, and Rugby football in Kenya for the R.A.F. XV.

The funeral took place at the Forest Cemetery, Nairobi, yesterday afternoon and was preceded by a Memorial Service at the Cathedral of the Highlands.

Flying Boat Record

Reactions To German Statement On Danzig

POLAND WILL RESIST INCORPORATION IN ANY FORM

London, July 23.

Full prominence is given in the press to an observation of a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman, that while Germany now, as previously, insisted on the unconditional return of Danzig to the Reich, Herr Hitler and the German Government were not of the opinion that the problem was one which could be solved by war. On the contrary, they felt that it was one which was capable of a solution by negotiations, and that such a solution would, in fact, be reached.

Congress of Peace?

The declaration of the German spokesman has been received with general interest in London, says Reuter's Diplomatic Correspondent. He says there seems to be no reason to doubt the claim that the German Government wants the September Party Congress at Nuremberg to be a Congress of peace.

Nevertheless it is pointed out in London that the British Government has already clearly stated its standpoint.

Press Comment

The Daily Telegraph in a leading article says, it is too soon to assess the significance of the statement.

The newspaper proceeds: "It is not easy to understand how the two views expressed by the spokesmen are regarded by the German Government as mutually reconciled. If Germany does not want or expect war over Danzig, no one else has any reason to want or expect war either. But it is she, and she alone, who has made of Danzig a problem threatening the peace of Europe, a problem which Herr Hitler declared in February of last year to be non-existent.

The reasons for yesterday's statement in Berlin remain obscure. If it means that Germany has decided to initiate a slackening of the tension and it is she alone who can take the initiative—then well and good. But on that, the rest of the world await the event."

The Times in its examination of the statement draws attention to the fact that the declaration shows that Germany is going ahead to get Danzig uncompromisingly and unconditionally.

Poland's View

Commenting on the Berlin statement with regard to a peaceful solution of the Danzig problem a Polish communique declares "In whatever form Germany might attempt to reincorporate Danzig in the Reich it would be regarded as a clear violation of the present political status and would call for appropriate action".

A Polish Foreign Office spokesman on Friday night repeated that if Germany tried to annex Danzig Poland would resist. He said that all suggestions of changing the existing status came from the other side and not from Warsaw and peaceful appeals should therefore be directed by German politicians to their own Government and not to the Polish Government.

Protest

Poland has protested to the Danzig Senate about the shooting on Thursday of a Polish Customs official by a Nazi. On Friday the Polish police arrested the chief of the Danzig Customs House who is alleged to have crossed the frontier illegally. A uniformed Danziger was also arrested in Poland and is being charged with espionage.

It is also reported that the Danzig authorities have arrested a former Polish Parliamentary candidate and a railwayman. (Reuter).

Fantastic Rumours

OF BRITISH LOAN TO GERMANY

London, July 23.

Several London newspapers give currency to rumours that during his visit to London for the International Whaling Conference, Herr Wahltat, the German Minister for Economics, engaged in conversations with British Ministers and others, during which a disarmament plan, coupled with a gigantic loan to Germany for assisting in converting her national effort from war production to peaceful commercial aims, was discussed.

There is no truth in these rumours, which are described in official quarters as fantastic.

During his visit, Herr Wahltat had conversations with certain officials and others, but only routine matters were discussed.

Berlin Statement

A statement in Berlin referring to the report of a loan from Britain to Germany says there is no truth in the suggestion.

The report says the statement was connected with the recent visit to London of Dr. Wahltat of the German Ministry of Economics. Dr. Wahltat returned to Berlin on Friday after talks in London. These discussions were concerned with questions before the Whaling Conference and the Evian Refugees Committee and as a result of them a far reaching agreement of views is understood to have been reached.

As regards the report of a ninety millions pound loan to Germany, the statement says that Dr. Wahltat's mission was in no way concerned with such a matter. (Reuter).

TRADE BOOM KILLED BY SENATE?

Washington, July 22.

President Roosevelt told his Press Conference on Friday that the Senate's decision to defer action on the neutrality legislation had killed the moderate business boom which the United States was enjoying and had had a very bad effect on trade.

He said that business men were uncertain as they did not know what form the neutrality legislation might take. They hesitated to place orders or to accept them between now and the next session of Congress in January in view of the uncertainty of the international situation.

So far as he was concerned the controversy was closed until the reassembly of Congress at the beginning of next year.

He did not intend to call a special session to deal with the neutrality law unless there was a serious crisis from which it seemed that there must be war.—(Reuter).

Army Of Doctors For War Time

London, July 22.

The Ministry of Health announces details of a scheme for a National Hospital Medical Service which would function at a moment's notice in the event of war and would be administered directly by Government.

Doctors will be recruited for this scheme and allocated to their war time positions. They will be liable to serve for three years in an emergency.

When a doctor leaves his practice in time of war to take up full time work in the casualty service, arrangements will be made so that his practice will be temporarily carried on by other doctors. (Reuter).

London Docks Blackout

TESTING NEW A. R. P. SYSTEM

London, July 23.

A black-out of the ordinary lighting system of the whole London dock area will be held tonight to test a new system which it is claimed would be invisible to invading aeroplanes. All ordinary lighting will be extinguished or hidden and ships will continue to load or unload by means of the new lighting.

There is to be a series of tests of the balloon barrage system in the London area. The first test will be next Friday and they will continue until August 5 while there will be two others between August and October.

The balloons will be flown in large numbers day and night and will cover a great circle round London.

The first large-scale motor cycle manoeuvres for the Territorial Army are to be held in the next few days. The men concerned are going to camp at Burleigh in the New Forest where they will undergo a fortnight's intensive training. There will be 43 motor solo cycles and 90 with sidecars. Instructions will be received by wireless and vehicles equipped with wireless will act as a control point.—(Reuter).

Praise For Polish Army

Warsaw, July 23.

The official newspaper of the Polish Army publishes an interview with General Sir Edmund Ironside, the Inspector General of British Forces Overseas who returned to London by air on Friday.

In the interview General Ironside said his visit reminded him of the time when he commanded Polish detachments in North Russia in 1919. "I was not mistaken in my expectations as to what I would see in Poland and I would like to congratulate the Polish Army and its leaders on its excellent training and organisation."—(Reuter).

TANGANYIKA CALL FOR UNION OF E. A. TERRITORIES

Governor General And One Legislature

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

Iringa, Saturday.

Delegates from all parts of Tanganyika attending the first Tanganyika Convention under the chairmanship of Major John Dew, M.L.C., passed unanimously a resolution calling for the early union under the British Crown of the East African territories.

The Conference proceeded to draw up draft proposals for an act of complete union under a Governor General with a single Legislative Assembly.

The proposals also include provisions for electoral reform, the reorganisation of provincial administration, finance and railways.

Obligations

In connexion with the project for the Union of the East African Territories there is a stipulation that no step should be taken which is repugnant to existing treaties, obligations or the rights and privileges of Asiatic, African and other communities throughout the territories, all of which must be safeguarded.

It was resolved to form a British Association of Tanganyika to implement the resolutions of the Convention and to uphold the rights, interests and aspirations of all in Tanganyika with British sympathies.

Millions For Poland

FROM BRITAIN AND FRANCE

London, July 22.

It is hoped in London that negotiations for financial assistance to Poland may be concluded soon. The proposals are understood to include a British credit of eight million pounds mainly for the purchase of arms in Britain and also a cash loan of about five millions.

The French Government is also intending to give Poland a loan of about three million pounds.

The chief difficulty which the negotiators have had to face concerns the use of these moneys for Polish purchases in other countries. (Reuter).

Feeling DULL and LOGY?

WHY DON'T YOU TAKE Sal Hepatica?

Chances are your logy feeling is due to a combination of wastes in the system and process acidity.

Almost always these two conditions go together, each aggravating the effect of the other. To get complete relief, both must be corrected.

That is why you should take Sal Hepatica. Quickly, gently, thoroughly its double action:

1. Cleanses the System.
2. Combats Acidity.

You soon feel better when you take two teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water!

Take SAL HEPATICA, the mineral salt laxative that also combats acidity.

These Stories Made News

(From the London Correspondent of the "East African Standard")

London.

At a meeting of the Imperial Social Hygiene Congress in London it was said that four of the ten clearing banks had regulations which fixed the marriage age at 25 or 26; in one of the Big Five banks the average age of marriage for male clerks was 27. An Inspector for one of the Big Five said that men "went wrong" in that bank at the rate of one a week throughout the year; in nine out of 10 cases the cause was the demand of a wife and family on the insufficient means of the clerk.

Great Britain is plastered with, in huge letters, the Slogan "We must be Prepared." It is even attached to the Nelson Column and to Waterloo Bridge.

Mr. Vernon Bartlett the publicist M.P. has put down the following question on the papers of the House:

To ask the Lord Privy Seal, whether, in order to remove the effect on the public mind of the depressing slogan: "We must be prepared," he will arrange to substitute for it the slogan "We are prepared," in view of the satisfactory state of our present rearmament.

As a matter of fact—we are.

From the beginning of this year until the week ended July 1, 370 men were killed and 1,534 injured in coal mines in Britain compared with 486 killed and 1,637 injured in the corresponding period of last year. This is an average death-toll of more than two men a day, including Sundays.

Just when he believed that his ten years' dream had come true—the production of the world's safest 'plane—the inventor and his test pilot were killed when the aeroplane crashed on its final tests at Bicester, Oxfordshire. The cause of the crash is not known, but the inventor had evolved one final safety idea just before the 'plane was ready for the air. It was fitted in time for the tests, and it is believed that this new secret fitting may have gone wrong. It is hoped that the invention will still be perfected. The inventor was Mr. Percival Nesbit Willoughby, managing director of the Willoughby Delta Company, London. He was aged about forty, and lived at Filsham Road, St. Leonards-on-Sea. His pilot was Mr. Hugh N. Olley, of Dolcoed Coyslyn, Carmarthenshire. The machine, St. Francis, was described as an all-wing aeroplane. The novel design was kite-shaped, and there were two side-wings connecting the front wing span to an elevator tail-plane.

Unhurt—But Leg Smashed

"You have smashed his leg to smithereens, but it's all right. He is not hurt." This message was received by Percy Lockwood, of North Road, Exeter, following an accident. It was alleged that Lockwood cut in between a car and a motor-cyclist and that his car collided with the right leg of Frederick Meardon, of Chudleigh, who was riding pillion. Meardon's leg was artificial. It cost Lockwood £3 in fines, costs, and three months' suspension of licence at Newton Abbot Police Court.

The old summer house in Buckingham Palace garden, which has now made way for a bigger and more modern one, was an experiment in direct labour, in which King George V was greatly interested. It had its origin in a conversation between the King and a member of the Victoria Club, a working man's institution. It was claimed that direct labour was as economical as contract. "Well," said the King, "build me a summer house by direct labour." Expert artisans did the work, but it was not quite the economic proposition claimed. Nevertheless the King said he derived much interest from it and "the fellows were extremely sincere over the job."

Euston station master's office was stormed by about 40 members of the Unemployed Workers' Movement who were demanding work. A spokesman was told that there were no vacancies, and he insisted on speaking against the setting up of an Unemployment Assistance Board centre in Kentish Town. When the demonstrators refused to leave, Acting Superintendent Skinner and Inspector Brice, with a squad of 13 policemen rushed the demonstrators out of the station-master's office. As the police vans were driving off the men in them continued to shout "We want work." Later 22 men were remanded on bail at Clerkenwell charged with trespassing on railway property and refusing to leave.

Playing in a deserted house near his home, a boy found a bundle of £1 notes, 131 in all, in the lining of an old arm chair. This was a few hours after the tenant, Mrs. Flood, had vacated the house, telling the neighbours, "You can have the furniture." Mrs. Flood, who is aged seventy, has lived in the house for thirty years. Her husband died last year. The boy, Derek Cassidy, aged ten, of Haford Street, Liverpool, whose mother is a flower-seller, said he was playing in the house and came across the old chair. He could see something peeping through the lining, and discovered it was a bundle of notes. A neighbour took him to the police station. It was discovered that many of the notes were brown Bradburys.

Blamed Girl Friend

"I was influenced by my young lady friend", said a motorist summoned at Acton for driving while disqualified.

"If you had a young lady with you who wanted to go home, and if you had missed the last bus, what would you do?"

Magistrate: Now you're asking questions! If I had a young lady who lived some distance away I should not have her in a public house on the Great West-road and miss the last bus. And don't ask any more questions—or the answers may not be forthcoming.

5 years of GASTRIC ULCERS
"Now I can eat anything"

Only those who have suffered the agony and dread that gastric ulcers bring can appreciate the joy of release from this all-too-common malady. Even slight stomach disorders arising from acidity and poisonous accumulation, if neglected, may soon lead to serious trouble needing drastic treatment. It is better to take Miss R. L.'s advice early.

"Afraid to have a good meal"

"I must write and thank you for your wonderful Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. For five years I have suffered from Gastric Ulcers, and your powder is the only thing that gives me relief. Before I used Maclean Brand Stomach Powder I was afraid to have a good meal, but now I can eat anything. I recommend it to all stomach sufferers."

Murder Over Matches

A drunken brawl over the ownership of a box of matches led to murder and the conviction and sentencing to death of Kamanja s/o Kamau whose appeal was dismissed by the Court of Appeal sitting at Mombasa last week.

The brawl took place on Mr. W. Street's farm at Thomson's Falls in February last when a Native, Kimotho s/o Kenze received a fatal abdominal wound inflicted with a long knife.

Dismissing the appeal the Chief Justices of Kenya, Zanzibar and Uganda, upheld the conviction adding: Although we are not prepared to differ from the finding of the learned judge we think it right to mention that the deceased man was the aggressor and in this connexion we would refer to the opinions of the assessors. Evidence is also to the effect that all the parties were very drunk.

Fatal Arrow Shot: Murder Confirmed

The strange defence that he had accidentally shot a woman with an arrow when shooting at his father was not accepted by the trial judge or the Court of Appeal which heard the appeal last week of Chebor arap Kipkero, who had been convicted of the murder of a widow and sentenced to death. The appeal which came before Sir Joseph Sheridan (C.J. Kenya) Sir Chas. Law (C.J. Zanzibar) and Mr. Justice Whitley (C.J. Uganda) was dismissed.

The woman died as the result of a wound inflicted with an arrow which one medical witness believed to have been a poisoned arrow.

It was alleged at the trial that the accused, a young man, had entered the woman's hut and according to her story committed rape. Later that night after the woman had complained to her father he again entered the hut and shot her.

One of the three assessors at the trial expressed the opinion that the accused had thought that when the woman had complained he would be put to shame and that he had then gone and got his bow and arrows.

The trial Judge, Mr. Justice Lucie Smith, had no doubt as to the guilt of accused. Before sentence of death was passed the accused pleaded that at the time he was very drunk, that he had not caught the woman, that he was shooting at his father (who had cut him on the forehead) when he accidentally shot the woman.

A MESSAGE FROM "B.P."

The Chief Scout's Outlook

From his quiet home at Nyeri in Kenya, where the peaceful surroundings, the spacious outlook and the invigorating climate of the Highlands have together restored health of body and mind, the Chief Scout, The Rt. Hon. Lord Baden Powell of Gilwell, sent last week a characteristic message to the Rover Moot in far-away Scotland. From his new-found affection for Kenya as a part of the Africa which he loves, the Chief Scout went out of his way to say kindly and encouraging things about the Colony whose people are so delighted to have him amongst them. His talk to the Rovers was arranged by the East Africa Publicity Association with the co-operation of Messrs. Cable and Wireless and the Post Office and it was a triumph of the use to which modern methods of communication can be put in the Africa of today. Lord Baden Powell suggested that the next Moot should be held in Kenya, so that from this "Scouty" country, with all its beauty of Nature, its fine tradition of British colonisation, and the inspiring and satisfying freedom of its life, these young men of many countries might, in this fitting setting of the Continent of the Twentieth Century, send out another message of Peace and Goodwill. It is a gracious vision and we hope that from this suggestion by the Chief Scout Kenya may have the honour of welcoming the Rovers on a not too distant future date. The Colony should take his hint to heart and, with his enthusiasm and co-operation, bring successfully to pass something that is as dear to his heart as it would be to the people of the Colony.

It was indeed a remarkable fact that despite the troubles of these times, and the calls made in the name of patriotism upon the young men of so many countries, lads from forty-two nations should have been able to meet together in the quiet loveliness of Perthshire, renew their friendship through a common cause, and give a distracted world the faith to believe and hope that in meetings such as this, and through the organisation of youth, the new generation might somehow avoid making the "hash" of life and happiness which is threatening us all today. Four thousand young men took to historic Scotland, where liberal thought has flourished on the foundation of dearly-bought freedom, the flags of their own countries, their languages and their varying outlooks on life and its responsibilities.

It is still happily apparent that patriotism and international brotherhood can be linked and cemented together if there is a common factor and ideal, and nothing has done more to prove that than the wonderful movement which Lord Baden Powell began over thirty years ago, a movement which it is significant to remember has not only survived one world war but has grown in strength and clarity of purpose through all the difficult years of peace that have followed. It is the contribution of one man who has grown old in the cause of patriotism, a magnificent legacy from a past generation to the future, a movement instinct with toleration and human understanding in the cause of brotherhood and unselfish service without distinction of race or creed or religious or political belief.

That these young African Territories, filled as they are with hope and faith in a better world, going forward with the very spirit of youth itself rising from the embers of the old bad Africa of intolerance and misery and darkness of soul, should play a part in this uplifting movement is, as it should be, a natural and inescapable responsibility. There is in the very principles of our Trusteeship something of the fine things which have emerged from the Scout movement and, back in Africa where the seed of the great Scout ideal first germinated in the mind of the creator of the world-wide organisation, the movement might well draw upon new reserves of strength and inspiration.

A Congo Holiday

Three well-known South African personalities are at present enjoying a quiet holiday in the Eastern Congo. They are General Smuts, Colonel Deneys Reitz and Sir Ernest Oppenheimer the famous diamond magnate and chairman of the Anglo-American Diamond Corporation.

Induction Service

Within a short time of his arrival in Nairobi by the mail train yesterday, the Rev. R. A. Howieson was inducted as Minister of St. Andrew's Church of Scotland. The Church was crowded for the occasion a report of which will appear later.

Nairobi Christian Fellowship

The United Fellowship Meeting will be held tonight, at 6 o'clock, in the Hall of St. Andrew's Church, when the Speaker will be Mr. Gibb, from South Africa, and a duet will be rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Leaman, from America.

Railway Congratulated

At its monthly meeting on Friday, Nairobi Chamber of Commerce, on the suggestion of the Chairman, resolved that a letter of appreciation be sent to the Railway Administration for the staging of the Exhibition which opened on Friday. "They are to be congratulated on their efforts to get the public acquainted with rolling stock and the general working of the Railway," said Mr. Ruben. The Secretary read a letter extending a cordial invitation to members of the Chamber to visit the Exhibition.

FREAK WEATHER IN BRITAIN

Cloudbursts And Sunshine

London, July 22.

On Friday there were violent thunderstorms and torrential rain over almost the whole of England and parts of Scotland and Wales as well. Many buildings were struck by lightning in various places including London and there were cloudbursts at Glasgow, Salisbury, and Teignmouth.

At Teignmouth there were nearly three inches of rain and at Shrewsbury two and a half inches. In these and many other towns the streets were flooded to a depth of over a foot.

In a village near Yeovil two streams rose several feet and the inhabitants of a number of cottages had to take refuge in their bedrooms upstairs and were rescued by ladders.

Among the worst sufferers were the Territorials in camp. Many of them last night had to sleep in buildings because the camping grounds were waterlogged.

Curiously enough while these conditions affected most of Britain, Folkestone and Dover enjoyed 13 hours of sunshine.

At Weymouth the weather cleared up in time for the King and Queen to join the Royal Yacht in which they are spending the weekend at Dartmouth.—(Reuter).

Thetis Disappointment

London, July 22.

The Thetis was raised on Friday but unfortunately the salvage gear was unable to bear the strain and the vessel is once more lying at the bottom of Liverpool Bay.

After careful preparations the attempt to raise the Thetis was made on Friday and she was brought up to a position underneath one of the salvage ships after several wire ropes had been passed round the submarine.

It is thought that the accident occurred as attempts were being made to move the vessel towards the shore.

A later message says that contrary to earlier reports that the Thetis had been raised it was authoritatively stated at Liverpool on Saturday night that efforts to raise her had failed.—(Reuter).

The Weather

The British East African Meteorological Service yesterday supplied the following note on the weather:—

The principal falls of rain reported this morning were Equator 1.5", Rumuruti 1.6", Eldoret 1.5", Timboroa 1.2", and Mbale 1.0".

Thundery rain or showers will continue over the Kenya Highlands and over Uganda, mainly in the afternoon or evening. In all other areas weather will be fine.

Town Council

The ordinary monthly meeting of the Nairobi Municipal Council will be held tomorrow in the Council Chamber, Town Hall, at 2-15 p.m.

Lorry v Van

A motor lorry loaded with sand collided with a delivery van belonging to Taylor's Breweries. The collision occurred outside Dr. Sorabjee's Dispensary in Racecourse Road. Both vehicles turned over but no one was seriously injured.

On Leave

Among the passengers on Saturday's train to the Coast were His Majesty's Trade Commissioner, Mr. A. E. Pollard and Mrs. Pollard, who are sailing for England on the Dunbar Castle. Mr. Pollard is returning to England for the normal period of leave and will also undertake an official tour of the provinces and spend some time on duty at the Department of Overseas Trade in London. He expects to be away from the Colony for probably 10 months and during his absence the duties of His Majesty's Trade Commissioner in East Africa will be performed, as on previous occasions, by the Deputy Trade Commissioner, Mr. D. Broad.

Associated Chambers

It was decided at Friday evening's meeting of the Nairobi Chamber of Commerce that the President of the Chamber (Mr. E. Ruben) and the Vice-President (Mr. Mallett) should be the Chamber's delegates at the forthcoming session of the Associated Chambers of Commerce in addition to the Chamber's Executive Member, Mr. T. A. Wood. Mr. Geo. A. Tyson will attend in his position as Hon. Treasurer of the Association, Major Cavendish-Bentinck as the representative on the Executive of Eldoret and Mr. H. F. Bargman as Executive member for Kitale. The session is being held at Mombasa on August 21 and following days. Friday's meeting approved the recommendation of its Management Committee that H. M. Trade Commissioner, the Commissioner for the Union of South Africa and a nominee of the Elected Members Organisation should be nominated to be honorary Members of the Association.

INSANITARY POLICE LINES

What in the modern town of Nairobi has for long been an eyesore, the police lines in Government Road, was commented upon at a recent meeting of the Public Health Committee of the Nairobi Municipal Council.

The Committee had before them a memorandum by the Medical Officer of Health on the unsatisfactory condition of the lines and resolved:

"That this Committee deplore the absence of any reference to the insanitary condition of these premises in the report of Dr. Martin (appointed to report on the public health activities of the Council) and that representations be made to Government as to the urgent necessity of making these premises habitable; that the attention of Government be directed to the fact that the premises in their present condition not only contravene many of the Municipal By-laws, but are not fit for human habitation, and that having regard to the pressure brought to bear upon the Municipal Council as the Public Health Authority for Nairobi, to cause to be demolished premises which contravened the Insanitary Dwellings By-laws, Government be requested to comply with the requirements of these By-laws, and to make provision in the Colony's Estimates for 1940 for providing sanitary quarters for the police."

3 Air Accidents: 7 Deaths

London, July 22.

Three accidents involving the death of seven airmen occurred in Britain on Friday.

In one case two machines collided over Kent and both pilots and the passengers were killed. One pilot was a member of the Oxford University Air Squadron.

The other accidents were in Yorkshire and in both cases R.A.F. bombers were involved.—(Reuter).

President Carmona's Tour

Lourenco Marques, July 22.

President Carmona of Portugal who is at present making a tour of Portuguese East Africa, yesterday placed a bronze wreath on the memorial here. Afterwards he took the salute at a march-past of Portuguese and Native troops.—Reuter.

BROADCASTS TO S. AFRICA

British and German

London.

The B.B.C.'s new broadcasts in Afrikaans to South Africa, started in May, are apparently meeting with severe competition from Germany. Just before the service began the German broadcasts to the Union were extended and are now a daily feature, whereas the British transmissions take place once a week.

According to information received at Broadcasting House there is criticism of the B.B.C. on the grounds that it allowed the Germans to take and maintain the lead and that its service is inadequate. It is also alleged that reception in the Union from Zeesen is superior to that from Daventry, although it is not contended that the latter is ineffective. On this point the B.B.C.'s view is that Zeesen concentrates on particular areas by means of the beam system and thus ensures strong transmission there, while Daventry aims at more complete coverage. From certain parts of South Africa the reports are of excellent reception, so that on the whole the B.B.C. is satisfied, and, in any case, it can do little to improve matters.

It may also be pointed out that if the German broadcasts are received well they often succeed in creating feelings of [illegible] resentment. Recently Zeesen sent out a description of riots in Capetown as "a spontaneous demonstration by all African Negroes against the English Government". Stories of "atrocities" in Palestine and of attacks on General Smuts have also aroused strong protests. On the other hand, the impartiality and restraint of the British broadcasts are generally praised.

As for the B.B.C.'s daily broadcasts to Germany in German, the information obtainable emphasises that they are being heard on a large scale and are having a valuable effect.

THE ROYAL AIR FORCE DISPLAY

Rhodesians And The Navy Take Part

Saturday's third annual Display by No. 223 (Bomber) Squadron, Royal Air Force, was by far the best which has been given so far in Nairobi, and was marred only by the tragic accident to Pilot Officer F. C. Camp and Cpl. J. C. Smith lost their lives

The entire display was completed with remarkable efficiency and conformed rigidly to the pre-arranged time schedule.

Two of its notable features were the very close, clockling turns, showed by some of the exhibition of perfect control of engines, navigation instruments and other equipment, and the smooth and efficient manner in which the Rhodesian Air Force carried out its part of the programme. This unit is a comparatively new branch of the flying service, but already it has attained a proficiency which compares favorably with that of older established squadrons, and its visit to Kenya is most welcome one.

The Royal Navy, too, did their part in a particularly well-arranged programme of events.

There was an even greater number of spectators than on the previous days, and all phases of the display excited interest and admiration.

Air Drill

Flying began promptly at 3-0 p.m. when a flight of five Wellesley aircraft carried out an effective drill performance from the leader to the remaining craft, by radio telebeing relayed and broadcast to the public.

Flying from east to west and return, the flight passed over the town in eight "V" changed in echelon from left to right and back again, then "V" and inverted formation, finishing with a three-abreast formation. Many of the machines were carrying parachutists who supply parachutes were dropp-

The next item was aerobatics in Hawker Hart biplanes by Flight Lieutenant Nicholetts and Flying Officer Uttl. Gaining height, he dived and executed a "roller" a "loop" and a "stall turn," then climbed vertically to a hundred feet or more, especially slow until the engine stalled and the machine fell on its tail. Following the manoeuvres with a half-roll to normal flying position. Other aerobatic items were carried out with remarkable smoothness and precision. Inverted flying, looping turns, half rolls to left and right, upward rolls, a full roll and half roll off the top of a loop, and a final roll off the top, and a terminal velocity dive over the enclosure and a steep climb turn past the hangars brought the leading.

Meanwhile, the three Hawker Audax aircraft of the Rhodesian Air Unit had taken off and had flown over the town in formation, passing in messages from cards suspended from the aircraft. The observer demonstrated the loading and retracting of the message dropping apparatus, operated, finishing with a contrasting demonstration of the high speed low level run past the enclosure at between 90-70 m.p.h. and the climb at 140 m.p.h. to 200 m.p.h. or more. Both finished with a power dive past the enclosure that almost split the R.R.C. Hall. Camp and his passenger met with their fatal crash.

Tradition

True to Service tradition, other aircraft were quickly in the air for the display of the various types of aircraft—the Hawkers, Hartbees and Audaxes, Vickers Wallys and Valentias of the Fleet Air Arm and Valentia took part. Both machines were up to accompany the Valencia, which put on a thrilling and perfectly timed display of supply and supply carrier operation. The whole display was done, and extremely quiet in operation.

Then followed the set piece of Bofors being attacked by three Wellesleys. One was beaten off by machine-gun fire, another escorted, while puffs, most realistically arranged, round the attackers. Two machines were silenced, the third dropped their bombs and completed returned to their base.

Fleet Air Arm's Display

The last item was a display of Fleet Air Arm aeroplanes. Fleet Air Arm, in addition to its normal fighting duties, carries out many of the operations of the Army co-operation squadrons of the Royal Air Force, and the display was a very good one of "stop and go" flying. Lieut. Bates, R.N., flew rather like an aerial version of the kittens at play. Then the six aircraft, with the exception of those with the engine not well aware, flew in formation and gave them a remarkable gliding angle. While the formation were still in the air, their sleep power dives and prodigious rate of climbing to make

DRESSES AT SEASON'S LAST COURT

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 14.

The fifth and last Court of the season was held at Buckingham Palace last night. It is several years since a fifth Court was held, and there is still to be a presentation Court in November when will rank as presentation at Court, in Winter.

The King wore the full-dress uniform of Colonel-in-Chief of the Coldstream Guards. The Queen, faithful to the graceful mode which she has restored to favour, had chosen a crinoline gown of white tulle. The skirt was fashioned in three tiers of gossamer frills and sequined, and the bodice was embroidered with gold paillettes. Gold sequins were embroidered on the long white tulle train which was lined with silver. The beautiful gown was worn with a tiara, necklace and bracelets of diamonds and rubies.

In the Royal circle were the Duchess of Kent, Princess Alice Duchess of Gloucester and Princess Marie Louise. The string band of the Irish Guards played during the ceremony.

Pastel Tones and Soft Materials

Among the dresses, pastel tones and soft materials were much in evidence. Of the debutantes presented, debutantes had chosen picture dresses. Many of the dresses displayed in the Blair rooms, or about about in the corridors and on the staircase, at the presentation made an attractive picture.

Crinoline revived. So did fairy-like tulle dresses with skirts as bouffant as those of a ballet dancer. Many were embroidered with tiny diamante paillettes. Tight little bodices were frequently seen, and although the skirts were of great length, the skirts worn by some of the younger generation were cut in the manner known to the shorter.

Soft white satin, devoid of any thing in the way of trimming, was chosen by a number of mothers for their daughters' dresses. The train, long generally, was cut square, or round, and a simple row of pearls or rich lace embroidered with pearls, the effect was extremely becoming.

Many girls were accompanied by a score of chaperones. Sometimes the train worn with it was of a different colour. Sometimes it was of the same tone, velvet being used with a chiffon dress and tulle with one of brocade.

The Countess of Westmorland, presenting her eldest daughter, Lady Anne Fane, wore a dress of white, a gown of white and silver brocade, with restrained embroidery and a train of white satin lined with pink. Lady Sarah Baillie had on the dress of white satin picture frocks. Her train was of soft silk net, also lined but bordered with a deep iridescent sequins.

Lady Milford was in turquoise blue satin, which considered effective by with threads of equimarine blue and green and pearls in the other pattern. An unusual train was made of thick net embroidered with pearls. Lady Hawke had chosen a rich blue romaine satin, lined with white satin, and embroidered with gold, picking up the rich moth of a train of white satin, lined with gold. Lady Ursula Aldrey's dress was of wild rose pink satin, with a train of white satin, rose-shaped ornament of embroidered diamante, brilliants and pearls, which fastened the train, which had a foundation of lame in gold and silver.

Dress Lined with Feathers

Lady Corry, who presented her daughter, wore lame of a soft shade of white satin, with embroidered shoulder straps of diamante threads. Miss Cory wore a white tulle picture frock on top in the third round and had Williams been less tough he would have taken the round from a series of hard right crosses to the chin. When Williams did attack, Parry's another was effective and he won by a comfortable margin.

Ord/S. Gilson ("H.O.") vs. A/B. Sear ("Glos.")

This was a sterling bantamweight bout in which Sear won by a very narrow margin. It was Gilson's second appearance and Sear fought the fight in the first round, when there were some hard, two-handed exchanges to hand and body. Gilson was receiver general to an aggressive fighter, but near the end fought back hard and used his left more. Sear being forced to come up with Gilson wasting some good punches on his opponent's gloves. The second was a very even round with both mixing it freely and Gilson using his left better than very well at times, but was a bad puncher and recovered well. Gilson forced matters and again Sear had to retaliate but towards the end rallied up and landed a good left and right to Gilson's body. The third round was Gilson's by a whisker and it looking as though his greater weight must turn the scales. It was a fight of hard mill with both exchanging stiff punches to head and body with both hands. Sear landed some nicely judged lefts and rights to the head and Sear was again forced to give ground, but made a great rally near the end to earn what must have been a very narrow points verdict.

Marine Ralph vs. W. Miller (Kenya)

Miller won this light-heavyweight bout on points. He was the only boxer during the evening to exploit the orthodox straight left, as opposed to swings and hooks and he forced the fight to his opponent most of the time. He landed a series of crisp, straight lefts and finished with a hard right to the jaw, but Ralph fought back and laid the foundation for his later stages when he made Miller miss. The Kenya man, however, took the round despite a dog advantage in reach. Miller again started in the second and his punching was more accurate and incisive. Ralph's swings were often poorly timed, but he landed two good lefts. Miller came back with a left and right which sent his opponent's head back and again earned the round. Both missed it at the beginning of the bout, but Miller's timing was the better and he had most of his opponent's blows on his person. Ralph was forced to come in to close quarters and Miller's left uppercut proved very effective. Ralph's left and right to the body were also good punches and Miller was forced to fall back on his left uppercut punches and was a good deal the better.

Sisal Bags

ENCOURAGING REPORT FROM AMERICA

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—I was extremely surprised to read in your valuable paper under District Notes from Thika on July 14 the following statement:—

"While on the subject of Sisal, the Coffee Board has pronounced in favour of the 2 lb. Jute bag for Coffee export, since it is understood that the present sisal bag does not stand up to the methods employed in loading and unloading".

Apparently your correspondent has sent you these notes without taking the trouble to find out facts —in any case no other conclusion can be arrived at as far as the above statement is concerned. People who are genuinely interested in the Juja factory's manufactures know that there is no foundation at all for what your Correspondent has stated about "the present sisal bag", but as the statement may cause a certain amount of harm, if not contradicted, I shall be glad if you will publish this letter.

1. The Coffee Board is not yet in a position to recommend the exclusive use of bags manufactured from sisal hemp for the current season's crop. Early in the season there was some uncertainty regarding the availability of sufficient supplies of sisal bags to meet the full requirement of the coffee industry and it has not been possible for the Coffee Board to complete all tests and enquiries with Trade interests which the Board considers are essential before it can make final recommendations. With this end in view, further intensive tests will be carried out during the current season to enable the Coffee Board to recommend the exclusive use of sisal bags in future years. During the current season the standard packing for Kenya coffee will be the 2 lb. jute bags of 187 lbs. capacity, but the Coffee Board wishes to encourage the use of sisal bags of 187 lbs. capacity for trial shipments.

(The above was contained in a Press Notice appearing in the "East African Standard" on June 8).

2. As to the uncertainty regarding the availability of sufficient supplies of sisal bags for the current season, I should like to state that the only reason for this was that the factory has been engaged on a large Government contract, and could not guarantee to supply the full requirements of the coffee industry this season.

3. Your correspondent's statement that the present sisal bag does not stand up to the methods employed in loading and unloading has no foundation whatsoever. The enclosed copy of a letter, which the manufacturers have received from their agents giving a report on a consignment of coffee to U.S.A. packed in single 60 kg. sisal bags, should be a lesson to your correspondent with regard to the inadvisability of "talking through his (or her) hat," when making statements about a new Kenya industry whose reputation could easily be damaged by misleading statements before their manufactures have proved themselves in actual use.

I shall regard it a favour if you will publish the report from our agents, so that the statement made by your correspondent can be contradicted, not merely by my words, but also by actual facts.

Yours etc.,
For and on behalf

Messrs. Sisal Products (E. Africa) Ltd., P. O. Ruiru.

Dear Sirs,—We beg to refer to Mr. A. F. M. Criag's letter to Mr. Bursell dated the 21st June, and to confirm that the second shipment of 50-bags of Kenya coffees was duly shipped per the s.s. "West Isleta" which sailed hence on the 1st inst. A statement of disbursements and charges is at present in course of compilation, and will be sent to you as soon as possible, but in the meantime we have to advise that samples drawn before shipment from Mombasa have been posted to you under separate cover. Samples were also drawn before the coffee left Nairobi, and these will be despatched to you by our Nairobi Office.

"WEST CAWTHON SHIPMENT"— We quote below an extract from a letter received from our New York Agents reporting on the out-turn of this shipment:—

"The 50-bags Kenya packed in this way are just in and the result of the dock inspection is as follows:

General condition.—Very good.

Tears or strain of fabric.—None.

Signs of stretching in such a way as would cause leakage of contents— None.

Condition of Marking.—Very good, plain, not blurred.

Bags show slight dock stain, but appearance very satisfactory.

The Receiving Clerk on the Dock commented on the fine condition of the bags and Hard & Rand's man, who was on the Dock at the time inspecting and sampling one of their purchases, also said he had never seen a lot of coffee from anywhere arrive in better condition."

This Report is very satisfactory indeed, and we are arranging for it to be circulated to all interested parties in the Coffee Trade.

Yours very truly,
The African Mercantile Co. Ltd.
Deputy General Manager.

REFUGEES AND SETTLEMENT

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—I have read the letter dated July 6 which you published in your last weekly edition over the signature of Atma Singh.

It is absurd to suggest that lots of the refugees that are forced to go in search of a home are spies. Is your correspondent so well informed of this fact, so as openly to insult most of the poor refugees who lost not only their wealth but their business and homes? And was it really necessary for him to add this humiliation to their bitter sorrow and despair?

It is not in a spirit of sympathy nor to draw the attention of the local Authorities to the number of spies (sic) entering the Colony, but to impress upon Government and others his plea of help to Indians and Asiatics for land etc. If your correspondent doubts the refugees' fitness to live in Kenya or elsewhere, can he assure us that all the Indians who came to Kenya, and continue to come by every available boat, were and are so fit and capable, for him to criticize the qualifications of those refugees who, by force of circumstances, are compelled to go anywhere and earn a living.

I am not a refugee myself nor wish your correspondent to become one, but deprecate such unjust and ridiculous stories.

I enclose my card and remain, Sir,

Yours, etc.,
FAIRPLAY.

ASTRONOMICAL QUERIES

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—I was very surprised that Mr. C. R. Spiers after quoting the most recent information about the Sun should refer to Mary Proctor's book "The Wonders of the Sky" as an authority on Mars. I have an idea that her book was published in the late 19th century, and the more recent technical journals tell us quite definitely that the atmosphere on Mars is inadequate to support any form of animal life as we know it.

I should also like to know from what source "Ecliptic" derives the information that there is no ice on the moon, as G. Fauth the eminent Lunar specialist has always held the opinion that only a layer of ice would account for all the phenomena of Lunar Topography, in particular that of the ability to reflect the sun's rays, which agrees entirely with that of a sheet of ice. I am not contradicting "Ecliptic's" statement as the last authoritive book on this subject I read was Fauth's in 1928 and perhaps further research has brought to light fresh information.

I wonder, seeing the interest that has been aroused if an Amateur Astronomy Society could be formed, to discuss such matters more fully. Will all interested communicate with me at Box 1545, Nairobi?

Yours, etc.,
A. S. CORDEN.

ATHI RIVER ROAD DRIFT

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—I read in your esteemed paper of the misfortunes of the Hon. S. H. Fazan, Provincial Commissioner, Nyanza, while attempting to cross the concrete drift near Muhoroni. The article in question describes how the native who accompanied him lost his life, and how Mr. Fazan's car was swept away by the currents. It may surprise you and your readers to hear that such a concrete drift exists on the Athi-Machakos road about four miles from Nairobi House. When the river is in spate, a frequent occurence, the drift becomes absolutely impassable and all traffic is held up. I have seen endless cars (including my own) held up for hours waiting until the attempt might be made with reasonable prospects of getting across. On these occasions drivers say to themselves, "Well, I think I can now get across". Mr. Fazan is reported by you to have thought he could just get across the concrete drift.

I have had a talk with the head of the P.W.D. over this matter, but he told me that there is no money available for throwing a moderately safe bridge across. I consider that it is gross negligence on the part of Government not providing funds for this very important crossing. It undoubtedly endangers the lives of persons using this road (a main trunk road). As things are, drivers of cars are just left to decide for themselves when they can cross. It is possible that some day some one will miscalculate and there will be a repetition of the catastrophe described by you. There should be a special allocation of funds and this drift should be made safe; there can be no two opinions on the point.

Incidentally, I might mention that this drift is used by many 'buses packed with native passengers travelling between Nairobi and Machakos. One day one of these 'buses will be swept downstream, the decision as to when to cross being entirely left to the descretion of native drivers anxious to get to their destination. Therefore, it behoves Government to guard against anything of this sort happening.

I might mention that the Nairobi Municipality are also responsible for this drift and the safety of persons crossing it when the river is in spate. The responsibility is shared equally by the P.W.D.

I trust the authorities will move in this matter and move at once, before anyone is killed. Time is a vital factor in this case. The authorities are incurring a very grave risk indeed, particularly when the matter has been brought to their notice and a timely warning given.

Yours etc.,
G. R. MACDOWELL.

THE CHURCH IN KENYA

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—In 1919 the Archbishops of Canterbury and York opened a fund for Western Canada. It was definitely stated that the fund would be closed at the end of ten years, and it was so closed. In the ten years 136 men were sent out, and £180,000 subscribed. The object was that these missioners should establish work which would continue when they left. They began by purchasing sites, and building churches; 166 sites were acquired and 70 churches built.

In 1934 I went to Canada and made a long and very careful enquiry into the result of this work. I found that where the missioner had really settled and had remained as priest of one congregation, and his place supplied on his death, or retirement, there the work still continued; but that where the missioner had tried to serve a large district and had several churches in his care, it was not so. I was strongly advised not to attempt to discover the 166 sites: I was told that it would be impossible. Of the 70 churches built, more than half were derelict or lost. In one diocese, for instance, out of 42 mentioned in the synod journal, 28 did not appear in the Church Year Book.

Has that history no lesson for us here in Kenya? In the last Kenya Church Review, we are told of four Chaplaincies vacant. In your issue of today July 21 we are told of a proposal to build a church "to serve the growing Ngong-Karen-Langata-Mbagathi district".

Stone walls do not make a Church, but a congregation with its own proper ministers and its own proper Rites. A building without that Established Body is a vain show. We appeal for clergy to England, but England cannot supply its own dioceses adequately. We have here already more church buildings than we can serve.

To begin by trying to get money to build when we have no clergy to serve regularly and permanently is fatal. If one man goes, or falls ill, the whole breaks down. And to begin by collecting money is to enforce the horrible truth that Mammon is the Master of the Church. That is alas! today only too plainly the truth: it ought to be a manifest lie. But it will only be a manifest lie when we establish Churches regardless of money or buildings, and leave money and buildings to follow, as they may. A bishop at his consecration swears no oath to build churches; he does swear that he will faithfully ordain, to the edification of the Church.

Yours etc.,
ROLAND ALLEN.

RAIN RUINS FIRST DAY OF TEST

Weather Stops Play In Many County Matches

London, July 22.

Rain ruined the first day of the second Test between the M.C.C. and the West Indies, at Old Trafford, Manchester, and the Lancashire centre more than lived up to its reputation for moisture.

Conditions early in the morning were unsettled and the wicket was drying very slowly after Friday's cloudburst. The start was delayed and an inspection of the wicket at noon decided the Captains to postpone play until after luncheon. Mr R. S. Grant had won the toss—Hammond's long run of luck with the coin having deserted him this season—and put England in to bat.

It had begun to rain heavily before a start could be made and the innings began at 2-15 p.m. and lasted for just over half an hour when a steady drizzle caused a forty minute stoppage.

The innings was resumed about 3-30 p.m., but only seven balls were bowled before further persistent rain put a stop to play, England having made 11/0 wickets.

The crowd refused to give up hope until the last and the attendance of 11,000 was remarkable, in the circumstances.

The scores were:—

ENGLAND

Hutton, not out	6
Fagg, not out	2
Extras	3
Total for Nil wickets	11

* * *

COUNTY MATCHES

County cricket fared little better than the Test in many cases. In practically every match rain seriously interfered with play and there was no play at all at Llanelly (Glamorgan vs. Warwickshire), at Sheffield (Yorkshire vs. Nottinghamshire) and practically none at Bristol (Gloucestershire vs. Sussex).

Close of play scores were:—

Derbyshire vs. Somerset
Derbyshire: 162/7 (Smith, 71).
Somerset: Did not bat, rain stopping play.

Gloucestershire vs. Sussex
Gloucestershire: 11/0, rain stopped play.
Sussex: Not yet batted.

Kent vs. Surrey
Surrey: 231 (Parker, 96. Todd, 4-45).
Kent: 18/0 at close of play.

Leicestershire vs. Hampshire
Hampshire: 193 (Pothecary, 67).
Leicestershire: 38/1, rain stopped play.

Middlesex vs. Lancashire
Middlesex: 181/3 (Robertson, 79; Edrich, 60, not out).
Lancashire: Did not bat. Rain stopped play.

Northamptonshire vs. Worcester
Northamptonshire: 258/9. Rain stopped play.
Worcestershire: not yet batted.

KEEN AND CLOSE BOUTS IN NAVAL TOURNAMENT

Kenya Win By Four Fights To Navy's Three

By "CESTUS"

Friday's Boxing Tournament between the Royal Navy, the contingent from H.M.S. "Manchester" and "Gloucester" and Kenya representatives, held at the Empire Theatre Nairobi, was a most successful one and productive of some brisk and willing bouts. There were several inter-ship fights and seven of the twelve bouts were between Naval and Kenya representatives, Kenya winning by four fights to three.

At the interval the Royal Navy led two to one. Kenya levelled matters after the interval, but the Navy again went into the lead and only in the last bout of the evening did Kenya win by the odd fight in seven.

A feature of the fights was that in general, the Naval boxers were in better physical condition than their opponents, and while, admittedly, the Kenya boxers had had comparatively little time in which to prepare, the Navy men had evidently taken their training very seriously.

The Opening Bout

The first fight of the evening was between L. A. C. Hopkins and J. Balsom, both of Kenya, at welterweights. Balsom, the stronger man and harder hitter, was too good for the airman and with a series of hard lefts and rights to head and body had his opponent, who is a "southpaw," very distressed by the end of the second round. Balsom adopted an unusual method of overcoming the difficulty that an orthodox boxer finds in meeting a "southpaw", for while he maintained an orthodox stance he did a lot of leading with the right. He gained a comfortable win on points.

A/B. Pledger vs. A. B. Parry

A/B. Pledger ("Manchester") gained a points verdict over A/B Parry ("Gloucester") in a good fight also at the welter limit. Pledger, too, was a southpaw. Parry had a good defence and a nice left counter to Pledger's hooks and uppercuts to head and body, but the latter was more aggressive and won the first round. Pledger again forced the fight in the second and while a bit wild at times, landed some telling punches and when Parry landed a good right cross, he was immediately staggered with a hard left hook. Parry did better in the last round and in addition to covering well and using the ring with effect, carried the fight to his opponent on occasion and landed several nice lefts and rights and had a shade the better of the round. Pledger, however won a close and good fight.

Ord/S. Gilson (R.N.) vs. G. Luckhurst (Kenya)

This bout, a bantamweight affair, was fast and open, Gilson winning by a fair margin. Both got quickly into action and Luckhurst was slipping and ducking effectively and landing a long left to the head. Gilson, however, forced the pace and with a nice left and right to head and body put Luckhurst down, but the Kenya man was up at once. The second round started with some hard in-fighting in which the sailor was the more effective and Luckhurst was forced to cover up against a sustained, two-handed attack. Gilson evaded a heavy right swing and countered with left and right hooks to the body and head. His punching was crisper and he took this round also. In the third, Gilson attacked furiously and, using his feet the better outmanoeuvred Luckhurst and landed hard abs to head and body. Luckhurst cleverly ducked some heavy swings and fought back gamely but after even exchanges, the sailor again launched a two-handed attack and forced his opponent to use the ring. Towards the end both landed several good lefts and Luckhurst got home a nice right to the chin, but Gilson was never in serious trouble and won a well-merited points verdict.

Boy Embleton (R.N.) vs. M. Migdoll (Kenya)

This bout at the lightweight limit was decided by condition, the Navy man lasting the better of the two and wiping out a deficit in the last round, to win a very close fight by what must have been the narrowest of margins. Migdoll was evidently the better boxer and took the first round by a wide margin, using his feet and the ring cleverly and landing a series of stiff left leads and hard right hooks to head and body, Embleton being forced to cover a lot. In the second, the sailor held his own and had the better of some heavy exchanges at short range, scoring repeatedly to the body. Migdoll was forced to cover several times, but landed some nice lefts and a series of right hooks to head and body. It was a fairly even round. Embleton forced the pace and lasted better in the third and meted out some heavy punishment. Migdoll was tiring and his timing was often faulty, while the Navy man pegged away like a terrier and took the round. He was awarded the fight, but it appeared that Migdoll had piled up a big enough lead in the first round to earn a draw.

A/B. McCleery vs. A/B. Reynolds

The first fight after the interval was an inter-ship welterweight bout, won in the first round by a knockout, by A/B. Reynolds of H.M.S. "Manchester". He kept up a sustained attack throughout the round and in a battery of lefts and rights to body and jaw he put McCleery through the ropes and when the "Gloucester" man tried to slip out of difficulty followed up and with a left jab and a sizzling right hook knocked his man out. McCleery struck his head severely on the boards as he fell and had to be carried from the ring. The arranging of this bout appeared to be ill-judged. McCleery was obviously in the novice class, while Reynolds showed, by the accuracy and crispness of his punching that he had fought on a good many occasions and completely outclassed his opponent.

A/B. Tyler (R.N.) vs. H. M. Mackenzie (Kenya)

This middleweight bout, too, finished in the first. Mackenzie was evidently intent upon making a fight of it, and the two were soon in action and exchanged a series of heavy left and right swings to the head. Mackenzie slipped to the boards, but was up at once and landed two hard rights to Tyler's chin. He forced the fight and got his man on the ropes, where he landed two more hard right swings to the jaw and Tyler, evidently considering that enough was as good as a feast, retired and the bout was awarded to Mackenzie.

Ord/S. Earley (R.N.) vs. L/A. C. Mills (Kenya)

Earley put up a very plucky show against a much more clever and harder-hitting opponent, Mills winning without being extended. Both were fast and Earley's clever ducking caused Mills to miss several times, but in general the airman outboxed and outfought his opponent throughout. A series of left and right hooks to head and body earned him the first round by a considerable margin. In the second, Earley fought back pluckily, but Mills was obviously boxing well within himself and had the measure of his man. Mills continued to outpunch his man in the last round and Earley was clearly dazed and one expected the fight to be stopped to save a very plucky loser needless punishment. Mills appeared to be easing up and was as sporting a winner as Earley was a game loser.

Boy Maidment vs. Ldg/S. Ellis (Both "Manchester")

Youth was served in this bout, the respective ages of the two being 18 and 35. Maidment exploited a good left and right, one-two punch and had the better of some brisk exchanges in the first round, in which both made a hard fight of it. [illegible] but Ellis put up a plucky fight.

A mixed foursomes Tombstone competition was played in the afternoon.

The President's Prize At Muthaiga G. C.

There was some excellent golf in the 1939 President's Prize competition played off on the Muthaiga G.C. course on Saturday afternoon and yesterday morning, and won by F. R. Pattullo with the excellent score of 137, seven strokes under the S.S.S. for the course. He had rounds of 68 and 69, 137 net.

The runner-up was W. J. Suffield, who returned a score for the 36 holes (medal play) of 68 and 71, 139 net.

The special prizes for the best net scores over 18 holes each day were won by D. B. O'Donoghue with a 67 on Saturday. He tied with G. J. Robbins, but had the better score for the last nine. The prize for the best net score for the last 18 holes, yesterday morning, was won by R. L. Ballantyne, 69.

There were some excellent scores on both days and no less than sixteen competitors had net returns of 71 or better on Saturday, while over the whole 36 holes, in addition to the winners, there were several 140's and six returns of 141, the S.S.S. for 36 holes being 144.

The best gross score on Saturday was J. E. Higginson's 74 and this gave him a net 72, playing off a handicap of two. On Sunday morning, the best gross return was that of R. L. Ballantyne, 72. Less his handicap of three, this was sufficient to give him the prize for the best last 18 holes, 69 net.

It was a most successful and enjoyable event in which the standard of golf was consistently high.

NO CHANGE IN BRITISH POLICY TO CHINA

Points Of Agreement Reached With Tokyo Government

THE TIENTSIN PROBLEM

The statement which Mr. Chamberlain made in the House of Commons yesterday on the Tokyo negotiations over the Tientsin dispute does not connote any change in the British Government's policy towards China.

Mr. Chamberlain said His Majesty's Government had no intention of countenancing measures prejudicial to the attainment of the objects of the Japanese forces.

He denied, however, that this concession was equivalent to de facto recognition of the Japanese occupied areas in China and added that the negotiations would be confined to the Tientsin situation.

London, July 24.

Mr. Chamberlain made a statement in the House of Commons yesterday about the Tokyo negotiations. He explained that in order to clear the way for discussions on Tientsin the British Government had agreed on the following formula with the Japanese Government:

The British Government fully recognise the situation in China where hostilities on a large scale are in progress.

They note that as long as such a state of affairs continues the Japanese forces in China have special requirements to safeguard their own security and maintain public order in the regions they control.

The British Government also note that the Japanese forces have to suppress any acts or remove any causes which would be either to obstruct them or benefit their enemies.

The British Government has no intention of countenancing any acts or measures which would prejudice the attainment of any of these objects by the Japanese forces.

The British Government therefore confirm their policy in this respect by making it plain to British authorities and nationals in China that they should refrain from such acts and measures.

Reply To Questions

Mr. Chamberlain then answered a number of supplementary questions the main points in his replies being:

1. The declaration does not mean any change in British policy towards China. Neither does it mean that we have taken sides with Japan against China.
2. The discussions in Tokyo will be confined to local issues at Tientsin.
3. They do not constitute de facto recognition of Japanese sovereignty in areas of China now under Chinese control.
4. Nothing will be agreed during the negotiations in Tientsin which would impair Chinese currency or the right of Great Britain to grant credits to China for any purpose.

Tokyo Talks

The first plenary session of the Conference between the British and Japanese delegates at Tokyo on the Tientsin dispute opened this morning. The principals are Sir Robert Craigie the British Ambassador in Tokyo, and Mr Arita the Japanese Foreign Minister. Several high officials of the Japanese army are attending and the British Military Attache at the Tokyo Embassy is also present.

The morning meeting lasted for two and a half hours and the talk was resumed late in the afternoon.

An official communique issued after the afternoon meeting states that a general discussion took place on matters relating to the maintenance and security of public order in Tientsin. A committee of four was appointed to clarify a number of points. This will meet tomorrow and report back before a further meeting of the full conference takes place.

So far there has been no official comment on the subject apart from the Japanese Foreign Office statement which was published on Saturday, and the only comments are from Japanese newspaper sources which must be treated with reserve.

These newspaper reports said yesterday that Great Britain has agreed to recognise the right of the Japanese Army to maintain order in the regions it occupies in China, and that Britain has agreed also not to encourage any activities which would hamper Japanese Army [illegible] —Reuter.

Fleeing From Spain

Madrid, July 24.

It is reported that General Queipo de Llano who was recently deprived of his post as Commander of the military district of Andalusia by General Franco is attempting to flee from Spain and is making his way to the French frontier.

His present whereabouts are however unknown.

During the civil war General de Llano became well known because of his frequent and vigorous broadcasts, and it is now learned that in a recent broadcast speech at Seville on the occasion of the anniversary of the Franco rising he expressed his belief that there would be anarchy in Spain if a strong military Cabinet was not formed.

Another Spanish Nationalist commander also seems to be in disfavour. It was announced in a broadcast last night that disciplinary action will be taken against him.

The palace of the Archbishop of Toledo was destroyed by fire this morning.

SHANGHAI FIGHTING

Shanghai, July 24.

Fighting has broken out on the outskirts of Shanghai between the Japanese and a large force belonging to the Chinese Fourth Route Army.

The Chinese are said to number 3,000, and made their way unobtrusively into the Shanghai area. Fighting went on all this morning and is reported to be the biggest engagement in the Shanghai district since the Japanese captured the city two years ago.—(Reuter).

THETIS SALVAGE PLAN

Why First Effort Failed

London, July 24.

An official statement issued tonight by the salvage authorities engaged on the Thetis says that Saturday's failure to carry the submarine inshore on the first lift has been investigated.

It is established that instead of the load being distributed over the eight nine inch lifting wires secured to the salvage ship Zelo at its point there was a concentration of at least 73 per cent of the load upon two wires. This maldistribution was due to the strong tides sweeping the wires away from their allotted positions, and preventing the divers from checking the positions of the wires just previous to the lift. However, the big margin of safety provided in the strength of the wires and in the adaptation of the Zelo for the purpose of lifting the submarine resulted in this unequal load being supported without any breakage of wires, or damage to the lifting vessel. Two beams, or bearers across the deck of the Zelo which constituted the means of attachment of the wires to the vessel were however, twisted. Devices for preventing this twisting of the bearers in future are being considered.—(British Official Wireless Service).

Tokyo, July 24.

It is reported here that heavy fighting is again in progress on the Outer Mongolia-Manchukuo border.

According to these reports Soviet and Mongol troops crossed the border last night with tanks and artillery. The Japanese counter-offensive opened this morning and Japanese reports say that severe losses were inflicted on the Soviet-Mongol force.

NOT SO FANTASTIC AFTER ALL?

Suggested Huge Loan To Germany?

Although official quarters in London during the week-end described as fantastic a report published in London newspapers to the effect that there had been discussions recently between a representative of the German Government and British Ministers regarding the possibility of a huge loan to Germany in return for a German disarmament undertaking, it is now admitted that such a scheme had been talked over between the British Secretary for Overseas Trade and the German Minister of Economics.

London, July 24.

A sequel to the newspaper reports of a scheme involving a one thousand million pounds international loan to Germany in return for a German undertaking to limit armaments said to have been sponsored by highly placed people in this country, is given great prominence in the London newspapers this morning.

It is an admission by Mr. R. S. Hudson, Secretary for Overseas Trade that he discussed such a scheme with Dr. Wohltat, German Minister of Economics, in his (Mr. Hudson's) private and unofficial capacity. He denies, however, that any figure was mentioned.

Mr. Hudson's Statement

In an interview last night Mr. Hudson said "I met Herr Wohltat at his own request, conveyed to me by telephone through the German Embassy in London. I had been informed a few days previously by members of the Whaling Conference, which Herr Wohltat was attending, that a conversation between us could be useful.

"For the moment, I can state only that the reports of the conversation which took place between us are incomplete. Our discussion was quite unofficial, and I made it clear to Herr Wohltat that any suggestions I put forward were made in my personal capacity, and were in no way authorised as a statement of the Government's policy. [illegible]

He explained how Mr. Hudson came to be connected with the report of such a proposal. A representative of the German Government had been in Britain on other business and during a talk with Mr. Hudson discussion had turned on what might be done to remove barriers to trade development. From the economic aspect they had gone on to discuss the financial steps which might have to be taken to overcome initial difficulties. Mr. Hudson had emphasised that anything he said was his personal point of view.

There was no justification, said Mr. Chamberlain, for any assumption that what was said amounted to a proposal for a British loan to Germany. (Reuter).

On Saturday several London newspapers published rumours that during a recent visit to England for the International Whaling Conference, Dr. Wohltat, German Minister for Economics had talks with British Ministers and others regarding a disarmament plan which would be coupled with a gigantic loan to Germany designed to assist her in converting her national effort from war production to peaceful commercial aims. The rumours were described in official quarters as fantastic and a similar denial was issued in Berlin.

Nazis Admit Military Preparations In Danzig

The first official admission of Danzig's military preparations was made by the Nazi leader in the Free City during the week-end Herr Foerster said they no longer required help from Germany to regain their "stolen territories."

Danzig, July 24.

In Danzig the weekend passed off normally.

The only fresh incident was the arrest of 16 Polish military cadets. They are accused of crossing the Free State frontier without permission, and will probably be tried this week.

The Nazi Party Chief Herr Foerster, addressed a meeting of shipyard workers on Sunday and admitted that military preparations were being made in Danzig.

Herr Foerster said it was no longer necessary to rely on the German army for them to regain their "stolen territories" because the Danzigers were making themselves strong and were prepared for all eventualities. Other States might be arming he said but they will not overtake us in this way".

"Familiar Tactics"

London, July 24.

Under the heading of "Familiar Tactics", the Times, in a leading article says "It is clear by now that the pacific pronouncement made in Berlin on the subject of Danzig at the end of last week has hardly produced the intended effect. So far as it has had any consequence at all, it has only made the nations most closely concerned with the future of the Free City more than ever determined to remain keenly alert and closely united.

The views expressed in the pronouncement naturally commend themselves to no other nation at all. They stand indeed self condemned. For in the same official statement, the quid pro quo to be granted by Germany was said to be a long term guarantee of the Polish frontiers. Who if not Germany, is in the least likely to attack the Polish frontiers and why should the new German guarantee have any more value than the old, which was given for ten years and arbitrarily withdrawn after five.

The tin contains Andrews as sold in England for nearly 50 years. Due to its finely balanced ingredients, it is meant to effervesce slowly and should be well stirred. It is the ideal Tonic Laxative with the refreshing qualities of a saline. The tin is, therefore, recommended, but it is emphasised that the bottle is still available for those who prefer not to change.

MAKING USE OF REFUGEE DOCTORS

Needs in India and Africa

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]
London.

The following letter advocating the services of refugee doctors and surgeons in India and Africa appeared in the Manchester Guardian:—

Sir,—May I add my plea to that of the Rev. Bertrand Coggle that refugee doctors, dentists, and schoolmasters should be allowed to work in our Empire abroad, and if necessary be subsidised for the first few years? We provide every kind of educational facility and public health service for the people of Great Britain, yet millions whom we call British subjects have access to neither. We provide schools and clinics of the finest for our children, yet these children, British subjects in the outposts of Empire go uneducated and lacking in the first essentials of medical care. And yet we are so proud of our Empire!

As regards doctors, the plea is often reiterated that if they came into this country they would lower the standard of medicine. Be that as it may. We are asking merely that they should be allowed to use their knowledge and their skill to increase the mental and physical calibre of our own British subjects overseas. And if our Government were to help them financially, as would be necessary for the first few years, surely we should reap the benefit in a healthier and more cultured community of people, grateful to the country who claims them as her subjects.

Appalling Need

And what if the standard of the refugees should differ from ours—if it does? I have not noticed any great desire among our own people to go and work among the natives of India and Africa. True, the Government hospitals and colleges make their appeal, and rightly maintain a standard comparable with that in England. But I am not asking that refugee doctors and educationists should occupy the present Government posts. I am asking that they should be allowed to go, and be invited to go, and work in parts of India, Africa, and elsewhere where the need is so appalling.

As Mr. Coggle states, there are five thousand Jewish doctors, to mention these alone, fully qualified men, forbidden to practise in Germany—and at the same time in India there are millions suffering from lack of any scientific medical knowledge, while Africans die for lack of surgeons. These natives are our responsibility. If our own countrymen do not choose to go and work among them, what is to prevent us from recognising and using the willing service of foreigners?

I would urge those men and women who agree with me to write at once, in the case of doctors to the British Medical Association, and in all cases to the Prime Minister, urging them to consider the matter and to make use of this abundance of knowledge and skill which at present lies fallow and waiting to be used.—Yours etc.,

KIKUYU P. A. ASSOCIATION

Gratitude For Order in Council

The annual meeting of the Kikuyu Provincial Association was held recently at the offices of the Association at Eastleigh, Nairobi. Three hundred and forty-one male delegates and twenty-five women attended, having come from all parts of Kikuyu, including Embu and Meru.

The President of the Association, Mr. Harry Thuku, addressed the meeting on the subject of the Kenya (Native Lands) Order in Council, 1939. After a number of delegates had spoken it appeared that the meeting was pleased by two particular points in the Order in Council; firstly that by this Order the designation of Crown Lands was removed from the Native lands which became theirs, and secondly that the designation Native Reserves was similarly removed and that in future those areas were to be called Native Lands and Native Areas.

After consideration it was decided, without any dissentient vote that the thanks and gratitude of the Kikuyu Provincial Association should be sent to His Majesty the King and to his Government in the following terms:

This annual General meeting of the Kikuyu Provincial Association humbly expresses its gratitude to His Majesty and to His Majesty's Government for the words contained in Section 3 of the Kenya (Native Lands) Order in Council 1939.

And we further respectfully and humbly beg that those other lands which are still to be designated Native Reserves and Native Leasehold Areas, may also be described instead also as Native Lands, so that they may suffice us.

The resolution has been forwarded to the Chief Native Commissioner with a request that it be put before H.E. the Governor in Council and sent to the King.

After further business had been dealt with the election of Kikuyu Provincial Association Officers and Committee for the year 1939-40 took place as follows:—President Mr. Harry Thuku; Vice-President, Mr. Hezekia Mundia; Secretary Mr. Francis Wanyiri; Treasurer Mr. Ndegwa wa Maina.

All of the above were re-elected and an Executive Committee of thirty-five was also appointed.

Hauls Of Furs At Dances

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]
London.

During a party given by the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim Palace, Woodstock, near Oxford, four valuable fur capes belonging to prominent Society women vanished. Although nearly 100 policemen and detectives in evening dress were on duty, insurance assessors believe that they were stolen.

There has been a series of similar losses recently. Furs were missed after the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland's party at Sutton, and other furs have disappeared during recent big Society dances.

"DEPRAVED" BATHING COSTUMES

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]
London.

Warnings to bathers against "unbecoming and depraved costumes and behaviour" have been issued by the three archbishops in whose sees Italy's principal holiday resorts are situated.

The Patriarch of Venice and the Cardinal of Ostia (Rome's lido) urge all holiday-makers to be modest in dress and conduct, while the Cardinal Archbishop of Genoa, whose jurisdiction covers the Italian Riviera has asked parish priests to appeal to bathers of both sexes to wear more decent bathing costumes.

Requirements Of Ordinance

The Department of Agriculture, through the E.A. Standard, draws the attention of the public again to the Plant Protection Ordinance 1937 and more especially the following orders:

No plant or part of a plant shall be imported into the Colony except under the authority of a permit previously obtained from, and signed by the Director of Agriculture or an officer of the Department of Agriculture authorised by the Director of Agriculture and subject to the conditions stated in such permit.

This restriction shall not apply to seeds except those included in the Schedule as follows: Coffee (except roasted coffee beans), Cotton, Tobacco, Tea, Cacao, Coco-nuts, Groundnuts, Lucerne and Clover, Rubber, Maize, Wheat, Cloves, Peach, Barley, Buckthorn and Potatoes.

All applications for permits shall state: Full name and address of the applicant; the name and address of the person or firm from whom the plants or seeds are to be obtained; the names and quantities of the plants or seeds to be obtained; the name of the farm or estate on which the plants or seeds are to be planted and the district in which it is situated.

No plant shall be imported into the Colony except through Mombasa, Kisumu or Nairobi.

No consignment of fruit grown in countries other than Zanzibar, Tanganyika Territory and Uganda, shall be permitted to enter the Colony unless accompanied by a certificate signed by an officer of the exporting country duly authorised by the Government of that country, to the effect that a percentage (to be stated) of the packages in the consignment has been examined by him and has been found to be free from insect pests.

All plants, seed and fruit other than dried, canned or bottled fruits, imported into the Colony shall be examined by an inspector even though accompanied by an importation permit previously obtained.

No plant material of any description except seeds not included in the Schedule will be allowed to enter the Colony unless a permit has been previously obtained and subject to the conditions stated in such permit. Plant material imported without permit will be destroyed.

CHILD WELFARE AT DAR ES SALAAM

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]
Dar es Salaam.

The Child Welfare and Mothercraft Exhibition opened by Lady Dalton, attracted crowds daily. Lady Dalton was welcomed by Mr. Abdulhussein Allidina Visram and by leading members of H.H. the Aga Khan's community.

The exhibits included models of infant welfare centres and creches, samples of suitable clothing, a range of exhibits devoted to the correct diet for children, Health Office exhibits and so on, a complete guide to the careful housewife and mother.

Lady Dalton spoke in appreciation of the opportunity that all visitors had had to visit the Exhibition which they had enjoyed very much. The Exhibition must do a great deal of good. Lady Dalton recalled that she had personal knowledge of the work of the Dispensary having seen it in action and knew how its workers had won the confidence of mothers.

UGANDA COTTON

Dry June For Planting

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]
Kampala.

Cotton Report No. 1 of 1939/40, for the month of June, 1939, states that cotton tax collected from January to June amounted to £57,432.

In the Eastern Province it is estimated that 146,522 acres have been planted with the new crop as against 121,505 acres up to June 30, 1938. The need for planting additional food crops and work in connexion with locusts hindered planting. In Bugishu rainfall was plentiful and in Bugwere and Budama rather below average: in these three areas germination has been excellent. In Teso rainfall was uneven; in consequence planting was hindered and germination in a few areas was only fair. In Busoga dry weather conditions delayed planting, germination was satisfactory.

In Buganda Province the estimated total of plantings to the end of June was 196,229 acres as against 187,378 for the same period last year. It was very dry during the month particularly in Masaka and Mubende. There was, however, sufficient moisture in the soil to maintain the growth of May plantings but fresh plantings were held up. Germination was good.

Returns are incomplete for the Western Province. Dry weather conditions and the need for additional food crops delayed planting in all districts but preparation of land proceeded satisfactorily.

Summary

The Summary states:—"In all areas special efforts were made to encourage closer spacing and early planting. Planting however was hindered by dry weather conditions which were, with the exception of Bugishu, experienced everywhere and by the work that was necessary in connexion with anti-locust measures, which necessitated the planting of additional food crops. The total acreage planted by the end of June compares favourably with the figures for 1938 but is considerably below those for 1937. Preparation of land has progressed satisfactorily and it is certain that a good deal of planting will take place as soon as planting conditions become favourable. The latest weather reports show that rains have been received in all Provinces and that the situation generally has improved during July."

The total number of bales of cotton despatched from Railway Ports and Stations in Uganda to date amounts to 286,000, while some 83,000 tons of cotton seed have been exported.

IN EUROPE TODAY

Prospects for Peace

A statesman once said "There never was a good war, never a bad peace." War brings in its train devastation and misery, economic and financial instability, a disturbing even if temporary revolution of social values and sanctions, and we have had enough experience in the last twenty years to know that though the Allies won the war, they have paid and are paying heavily today for peace. There is, of course, a limit to the price which can be paid. If national prestige and security suffer irretrievably, if essential interests of national well-being are sacrificed, if as in these days peace can only be bought at the price of eventual liberty, and in exchange for honour, then there can be no peace. The threat of force has to be met by still stronger force and a peace-loving world must be ready and able to use all its human and material resources to bring a halt to successful aggression.

That is the frame of mind and the condition of preparedness reached by great and free nations today and the horror and fear of war which dominated men's minds a year ago is less a factor in the outlook than an unemotional determination to fight for freedom and the destruction of the menace to it should the need arise. But that need has not arisen; partly at least because the threat of domination has been countered by the will and ability to meet it, and there is no lack of confidence now about the ultimate issue in the minds of those nations who have had to exchange a policy of peaceful progress for one of great sacrifice to deal with the threatening danger.

The feeling is steadily gaining ground that there will be no war. Those in the Dictator States upon whom the responsibility for the choice rests, have been significantly silent in recent months. We have had fewer blustering speeches. Indeed there has been a new and welcome tendency to talk in terms of compromise and peaceful settlement. It is true that these feelers have not been extended very far and that with the background of past knowledge they cannot be taken too seriously, because there is still an absence of that confidence which would permit the world to accept overtures or believe them. But even in the danger point of Danzig the tension has given place to watchfulness and we are now assured by Nazi leaders that the Free City has no need of help from the German army, which is a strange statement from a community so anxious to be back in the Reich and unable to get there through the forceful use of its own limited military strength. Hitler has allowed it to be said on his behalf that the Danzig question can be settled without war, and no responsible person in Germany today is allowed to make political statements without the knowledge of higher authority. There is silence in Rome too, not a brooding and sinister silence but one that leaves increasing room for hope that the Duce does not wish to aggravate the situation. The Balkans are quiet. The Regent of Jugoslavia is in London after his visit to Berlin, a visit which was unfruitful from the Axis point of view. If there is any nervousness at all in the Balkan area at one point more than another, it is much more likely to be in Hungary where the wide sale of a book doubting Germany's chances of winning a war has called forth official expostulations of faith in Germany's honesty of intention towards a country friendly to her.

In Germany itself, financial difficulties are not diminishing and as each currency experiment reaches the end of its tether, another still more ingenious but no more permanent solution emerges from the fertile brains of the economists of the New Germany. Short of inflation and a repetition of the currency experiences of the years immediately following the war, Germany's financial wizards are ready to try almost anything. But these feats of monetary legerdemain do not make for preparedness to fight long wars, nor would they be sufficient to persuade neutral neighbours to continue supplies for which they might not be paid in recognisable exchange. And the period of short, quick wars is over. No two Empires such as Britain and France could be overcome in a few weeks, terrible though the onslaught might be. In 1914 Germany did not have to face financial and economic isolation through inability to pay, but she would have to do so today. Whatever young and fanatical generations might do in the direction of seeking glory in the cannon's mouth, German business and industry find their only hope of ultimate emergence to stability and prosperity in peace.

These weighty economic factors do not make for war. Summing up his conclusions of a recent visit to Germany the City Editor of the London Sunday Times recently wrote that Britain must realise that she has the initiative, "and that a bold front in both the political and economic fields is most likely to ensure peace." The premature disclosure of private conversations about a vast international loan for Germany to buy peace fits into the picture. A demonstration of the economic strength of the Empire, the confidence of British people in "business as usual," a vigorous application of a real policy of development of the Imperial Estate, more and more trade agreements with the countries of the world, would be such a policy and not without its effect on the opinion in countries whose reliance is on a military machine and a record of smash and grab successes. The smash and grab phase is past. Another adventure means something much more serious and there are growing indications of reluctance to embark upon it.

There are other straws in the wind. A German financial journal, Die Bank, was frankly critical of Italian finance a few days ago. "Italy cannot balance her budget at £280,900,000," said the journal and though this figure was regarded as normal a few years ago by Rome, the Italian Finance Minister now declares that £359,000,000 is the "absolute minimum." The German paper comments: "For this reason new sources of revenue must be found. It is no longer without danger that Italy can undertake the financing of the new tasks—opening Albania economically and speeding up armaments—which will presumably bring expenditure well above the minimum, entirely by means of credit." That is not a British statement, which might be dismissed as propaganda. It is a German comment on the financial problems of the other partner in the Axis.

When the Italian Finance Minister presented his budget at the end of May he noted that the deficits from 1934 totalled 42,120 million lire (double the expenditure in a single year in the period immediately following the war) and he added that this deficit had been met by special taxation and the creation of internal debt. The total value of bank and treasury notes and specie in circulation, has fallen heavily, even after allowing for difference in price level. The annual revenue has been doubled since pre-war years and he had this to say: "When a comparison is drawn between pre-war Italy and the Italy of today the increase cannot be considered excessive, but it leaves a gap of several milliards which must be met, for in the long run a balanced budget is essential to national strength and prestige. Therefore the task now before the Government is that of raising the revenue required without crippling productive enterprise, and for this purpose a radical reform of the whole fiscal system is being studied, involving the equalization of the incidence of taxation, the simplification of the fiscal system, and the rationalization of the organs for its administration." Land values are being revised and large-scale development plans are being financed by the State because, as the Minister declared, while further revenue must be secured to cover the deficit Italian tax-payers "have a right to demand that the Government, before applying new taxation, take steps to raise the level of production."

These are tasks for times of assured peace. War would expose the whole national structure, as in Germany, to the risk of bankruptcy. They support the belief that war is no longer inevitable and that peace is more likely. We should build upon that hope.

The East African Standard's London correspondent writes: A message from Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, the first commandant of the college, was read at the ceremony in preparation for the stone-laying of the new R.A.F. College at Andover. His message spoke of the fine work which had inspired the first course and expressed the belief that that promise had been fulfilled. It urged all those who directed the college "not to follow the milestones of the road but take the stars as your guides". Air Chief Marshal Sir Cyril Newall, Chief of the Air Staff, turned the first turf on the site where, after working for seventeen years in wooden huts alongside a Service aerodrome, the Royal Air Force has now taken over an eighteenth-century house set in the heart of a Norman manor.

Those who have not yet received the necessary registration forms should communicate at once with the Registration Officer Designate.

Pride of Lions

One at least of the Naval visitors to Nairobi saw a pride of lions. Warrant Officer T. B. Burge R.N. of H.M.S. Gloucester, who on Saturday was out on a picnic with a party of Nairobi friends had the good fortune to see a pride of five lions—a male, a magnificent maned animal, a female, and three half grown cubs. The party disembarked from the two cars in which they were travelling, and lions and picnic party mutually surveyed each other from a distance of a hundred feet. The lions which were close to the road at the bottom of the Magadi Escarpment, showed no interest. The lioness with the cubs finally wandered into the bush, while the old lion kept an eye on the picnic party.

Thika Residents And The Yatta Plateau

CHANGED CLIMATE THEORY

Grant Wanted For Schemes Of Land Reclamation

already briefly reported in the East African Standard, resi-dents of Thika have become concerned about what appears to be a changing of the climate in the Eastern Area.

Several opinions to this effect were expressed at the meeting, duly reported below, but a representative of the Meteorological Department stated that there was no statistical support for the suggestion that rains are failing in the district. Another speaker emphasised, however, that the great task in Kenya is to keep the water on the land.

Among the resolutions passed was one asking Government to secure a grant from the Colonial Development Fund for land reclamation schemes.

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]

Thika ... was read, deprecating loose statements on the subject. He believed that the Yatta Plateau was changing, but not as much, since they are flat. A fortnight ago he had gone across them and was very much struck with the change, but this was as dry and yellow as it was possible to be in July.

There was no sign of natives or cattle on them, and there had evidently been very little rain. Recently there since the Short Rains of 1936, when the grass showed all signs of rains growth. The Yatta Plateau had not been forest in recent geological times, but was covered with a dense scrub, typical medium altitude bush.

Erratic Long Rains

He contended that the so-called Long Rains were becoming erratic, whereas the Short Rains seemed, if anything, to improve in his district. The long rains extended from the East and South, the Short Rains from the East and North East. In his opinion, the trouble lay in the devastating erosion along the Athi Valley and to the West of it, from Donyo Sabuk to Sultan Hamud. This erosion was not caused by overstocking per se but by Cash Crops. All possible ploughable land was ploughed against the grain, thereby reducing by an enormous extent the absorption of the unseasonal grass that at that period of the year in which the rains (conventional) should start. The atmosphere above it was dry and hot, and the rain, when it did take place, and hence there was no precipitation. The remedy was clear. It was recommended—there was no cover when the Rains proper arrived—to plant grass, preferably Rhodes grass, which was always the better of the two. The Yatta Plateau was that was responsible for a change in climate.

Mr. Jardine, Senior Agricultural Officer, stated that the Yatta Plateau was not flat. From the Provincial Commissioner for the Central Province, stated that the scheme for the Yatta Plateau Development Fund for improving water supplies in the area had not yet proceeded with. The area near the Kathoke Hills was very badly off and Kitui cattle watered there. In good grazing areas there was no water to speak of.

Mr. Poppleton stated that from the verandah of his house at Makuyu could be seen an area some 30 miles by 60, from Sagana to Kabete and Thika to Fort Hall, white and this area was becoming denuded at a terrific rate, while Mount Kenya was black. This land was not accessible by car. Clouds form in the afternoon and precipitation only occurs on the Aberdares.

He contended that the climate formerly known in Thika, when a bank of clouds formed on the Aberdares and fell in the afternoon was now the condition of Kiambu, Limuru and Kikuyu. There had been no control of the extensive grass fires. Provocative of rain, not only humidity, while hot winds, and the consequent loss of moisture were the capital invested in coffee in this district was measured at £1,000,000. He had seen the danger and other experts had agreed. Mr. Poppleton urged that irrigation either by gravity or by pumps be undertaken. Machinery could be made and water taken from the rivers to the high ground. Methods of water holding about precipitation

Mr. Strickland's Statement

Mr. Strickland, of the Meteorological Department, stated that when it came to questions of a change in climate, meteorologist must deal with figures, and he could find no statistical support for the contention that the rains were failing in this district. In his local observations there had been no appreciable change over a very wide area.

Mr. Barnsley asked if the Meteorological Dept. would print their returns.

Mr. Horne stated that he had been in the district for twenty years. In the first half of Donyo Sabuk to Sultan Hamud. mountain in the direction of Kitui-bo and Nairobi. Several speakers affirmed that before 1925 the district got good rains. Then the planters agree in not relying on the Long Rains but took to the short rains.

Mr. Grimshaw believed that the unreliability of the Long Rains was unsafe.

Mr. Wellen offered to print the records of the Meteorological Dept. for past years in the Coffee Bulletin. He had been making observations that in past years banks of clouds formed in the afternoons and evenings, but that would have to be knocked off. Now these clouds went off in other directions. It was apparent to every planter that the district had fewer rainfall days of late, instead of three weeks in March as was formerly the case, there were eight, very difficult and must affect the coffee crop. He could not understand those altered conditions had to do with the hot dry areas beyond the Ithanga Hills.

Mr. Lane pointed out that the rainfall was the fall in a shorter time and was not sinking in to the soil. He referred to a Commission on Land Utilization in Australia which had found that although the rainfall over a period of a year was the same, it was now all gone in a few days instead of sinking in to the ground and then coming out in springs.

The Chairman drew attention to the scheme of the Association for the prevention of Fire Wardens. He was convinced that the evil was largely due to the uncontrolled grass fires

Tracing the Cause

Mr. Cooke, who followed from his article by Mr de Toit, Erosion Officer in South Africa. "Although the Government had appointed a Commission to enquire into the cause of erosion, careful and regular observations had been carried out and revealed it to be the same to-day as it was fifty years ago. In our attempts to cure erosion we caused the decrease in the output and carrying capacity of rivers. He quoted the unfounded theory that the rainfall has changed, instead of tracing the cause to the fact that the wood addressed the newly-appointed Provincial Commissioner by Indians, particular reference to the special representations which they had made to him in the presence of the congregation. Mr. Commissioner Hall then addressed the members of the church and called upon them to justify their adoption of the Rev. B. A. Howieson as Minister by standing. He was then informed by the Presbytery thereupon give their new minister a call for a period of residence minister would call for a great deal of his time. Mr. Calder-Marshall, the new Minister, Mr. Calder-Marshall referred to the close parties which existed with other churches and congregations and welcomed the representatives of them who were present.

After the service the Rev and Mrs. B. A. Howieson greeted all present.

Induction Of New Minister

A PRESBYTERIAN WELCOME

The induction of the Rev. H. A. Howieson, M.A., to the ministry of St. Andrew's by the Overseas Presbytery of the Church of Scotland in Kenya, took place on Sunday morning, shortly after the arrival of the Rev. H. A. Howieson and Mrs. Howieson in Nairobi. The Rev. R. G. D. Calder-Marshall, M.C., preached and the preacher was the Rev. J. A. Reid, B.D.

The new minister was met at the station by the Rev. and Mrs. R. G. D. Calder-Marshall, Mr. Miss Elder, Mr. Walker, Session Clerk, and Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Wilson (President of the Women's Guild) and Mr. Adams and Miss Wakeley (Church Council). The Women's Guild, Mrs. Cruickshank was at the Manse to welcome them.

There was a full congregation to greet the new minister. The Rev. Philip, B.D., read the first lesson, the Rev. J. Duncan the second.

The main task of a Minister, he said, was the complete reconciliation of his flock with God and their well being secondary. The success of a ministry could be judged by the extent to which this reconciliation was achieved. The minister was ambassador and his followers therefore was no need for a leader. Every Christian was the ambassador for Christ and the attitude in everyday life decided whether he was ambassador of a good one or otherwise.

Right Hand of Fellowship

Following the singing of hymn No. 182 Mr. Calder-Marshall, after events leading up to Mr. Howieson's call to the Ministry of St. Andrew's, the congregation then signified by standing. He was then informed that their new minister would call for a period of six months. The Rev. R. C. M. Calder-Marshall addressed the newly-appointed Provincial Commissioner by Indians, particular reference to the special representations which they had made to him in the presence of the congregation. Mr. Commissioner Hall then addressed the members of the church and called upon them to justify their adoption of the Rev. B. A. Howieson as Minister by standing. He was then informed by the Presbytery thereupon give their new minister a

THE SECOND TEST MATCH

London, July 24.

Rain again interfered with the Second Test between England and the West Indies, at Old Trafford, Manchester, and no play was possible until 12-15 p.m. There was rain on Sunday and again early this morning and the wicket was well soaked. After two inspections, the Umpires announced that play would be resumed just after noon provided there was no further rain.

There were 7,000 spectators present when Hutton and Fagg resumed their overnight partnership of 11/0, but within a quarter of an hour (at 18/3 and three were various stoppages during the day. At tea-time, England had made 181/6 and it seemed inevitable that a draw would result, with only the remainder of the day and Wednesday in which to reach a decision.

They note that as long as such a total scores at all, so to prove were:

WEST INDIES: 25/1 wicket (J. B. Stollmeyer, c. and b. Goddard, 5; R. S. Grant, 19, not out).

CRIME IN TORO

Theft Stops Fish Supply

[STANDARD CORRESPONDENT]

Fort Portal, July 21

This week two further instances have come to light, one of which has resulted in the temporary suspension of the Fort Portal Lake Saka fish supply through the theft of nets belonging to Mountains of the Moon, and Kihura planters. These nets, which are of quite considerable cost, have disappeared without trace, while the local detective was engaged on more important work elsewhere in the district. Consequently Fort Portal supply has to be suspended pending the making of the special nets required for this work.

For the third time within the past year the Kasmara Coffee Estate brick store has been broken into. Fortunately, due to the conscious policy of the estate manager, Mr. Meredith, the thief in this instance was caught red-handed. Four days after long vigil and considerable losses in the past. This kind of crime is being practised continually in the district, and the loss of property must be a great one over a period of time.

Another more subtle form of thieving is growing rapidly on European plantations and on other works —that of the rendering of false labour tickets at the monthly pay-out day. Estates, when monies are taken by the Baboro headman for labourers who have never done a day's work on the estates concerned. Several instances of this malpractice are at present under investigation.

Local residents feel that the wealthy Uganda Protectorate Government can afford to establish a permanent Police Officer in such a large and important district as Toro.

According to a Reuter message from London, the Senior Golfers of Great Britain played the Senior Golfers of Australia in a match at Stoke Poges on Saturday and were by 5 matches to 1. The sole victory scored for Australia was by the Hon. H. M. Brown, Australian High Commissioner in London, who beat Lieut.-Col. Walker by 1 up.

of the 15,000 head of cattle missing from the Ukamba Reserve was raised by Mr. Heyward and Mr. Merritt, who believed that a certain number of owners had gone as squatters on farms and that the rest might have gone down to the Tana Valley, on to Crown Lands.

Mr. Hines said that many Wakamba had apparently left the Yatta Plains for the Tana Plains, which under rain on five every night.

Mr. Wood put forward a suggestion that had been made, that some change in the Northern Frontier Province was the cause of the dry winds experienced in various districts.

Mr. Wallen urged that in the report submitted to the Thika District there were conditions which could be applied to controlling without loosing possible conditions in the N.F.D.

Mr. Dobbie urged afforestation of the Yatta Plains, combined with their irrigation.

Valuable Report

Major Grogan referred to the valuable report which Mr. Jordan had put in to the Land Bank Board for Economic Development, regarding the Yatta Plateau and irrigation possibilities. Mr. Jordan was pressing for the diversion of a river from the Tana River from the rivers to be conveyed over the plateau, at certain points getting boreholes for subterranean water with the perpetual lack of rainfall. It would give a long water front for the natives and reduce to a minimum the danger of loss of stock through lack of water.

INDIAN RADIO SERVICE

C. & W. Reply To Petition

On behalf of 115 Indian holders of wireless licences in Nairobi, Mr. H. D. Trivedi petitioned the Postmaster General and Messrs. Cable and Wireless, Ltd. for a "reorientation of the radio programmes in this Colony".

The petition pointed out that the present facilities provide no news bulletins and that the programme is neither sufficient, attractive nor instructive; that the time allotted is too short and inconvenient; and that the licence fee is out of all reasonable proportion to the existing improvements were required:

Suggested Improvements

The present three weekly Hindustani service is one-third that a daily service with ten minutes' news programmes.

The programme to be so arranged with the help and guidance of a small advisory committee in order to make it sufficiently attractive to the Indian Community. It is suggested that it should include interesting lectures on various subjects, programme for children (short stories and dialogues), a good selection of records, Indian concerts, songs by local and other prominent singers, etc.

The present half-an-hour time be increased to an hour so as to be subdivided into morning and evening services or to allow broadcasting the transmission into two parts.

Pending the revision, the Indian programme be transmitted at 8-15 p.m.

The licence fee of Shs. 20/- be reduced to Shs. 20/- per annum for all subscribers.

An arrangement be made with the Indian broadcasting stations such as Delhi, Bombay or Madras for the relaying of their programmes by the local station, if not daily, on prescribed days or the week.

"We," the petition added, "respectfully submit that if the above improvements are carried out the Indian people in the Colony would be encouraged to subscribe to the service in large numbers."

Manager's Reply

The following letter was addressed to Mr. Trivedi by Mr. C. G. Mollison, Manager of Cable and Wireless, Limited:

Dear Sir,—The Hon. the Postmaster General has forwarded to us your petition, dated July 6, and addressed to him, upon the subject of your Indian programme.

We would point out that these programmes are arranged by our Indian Staff, in consultation with the various gramophone record dealers, and also with the help of the Indian Community. We are willing, and always have been willing, to receive constructive criticism and suggestions, and also to give additions to lately local talent.

As the question of the length and composition of our programmes is under review and our future policy as yet undecided, we are unable to comment fully upon the question of possible Indian programme revision, and we are, therefore, unable except to state the length is based upon the three hours per day programme, which allowing for certain portions of the European programme which are of interest to Indians, is all we could do. We are, however, in touch with the Indian Community, and if the demand for more time is increased by 50% in 1937.

Regarding News Bulletins, on news available in the B.O.W.I. and the Local News Bulletin is available for broadcasting, and in addition, instructions indicated that translations of extracts from these would not be of value. Local news is broadcast twice, at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., and is also relayed to the English version.

Closer Union

AN INDIAN POINT OF VIEW

To the Editor, "E. A. Standard."

Sir,—"Let's Make a New Dominion" is the caption of an articulate article from the penetrating pen of Major The Honourable F. W. Cavendish-Bentinck published in The Forum, Johannesburg, indeed far away from the ken of Kenya. I offer no apologies in ventilating my opinion on the formidable subject on which the Honourable and Gallant Member thought fit, unmistakably, to rouse public opinion in South Africa, the Dominion of white dominance with a vengeance, but I do crave your indulgence, Sir, to extend to me your usual kind courtesy by giving publicity to this letter in the hospitable columns of your esteemed paper.

I have, Sir, only the condensed form of the Major's article before me as published in the July issue of the Parade, a copy of which was handed to me by a leading light of Nairobi. The Major has based the ambitious ideal of dominionhood for East Africa upon a number of subtle arguments, namely, (i) that with its strong white settlement Kenya will increasingly become the natural centre in the East African zone; (ii) that the East African union would react to the advantage of the Native and Indian peoples; (iii) that the Asian community would like the Mandate for Tanganyika handed over to India so that the territory might be recognised as an outlet for Indian colonisation; and (iv) that a certain amount of progress has been made already, but nothing short of union is likely to abolish the anachronism of such a farce as two East African railway systems bidding against each other with different rates for the same traffic.

With your permission, Sir, I would like to scrutinise these four arguments in the light of facts already before us and in order to avoid pressure upon your space I would refrain from giving lengthy quotations from official and responsible publications. I am, however, writing from memory and from personal knowledge.

(i) The argument that with its strong white settlement Kenya will increasingly become the natural centre in the East African zone is yet too premature to be of any thought-provoking consequence. The results of white settlement in Kenya have to be seen to be realised. All the white man's capital, enterprise, skill and energy have not been productive of a stable prosperity for the country whose public finances have been held as a hostage and have had to be staked and sacrificed to make of the experiment of white settlement a success. Past experience categorically bears out that the experiment will be continued for ever merely to satiate the complacency of the protagonists of white settlement who rule the roost in the counsels of the Government of Kenya. There has not been any demonstrable proof of the possibilities of a successful outcome of the experiment though the item will to continue the experiment, by the exclusion of Asiatics, has added a feather to the cap of the white settlers. If Tanganyika and Uganda were also brought within the compass of this exclusively racial experiment, their humble resources are bound to be crippled by the increasing demands and calls upon them to foster and spoon-feed the white settlement as is being done in Kenya. Tanganyika is yet in a state of infancy and needs meticulous care that its undeveloped economic resources are not exploited for ulterior motives and extraneous objectives. Uganda, of course, is a predomenantly native agricultural country with Indian industrial backing and where there has been little to catch the white man's eye.

(ii) The second argument that the East African union would react to the advantage of the Native and Indian peoples is a total myth and no African or Indian would take the Honourable and Gallant Member very seriously, much as he may wish. The black and brown races in Kenya have already had a foretaste of what an East African Dominion is going to be like. The present exigencies in Kenya are a tabernacle of pronounced mistrust of other races propounded, preached and practised by the white oligarchs of this colony as an argument to keep them under economic and political subjection. The East African union would only mean a constitutional bulwark bringing to a logical conclusion the existing state of mistrust.

(iii) This mistrust is significantly betrayed by the Major in his third argument, namely, that the Asian community would like the mandate for Tanganyika handed over to India. I take this opportunity of repudiating the Major's assertion most strongly. It has never been a plank on the platform of Indian statesmen and politicians in India or overseas. I challenge the Honourable and Gallant Member to substantiate his claim which, I assert, is totally unfounded, downrightly misleading and outrightly thoughtless. Has this argument, I ask, been thrown in the midst of the South African atmosphere, already surcharged with anti-Indian policies, to serve as a dope to flabbergast the racial madness of a Dominion from whose example the Kenya Dominionists are drawing generously? Is this a specimen of methods which the rulers of the East African Dominion-to-be would employ to give the Indians a bad name to hang them? It is impossible to argue with restraint with a mind over-borne with designs that conjures up an enemy unleashed behind innocence. I would, however, only appeal to Major Cavendish-Bentinck to withdraw this suggestion for the love of truth if for no other consideration.

(iv) The Major draws his last argument from the progress that has already been made through Customs agreement, postal unification, Governors' Conference and technical inter-territorial conferences and he urges nothing short of union to abolish, what he calls, the anachronism of such a farce as two East African railway systems bidding against each other with different rates for the same traffic. I will deal with these subjects one by one.

(a) Those who have any knowledge or even a smattering of what the Customs agreements have meant to Tanganyika will cry "Hands Off Tanganyika." It is a fact to be learnt from Trade Reports to be believed that the balance of trade has invariably been against Tanganyika under the auspices of the Customs agreements ever since they came into being. This has milched Tanganyika to the tune of more than a couple of million pounds. The Government of Tanganyika has merely been relying upon hope against hope that a glorious day will dawn when Tanganyika will derive benefit from these agreements. Here, Tanganyika must stop industrial expansion to make room for the expansion of Kenya industries.

(b) Postal unification has only meant the dismembering of a vital limb of the administrative machinery of Tanganyika and virtual transfer of power into the hands of the Government of Kenya without bestowing any contributory or relating advantage to Tanganyika. Under the aegis of the postal union the users of the Tanganyika postal system have to wait for dispensations from Nairobi instead of relying for quickness of service and sympathy in understanding local needs upon an authority just next door to the centre of business in the Territory. The so-called and much-boosted economies in the amalgamated postal services are insignificant and could have been realised to a far greater extent under the local scheme of economy as accomplished under the territory's other votes.

(c) As regards the institution of the Governors' Conference the fact that it was blessed with a permanent secretariat gave cause to rouse the suspicion of East African Indians that it will some day come to be used as a lever to tie Tanganyika with the chariot wheels of Kenya. That suspicion has come too true today in the suggestion of Major Cavendish-Bentinck. The equanimity of even the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations was shaken by this new creation and it had no hesitation in desiring the British Government as Mandatory power to keep a close watch over the activities of the Governors' Conference lest it should transcend the bounds of its alleged limitations.

(d) In regard to the competition between the two railway systems of Kenya-Uganda on the one hand and Tanganyika on the other the fact of the matter is that encouraged by the Colonial Office policy, the Kenya-Uganda Railway have been pursuing a policy of merciless self-aggrandisement without providing any asylum for the interests of Tanganyika. The Kenya-Uganda Railway have always been first in the field to make an onslaught on Tanganyika by lowering their rates directly and indirectly by subsidising the produce of white-settlers. On all points of Lake Tanganyika, Kenya's cut-throat competition resulted in seizing the whole produce of Bukoba which is the richest province of Tanganyika. The whole of the Mwanza trade has been forced over the Kenya-Uganda system by the same rating policy. The insignificant but strategic Voi-Kahe section of the Kenya-Uganda Railway has famished the Tanga Railway. Thus while the tax-payers of Tanganyika have to foot the bill for the development of and for carrying on the King's government in Bukoba, Mwanza and Tanga areas, the major portion of the traffic profits steal into the coffers of the Kenya treasury. Sir Donald Cameron, a late Governor of Tanganyika, was once constrained to make it a point of complaint against the Colonial Office to which he gave public expression in the Legislative Council that this had been made possible because the Government of Tanganyika was weak meaning thereby that the Government of Kenya influenced as it is by public opinion wielded more power with the Colonial Office. And this dominance of public opinion is none other than that of the white settlers of Kenya. Under an amalgamated railway Tanganyika's tax-payers will have to continue to foot the whole bill and content themselves with but a parsimonious share in the total railway income which would still worsen their position. The only salvation of Tanganyika lies in saving her from the rate-war of Kenya and to let her trade pass over the natural route unmanipulated by clever designs of the Kenya-Uganda Railway.

An unbiased consideration of what I have stated in the foregoing should convince your readers, Sir, that Kenya can not attract Tanganyika by her present methods towards closer union however laudable its ideals may be. Sir Donald Cameron once said that there was nothing in common between Kenya and Tanganyika to warrant closer union. And indeed he was perfectly right. Both the countries are on unequal stages of both economic and political development and Tanganyika requires time to carry out her nation-building programme unhampered by extraneous considerations. Kenya's white settler community is stronger and more vocal than the inhabitants of Tanganyika. Kenya bitterly lacks the blessings of racial harmony which it is Tanganyika's privilege to enjoy. How can then a frail, little well-meaning lamb make common cause with a stout, voracious and scheming lion is a pertinent question. I have, Sir, in my foregoing analysis given only pointers but I am prepared to join issue on any of these topics.

Major the Honourable F. W. Cavendish-Bentinck's article, I am glad, is not without its relieving and redeeming features. There are important admissions made by him which must be taken into account before a unification of East Africa can become an accomplished fact. These are (i) that Kenya is more advanced politically than its neighbours; (ii) that it is not claimed that closer union would result in an enormous saving of costs to government; (iii) that no discussion of closer union can take place until the particular requirements of each territory, and indeed of each section of the community have been clarified, and (iv) that the nature of the problem can be clearly realised if it is remembered that in the case of Kenya we are dealing with a Crown Colony and a Protectorate combined while Tanganyika is a Mandated Territory and Uganda is only a Protectorate. These admissions, I submit, Sir, provide evidence in the Major's article of those traits of British character which have contributed to the greatness and glory of Great Britain, and in which the governed races find their consolation.

I submit, Sir, that if, as the Honourable and Gallant Member feels convinced, the time is ripe for a move in the direction of closer union the British settlers must, in the first place, look for rapprochement with their Indian fellow-subjects that would dissipate racial bitterness and spirit of race inequalities, and thereby prepare the way for mutual collaboration on most natural and dignified lines for a realisation of the destiny of East Africa as a great partnership of races crowning the glory of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

KENYA-BORN GIRLS

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard,"

Sir,—May I beg a space in your widely read paper to contradict a statement which appeared in your valued paper a few weeks ago, viz. that Kenya-born girls do not make the best wives. I have two daughters born in Kenya and both are now married. I brought them up to make their own beds, dust, iron, make their own clothes, and to do house work and cooking. One daughter has three children, and she has never had a nurse or ayah for any of them but nursed and looked after them herself, besides doing her own house work and cooking also sewing making all their clothes, attending the poultry and garden, making of butter and seeing to the milk. The other daughter has a baby whom she looks after herself and does her house work, etc. etc., and she can make cakes and cook. That is the Kenya-born girl who does not think only of going to dances and pictures and having a so-called good time. Kenya-born girls understand the natives and can manage them. If your writer has come across the kind that is mentioned, why condemn them all?

My experience of girls coming out from home, is that they are pretty useless, and leave everything to the native boy to do, and they don't even make their own beds.

Yours etc.,

THE DEFENCE OF LUCKNOW

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard,"

Sir,—Randolph Churchill, in his account of the defence of the Residency at Lucknow, (published July 14 in the "Glory of Britain" series, says:

"Sir Henry Lawrence, Governor of the Province of Oudh, had learned that Sir Hugh Wheeler's force at Cawnpore 43 miles away, had mutinied and that the mutineers were now advancing upon him. With a contempt for the enemy that was perilously sublime Lawrence marched towards Cawnpore."

The mutinous Sepoy regiments from Cawnpore did not march on Lucknow. Their original plan after revolting and plundering the Treasury was to march to Delhi but, by bribes and promises they were induced by the Nana Sahib to stay on at Cawnpore and overpower the small body of British troops and women and children in their entrenchments under Sir Hugh Wheeler. The garrison surrendered to the Nana Sahib on the 27th of June under a promise of safety but were massacred on the 28th and subsequent days so that it was quite impossible that they could have been at Chinhat 50 miles distant to fight there on the 30th of June—the date of the battle.

Sir Henry Lawrence marched out of the Residency to Chinhat to attack the Sepoy regiments from the Eastern Stations of Oudh who had mutinied, massacred their officers their wives and families, and were converging on Lucknow to the number of 15,000. Chinhat is not on the Cawnpore road, but on the road to Fyzabad, S.E. of Lucknow while Cawnpore is almost due west. It would be as pertinent to say that a force defending Nairobi should march to Limuru to attack an enemy approaching Nairobi along the Mombasa road.

The British troops that marched out of the Residency to Chinhat consisted of 300 men of the 32nd foot, a few gunners and 36 mounted civilian volunteers, not 800 men. There were also about 250 Sepoys, infantry and cavalry, not 700.

An Irishman by the name of Kavanagh a civilian went out of the Residency with Ungud carrying despatches for the relieving force under Sir Colin Campbell.

The Residency Surgeon's name was Dr. Fayrer and not Fayer.

Fifteen years of my service in India were spent at Lucknow and I have time and again been over all the historic ground connected with the defence and relief of the Residency.

Yours etc.,
F. W. HARRIS.

When a girl needs a girl friend . . .

"I saw Jack just as he finished dancing with Jane. He looked so bored I asked him what was the matter. He said, 'Why doesn't some kind girl friend tell her she needs Mum?' Those were his very words."

What an old meanie she is for not telling! "Mr. Glover said he was afraid he'd have to let Ann go. Wish I had the nerve to tell her that a jar of Mum would save her job for her."

She's bound to lose out every time—the girl who is careless about underarm perspiration odour. For people will not excuse this kind of unpleasantness when it's so easy to avoid. With Mum!

RACING:

OUR LONDON TURF LETTER

[BY "THE RECORDER"]

London, July 17.

The preliminary betting on the Stewards' Cup to be run at Goodwood today has not been very enlightening, few horses seeming to be fancied to any great extent. The handicap is a good one, which probably accounts for this. Since the last Call Over, however, there has been money for Neuvy, Knight's Caprice and Scotland for Ever. As I remarked last week, the Molyneux Cup has often given a pointer to the Goodwood race. Carnival Boy, Mixture, Harmachis, Ipswich, and Cosaque all have good chances. Carnival Boy is so consistent, that one can never leave him out, but he has had a lot of racing this season. Mixture and Ipswich are in the same stable, and the selected may be dangerous. Harmachis is well handicapped, a winner of the race last year and second the year before. Cosaque has respectable form.

Frank Butters has left in Neuvy out of his three entries and I like his chance.

Davy Dolittle made a welcome return to form at Newmarket this week when he ran Cosmopolitan to a head for the July handicap. Behind him there were Stewards' cup rivals in Glucose (since scratched), Antecedent, Lovely Woman and

OTHER SPORTS NEWS WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE SIX.

America, and he will meet these on better terms. Last year he ran third to Harmachis and Old Reliance, and he meets them on 5—lb. and 14—lb. better terms, respectively.

Ethland is one that is very well handicapped at 7st. 7—lb. and has been a very consistent performer this season, winning two of his five races and being second and third in the others. He is favorably handicapped on his running with Caerloptic, at Epsom, Lovely Woman at Newmarket in May, and with America, and Mixture at Liverpool. I consider he has been given a good chance.

I still believe that Antecedent will win a good race, but he seems to have lost his form since the "Wokingham". Another one that will come up some time is Quartier Maitre. As I said, it is an intriguing handicap, and I shall couple Davy Dolittle and Neuvy for the winner, expecting Ethland and Antecedent to run well.

Blue Peter's St. Leger Chances

There now seems every possibility of Blue Peter going on to win the St. Leger as these two famous colts did. Scottish Union was expected to give him a race but he did not and it was left to Challenge and Glen Loan to do their best to make a fight. Glen Loan ran very well, but was beaten as soon as Blue Peter was asked to make his effort and he did so in the manner of a horse who could have done better if required.

Only three runners turned out for the Dullingham Stakes at Newmarket and it was a good performance on the part of Nord Express to beat River Prince at weight for age and also giving 11—lb. to Brocanteur, who is an improving three-year-old.

Having the benefit of the 5—lb. allowance in the Thurston Handicap, Lover's Mate, ridden by K. Mullins, beat Take My and Tom Brown, the former being well fancied. Felt Slipper ran below his best form. The Frenchbred horse L'Aigoual I have mentioned before, and I think he will be well worth following.

Olein put up a good performance for the Falmouth Stakes, but was beaten by Bountiful, to whom she was giving a stone, by a head with Light Velocity from the same stable as the winner third, receiving 19—lb. Light Velocity should be placed to win a nice race for three-year-old fillies. Infra Red and Buoyant should also win races.

Tuba, who was bought by Lord Rosebery with a view to leading Blue Peter in his work, won the [illegible] Stakes and should do well. He is a French importation, as are [illegible]. The two latter seem to possess chances of winning races.

Prince Nicolai had not essayed over two miles before he ran for the Summer Handicap, but he won like a good stayer and is a useful addition to the ranks of stayers. This was his fourth success in his last five races. He was giving a stone to All's Fair who was second and won by two lengths. He is a likely sort for the Cesarewitch.

It was pleasing to see the victory of Nosegay in the Anniversary Cup at Sandown Park so soon after being included in my horses to follow. He beat Golden Sovereign a head, who should soon be winning.

Muthaiga vs. Sikh Union

Played on the Sikh Union ground, Sikh Union winning by six wickets with about ten minutes in hand in a very keen and exciting finish. Muthaiga batted first and were dismissed for 134. Harbans Singh was bowling very well and was aided by excellent fielding. He was getting far more pace on the ball than usual and coming off the wicket very fast indeed. Muthaiga lost the first wicket for no runs and disaster crowded thick and fast, the fall of the subsequent wickets being 2/3, 3/3, 4/7, 5/7, 6/13, and 7/33. Harbans Singh got C. Levitan, one of the opening pair with the first ball of the match. Levitan just snicked it and Sorabjee at first slip dived high and brought off a brilliant, one-handed catch. He also took two others during the match and was fielding very well. Harbans Singh continued to bowl like one possessed and his analysis, at one time, was 11 overs, 5 maidens, 10 runs, 7 wickets. F.C.H. Swift withstood the attack for a time, but six other bats were out for an aggregate of 5 runs. S. L. Jarrett and R. Higgs both of whom batted well, made an 8th wicket stand of 77 before Higgs was run out with a good throw in and the innings closed for 134. Muthaiga's bowling was good also and the Sikh Union had to fight for runs, taking 1½ hours to make 40 before tea. Rain fell then, however and with a sudden wicket and slippery ball the bowling lost its accuracy of length and the were [illegible] Mohanlal making a very good 66 not out. The scores were:—

The Goan Institute were dismissed for 106, G. N. Shah being in his usual form and taking 6/21 with his fast deliveries. The scores were:—

SHOOTING:

KENYA AND UGANDA AT BISLEY

Enthusiasm Of East African Competitors

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 15.

The Kenya and Uganda representatives at the British Bisley meeting were as keen as ever and two Kenya competitors, Mr. R. Stuart Wortley and Major E. C. B. Elliott, both succeeded in getting into the third stage of the King's Prize—the first prize for which is £250. This, I believe, is the first time any Kenya competitor has reached this stage of Bisley's premier event. The winner was Capt. T. S. Smith, late of the 5th South Staffordshire Regiment, with a score of 282 points. Major Elliott, Kenya, scored 268 points and Mr. Stuart Wortley, 258.

The Kenya team, was captained by Mr. J. G. Sullivan, the holder of the Kenya Individual Rifle Shooting Championship, and the other members of the team were Major E. C. B. Elliot, Mr. R. Stuart Wortley and Mr. J. Lang; whilst the Uganda team was captained by Mr. W. L. Whyte, and the shooting members were Mr. T. W. Chorley, Mr. F. T. Thornham, Mr. N. Vincent, Mr. Fairfield and Mr. D. E. Whiting were reserves in the Kenya team.

All the members entered for the big competitions, e.g. those included in the Grand Aggregate.

In the Barnett (Junior Mackinnon) which was shot for on Thursday, 13th July, the Kenya team came fifth with a score of 312, whilst Uganda came tenth with a score of 267. Burma were the winners.

The Junior Kolapore was shot for today, Friday, 14th July, in which the Kenya team came second with a score of 543 and the Uganda team came seventh with a score of 522. The winners were the Straits Settlements with a score of 553, ten points beyond the Kenya competitors. The individual scores were as follows:—

Poor Weather Conditions

The weather was not too good for shooting, as it was very windy indeed, which proved trying to those who were not accustomed to shooting in such conditions. It was a great disappointment that Kenya did not manage to win the Junior Kolapore, not only because the prize was certainly worth having—one hundred guineas—but because when shooting at the 500 yards range they were leading with 368. Unfortunately at the 600 yards range bad luck stepped in which made them eventually drop behind the winners by ten points.

Messrs. Stuart Wortley, Lang and Sullivan, with whom I had a chat, told me that they had enjoyed Bisley immensely and hoped to come again. All the competitors from Kenya were apparently having a very good time in England.

Mr. Chorley and Mr. Vincent of the Uganda team were also very enthusiastic about the Bisley Meeting and said they would certainly come again. All of the Uganda team, individually, had won small money prizes, and they considered that they had done very well to obtain a score of 522 in the Junior Kolapore as against Kenya's 543.

Events Too Crowded

[illegible]

Regarding Bisley generally all the competitors to whom I spoke this year appeared to be of the same opinion, that the action of the National Rifle Association in shortening the period to ten days instead of letting it run its full fortnight, had caused the unnecessary crowding of competitions. In consequence most competitors had found it too much of a strain to have to shoot, in some instances, in five or six competitions in one day. It took a great deal of the pleasure out of Bisley.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that next year the Bisley fortnight will be a fortnight and not ten days.

I. R. A. PLOT TO BLOW UP PARLIAMENT

Dramatic Revelation By Home Secretary To Commons

PLAN "S"

DETAILS OF PLANS FOR A CAMPAIGN OF TERRORISM INCLUDING THE BLOWING UP OF THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT WERE REFERRED TO BY THE HOME SECRETARY IN A STATEMENT REGARDING I.R.A. ACTIVITIES.

Be produced in the House of Commons a photographic copy of Plan 'S' which, Sir Samuel Hoare said, provided for intensive sabotage plans.

London, July 25.

The plans which Irish terrorists had made to cause difficulties in Britain, including a ruthless attack on life and property and a scheme to blow up the Houses of Parliament have come into the hands of the British Government.

They were referred to on Monday in the House by the Home Secretary when he spoke on the second reading of the Bill published recently giving the Government wide powers to deal with terrorists. And Sir Samuel Hoare used them as an argument for no delay in passing the measure.

The Home Secretary produced a photographic copy of a document described as Plan 'S' which, he said the terrorist activities were being organised in Britain.

Detailed Survey

He described it as a carefully worked out draft plan with details of an intensive campaign of sabotage and even since January the Irish Republican Army had based their activities on it. Surveys of bridges, railways, munition dumps and aerodromes had been made by the I.R.A.

The Home Secretary went on to say that it had been brought to the notice of Government that behind-the-scenes with two further steps to be taken before the campaign was to be much more ruthless and was not to take account of human life.

Reuter.

Foreign Influence

"We have also in our possession," he said, "reliable information that the campaign is being actively watched and stimulated by foreign organisations. He urged that in the light of these reports and the knowledge that the campaign of terrorism was by no means intensified, Parliament should grant the special powers provided in the Bill before Parliament now.

"Suppose," he said, "that in August or September we were faced with war or an emergency, would not the danger of sabotage by these terrorists be immeasurably increased?"

Sir Samuel added that the plan had included a project to blow up the Houses of Parliament, and that would have been increasing danger for the country if the Government had not asked for special powers.

"The House must accept my assurance," he said, "that these are not unchecked suggestions. They are based on reliable data."

Spain Wants To Be Friends With Britain

Madrid, July 25.

General Aranda, who was head of the recent Spanish Mission to Germany, said today that Spain would be friendly in any European conflict.

He also said that Spain would be glad to have friendly relations with Britain.

The General expressed these views in an interview published in a London newspaper.

He revealed that when he visited Berlin he had been ordered by General Franco not to discuss anything likely to impede Spanish liberty of action in international relations.

The Armed Forces

In accordance with the reorganisation of the Army the Peninsular Army will be composed of eight army corps with two further corps for Morocco and one cavalry division in addition to garrisons in the Balearic and Canary Islands.—Reuter.

German Warship Raised

London, July 25.

The hope of the sunken German warship, Derfflinger (one of those sunk by the Germans at the end of the war) is to be raised to the surface after a year's work, in charge of Mr. Thomas Mackenzie, the salvage expert who gave evidence at the Tbetis enquiry.

So many of the old German ships are to be raised and Scapa Flow is to return to its full status as a naval base.—(Reuter).

British Wheat Reserves in America

New York, July 25.

The American Dow Jones News Service reports from Ottawa that Great Britain is to establish substantial wheat reserves in Canada.

Part of the reserve will be kept in Canada at Halifax and St. John with some ports on the east coast of the United States may also be used.—(Reuter).

INDIAN TO SIT IN LORDS

Case Without Precedent

London, July 25.

The Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords to-day upheld the claim of an Indian peer, Lord Sinha, to sit in the House of Lords on the seat of his father.

The barony was conferred in 1919 and the present Lord Sinha succeeded his father in 1928. His right to sit in the House of Lords was challenged on technical grounds and therefore presented a petition for a writ of summons. This was considered by the Committee of Privileges last month.

Valid Marriage

The Lord Chancellor in announcing the Committee's decision said the petitioner on the facts stated had established that he was the heir of the late Lord Sinha, lawfully begotten. The Attorney General had said that doubt existed whether on the evidence it could be established that the late Lord Sinha's marriage was one which could be recognised within the conditions governing the peerage.

The Lord Chancellor said there was some doubt in relation to any of the facts stated in the petition. The late Lord Sinha's marriage was a monogamous one and would be treated as valid in this country for almost any purpose. Nothing in the decision was intended to establish any precedent in respect of a case arising from a polygamous marriage.

The case was without precedent in peerage law and in the absence of authority must be decided in the light of my special facts.—(Reuter).

TROOPS FROM INDIA FOR EGYPT

London, July 25.

It is announced that a number of troops from India will be despatched to Egypt as part of the military reserve to be kept there.

It is announced in India that preparations for the move were made many months ago and that it does not imply any deterioration in the international outlook.

It was stated in Cairo today that Egyptian and Turkish military missions are shortly to exchange visits and inspect fortifications in each country. (Reuter).

New Minister to Brussels

London, July 25.

Sir Lancelot Oliphant, Deputy Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is to succeed Sir Robert Clive as British Minister in Brussels. Sir Robert retires at the end of the year.—(Reuter).

Loan To Germany Rumour

POSITION EXPLAINED

London, July 25.

In the House of Commons and the House of Lords yesterday practically identical statements were made by the Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary, Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Halifax, answering from the proposal which has been in recent months publicly lately that an International loan was to be raised for Germany.

It will be remembered that the name of Mr. R. S. Hudson Secretary for Overseas Trade was connected by the newspapers with proposals of this nature in an interview Mr. Hudson denied any connection.

Mr. Chamberlain said that Dr. Wohltat was recently in Britain as German representative to the Whaling conference and had also discussed matters arising from the Anglo-German Agreement.

During this and previous visits to Britain Dr. Wohltat had met officials and other persons interested in trade and economic questions and it was in no sense unusual that the German Trade Secretary and Dr. Wohltat should meet and discuss questions of mutual interest.

Fusing A Problem

The Prime Minister went on to say that Mr. Hudson had reported to him the fact that the conversations with Dr. Wohltat had been completed and that he had been impressed by the attitude of Dr. Hudson). He was expressing only personal views. Mr. Hudson had said that more interdepartmental consultation was established there should be scope for reaching by all principal countries concerned.

This account of what had passed, said the Prime Minister, did not justify any assumption amounting to proposals for a loan to be made to Germany. The Cabinet had had no knowledge of the possibility of such proposals and had no intention of beginning it.

Conclusions

The newspaper reports to which the Prime Minister's statements were related were to the effect that Mr. Hudson had suggested a £200 million loan. In return for an agreement to discuss the report showed that Germany might receive a share in developing world resources, notably those in Africa. It was also suggested that as part of the plan Germany should agree to undertake Czechoslovak debts.

The affair has created a big stir both in Britain and on the Continent and it became obvious that these would have to be a Government statement on the matter.

It is stated that the main purpose of the loan was to help Germany to change over her industry to a peace-time basis.

The German Official News Agency stated to-day that the Hudson-Wohltat talks were merely a private exchange of views on economic questions and denied that Dr. Wohltat was the bearer of any proposals.—Reuter.

Anti-British Propaganda

London, July 25.

Mr Butler Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons yesterday that much anti-British propaganda was being broadcast from Germany and it contained a great deal of misleading information, especially about Palestine.

It did not, however, appear to have any direct incitement to violence.

The B.B.C. had broadcast in German details of the worst and most false allegations.

FIGHT WITH ARABS

Jerusalem, July 25.

On Sunday one British soldier was killed and four others were wounded when a party of troops engaged a gang of Arabs between Hebron and Beersheba.

In a skirmish 138 Arabs were arrested by British troops and police.—Reuter.

Thetis Conference

London, July 25.

A conference is to be held at the Admiralty on Thursday to discuss the next stage of the salvage of the Thetis operations in regard to which have been temporarily suspended.—(Reuter).

NAVY 145,000 STRONG

London, July 24.

Revised Naval estimates issued today make provision for an additional 12,000 officers and men. This is a result of the Government's decision to call up retired officers and reservists for combined sea and air exercises in August and September.

During that time the Navy's total personnel will be about 145,000.—Reuter.

MORE TRAINING EXERCISES

London, July 25.

There was another mass flight to-day over France by more than 200 Regal Air Force bombers carrying over a thousand men.

This was the third and largest training flight carried out within the last fortnight.

It was also the 30th anniversary of M. Blerlot's pioneer flight over the English Channel.

Sealed Orders

The flights were made under sealed orders, and were subject to variation in accordance with a prearranged plan.

The routes covered such widely separated points as Paris, Lyons the southern end of the Bay of Biscay and the Gulf of Lyons. The flights were made non-stop from England, at speeds up to 300 miles per hour, and the several routes varied from 800 miles to nearly twice that distance.

The first wave had five separate formations of Blenheim bombers, a total of over 60 machines, which crossed the south coast between 7.30 and 8.15 a.m. on their way to France. They made an 800 mile circuit before returning to their home stations.

Intercepted

When crossing the French coast they were intercepted by French fighter aircraft, which according to arrangement, accompanied them throughout the journey.

The second wave of three formations of over 90 battle bombers crossed over the South coast about an hour later, and their 900 mile circuit covered Northern and Central France.

Half an hour later, the third wave of two formations of Whitley bombers crossed the Channel on a thousand miles non-stop flight.

Throughout their journey the aircraft flew at heights between 3,000 and 5,000 feet, and descended to a lower limit when crossing and leaving towns.

French Air Minister's Visit

The French Air Minister flew to England to-day to see the British Air Minister, Sir Kingsley Wood.—(Reuter).

War Training For Japanese Fleet

Tokyo, July 25.

The combined Japanese Fleet together with another newly organised Fleet will shortly begin special wartime training. This was announced today by the Navy Minister, Admiral Yonai.—(Reuter).

A meeting of the Committee of Anglo-Japanese Conference was held today to discuss the maintenance of peace and order in the British Concessions at Tientsin and the policing of the Concession. The Committee will report to the full conference which is meeting tomorrow.

There is no sign yet, however, of any slackening in the anti-British campaign sponsored by the Japanese, indeed there are indications that it is being intensified.

At Tsukung rioters stoned the premises of three British firms and did a good deal of damage. H.M.S. Sandwich has been sent from Tientsin to the spot.

Steamer Searched

In the river near the Tientsin Concession the Japanese on Saturday stopped a British steamer and searched hard for two hours. According to the Japanese thirty thousand silver dollars were found and confiscated and three members of the crew, all Chinese, were arrested. The owners of the vessel say that they were unaware of the presence on board of any currency.

Terrorism in Shanghai

Shanghai had its worst outbreak of terrorism on Saturday when fifteen Chinese gunmen entered the International Settlement and tried to wreck the offices of two vernacular newspapers. There was a running fight with the Police in the heart of the city and when it was over three people lay dead including an American. Fifteen people were injured. The gunmen used grenades as well as pistols.

Protest

The Consul General in Shanghai today protested against the arrest of Mr. Harold Rose, Chief Inspector of the P.W.D. Department of the Municipality. Together with a number of employes and 124 Chinese he was arrested on a charge of dumping refuse in Japanese occupied territory. A German employee was arrested today on a similar charge.

Japanese reports say that at Tsiandu 20 British firms have been given a fortnight's notice to quit.

VIEWS ON ANGLO-JAPANESE FORMULA

No Relaxation Yet Of Anti-British Campaigns

Despite the formula regarding the British attitude to Japan in the Far East agreed in Tokyo and announced in the House of Commons on Monday night there is as yet no sign of any relaxation in the anti-British campaigns sponsored by the Japanese in China and Japan.

Tokyo, July 25.

Sections of the Japanese Press are claiming for the British formula exactly what Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday that it did not mean—namely a change in the attitude of Great Britain to the Chinese Government.

On the other hand there are other newspapers which are maintaining that from the Japanese point of view the formula should have been much more far-reaching.

A meeting of the Committee of Anglo-Japanese Conference was held today to discuss the maintenance of peace and order in the British Concessions at Tientsin and the policing of the Concession. The Committee will report to the full conference which is meeting tomorrow.

There is no sign yet, however, of any slackening in the anti-British campaign sponsored by the Japanese, indeed there are indications that it is being intensified.

HOW TO HELP KEEP YOUR SCALP HEALTHY AND YOUR HAIR HANDSOME WITH VITALIS

For Normal Hair

If your hair is normal, a Vitalis shampoo every two weeks will help keep your scalp healthy and your hair well-groomed. To give yourself the Vitalis shampoo, first massage your scalp freely with Vitalis. Then wash your hair, following with a thorough rinse. Before your hair is entirely dry, rub your scalp with Vitalis again and comb your hair into place. Brush quickly.

For Thinning Hair and Loose Dandruff

Follow this treatment: once a week. Before each shampoo, soak the entire scalp with Vitalis. Rub it briskly and let it remain for several minutes. Then wash and rinse thoroughly. When the hair is dry, massage the scalp with more Vitalis and work it in vigorously. Comb into place and brush firmly.

MYSTERY OF P.C.'s BOY

Did He Swim To Safety?

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
Koru, July 22.

In connexion with the Provincial Commissioner's motoring accident, which occurred three weeks ago, no trace of the missing native chauffeur appears to have been discovered. It is rumoured however, that his hat was found at high-water mark in the Nyando River, a considerable distance below the scene of the accident and that his pull-over was discovered a short distance below where the occupants of the car disembarked, well above high-water level.

As the body has not been found, and in view of the above, there appears to be a chance that he is still alive, though it is unlikely that a native would voluntarily abandon even a saturated pull-over. The river in flood would not have been more than about 30 feet wide, and once out of the car an average swimmer would experience little difficulty in reaching one of the banks, which provide a good deal of anchorage in the shape of small trees.

Although the most serious, this is not the first accident that has occurred at this drift, and it is generally considered that a very strong case exists for a bridge, especially as this route is part of the main trunk road system to Uganda.

The traffic is considerable, as between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. nine vehicles passed through Muhoroni yesterday.

What are the Nyanza District Council and the Central Road and Traffic Board doing about it? It is understood that the former body have made representations on more than one occasion in the past.

Lion "Minds The Baby"

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

An African lion in the Zoo has disproved the belief that no lion can be left to "mind the baby." When his wife died six months ago, he took charge of their three-months-old cubs. To replace as far as possible the milk of which they had been deprived, he ate food in order to regurgitate it in a partly digested state for his babies. He is training them carefully but there is a "daddy's boy" among them that takes liberties not permitted to his brother and sister.

Gracie Fields Is Getting Better

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

Pale and thinner, but still smiling, Gracie Fields has gone home from hospital.

"I'm tickled to death to be back in Peacehaven", she said to a reporter.

Doctors Pleased

Mrs. Tommy Fields embraced her sister-in-law outside the house, and with assistance Miss Fields walked slowly indoors.

She went to her pink, flower-decked bedroom overlooking the cliffs and sea.

Later, Mr. Tommy Fields told me: "The doctors are delighted with her progress. She, too, is satisfied that her recovery will be rapid now that she is back home.

Ten Days

"I don't suppose she will be in her room for more than ten days.

"After that she will be able to walk about in the garden.

"It will, of course, be some weeks before she can think of making any professional appearances".

SOME EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS RECEIVED THIS YEAR

Read the letters below. They have all been written during the present year and we are proud indeed to publish them. After this there should be no doubt in your mind as to where to take your car for oiling and greasing, and general repairs.

Ford Service

"I have found the Service at Carr, Lawson's very satisfactory" (letter No. 69). "I have always been able to get spares for my Ford car from you by return of post" (letter No. 63). "I have always received the most efficient service from you and have been entirely satisfied" (letter No. 75). "After having had my repairs, oiling and greasing, etc. done regularly by you for some months I would like to say how much I appreciate the way the work is done and the pleasant attention one receives" (letter No. 38).

Efficiency

"I appreciate the fact that on each occasion the work has been completed at the time stipulated." (Letter No. 46.)

"I should like to say how much we appreciate the work done on our car recently. . . . I must say I think you have done us proud." (Letter No. 42.)

"The car is running just as sweetly as it did when new, and has been in commission since March, 1936. . . Perhaps the reason for this satisfactory state of affairs is that no one but yourselves has ever done as much as tighten up a nut. . . ." (Letter No. 72.)

"I was most satisfied. . . consider your workshops most efficient." (Letter No. 73.)

Courtesy

"I want to express my warmest thanks to you for your help on many occasions, and for your unfailing kindness and courtesy." (Letter No. 45.)

"I feel I must express my gratitude for favours shown me. . . Attending to my requirements at very short notice. . . and my entire satisfaction with any work done for me in your workshops." (Letter No. 80.)

"I have always found you both willing and obliging." (Letter No. 62.)

Appreciation

"Throughout the nine years of our business transactions I have been given every satisfaction." (Letter No. 47.)

"I have found the service at Carr Lawson's very satisfactory." (Letter No. 69.)

"I consider that your firm is second to none in Nairobi." (Letter No. 81.)

"I am most fully satisfied with repair jobs you have done for me during a period of twenty years. (Letter No. 50.)

ATHLETIC CLUB

Cricket and Hockey Affairs

Nakuru Athletic Club held their Cricket and Hockey meetings last week. At the latter Mr. K. Rodney presided over a large attendance.

Mr. J. W. Sidey was elected Captain for the season, and Messrs. Shelley, Thornthwaite and Mr. Sidey were elected to the Committee. It was unanimously decided that the question of representation of the Club in the Colony matches for the year consists of those players who will be every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and who will play in white shorts, black stockings, white shirts and white caps. Those who do not attend and who refuse to play will be fined, and their names struck off the list. Players or persons who bring discredit to the Club will be dealt with severely.

The Cricket meeting took place on Saturday under the same chairmanship, with a fair number present. Mr. Mr. Wilkinson is this year's Captain and Mr. L. Coote vice-captain. Mr. Wilkinson is also Match Secretary and will send in the names for the Colony matches. Messrs. Holmes and Webster, the three members will form the Committee.

The Cricket season already arranged were confirmed, and further dates will be fixed at the selection committee. It was decided to send eight novices immediately, and that representative matches should be played every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. Members are urged to turn out on Wednesdays and Fridays for practice nets, and not only on Wednesdays. Arrangements were also made for training the unsuccessful players at nets who form other members.

It was explained that in future visitors' lunches and teas would be provided by the Club, while visitors would have to pay for their own.

Golf

The winners of the mixed foursomes played on Sunday afternoon were Miss Anderson and Mr. Holmes and Mrs. Reynolds and Mr. Webster were runners-up.

At the subscription Mrs. Rossel called Mrs. J. C. Griffiths to present the prizes, and Mrs. Hodge, the lady president of the K. L. G. U., made a speech of thanks.

WIZARDS OF THE CUE

Visit Of Inman And Lindrum

Billiards and snooker enthusiasts in Nakuru were given the opportunity by the Rong's Road Hotel of seeing two of the famous cracksmen, Maurice Inman and Horace Lindrum, last Friday night and Saturday morning. It was only on Wednesday that the treat was arranged, so that advertising was necessarily short.

Even so it was very surprising that there was not a greater turnout of spectators on both nights to see an exhibition of this nature, and the attendance must have been a disappointment to the organisers. It is the first time that such players have been loose on country and it was expected that the moderate charges made would have secured a much better send-off.

Those who did turn up were treated to an open exhibition of billiards. No attempt was made to pile up big breaks by nursery cannons but all round play of the highest class was played. Lindrum was in better form than Inman, and compiled breaks of 164 and 119, his best effort being at the top of the table where he played cannon, pot red alternately, the ball control being a joy to watch. Inman's highest break was a 70 and showed that he is master of every shot on the table.

Sparkling Snooker

After an interval Snooker was played, 3 frames to the first hundred. Inman made a break of 76 and the masterly manner in which he was obtained showed that he is a player at the 22 ball game who is going to be heard of for many years to come. Many wondered how he took shots to be the 48-bit of a very successful evening, both shots set up things we never believed could happen on a billiard table. Lindrum's finger spinning being especially clever.

On Saturday morning they gave further exhibitions and Lindrum compiled two breaks of over 100. It is believed that they may return to this country in about 18 months time and one can only advise those who did not see them this time to make sure that they make theirs. There will be no need to remind others, as they are certain to want the opportunity again.

NJORO SETTLERS' ASSOCIATION

A general meeting of Njoro Settlers' Association made a break in Njoro Country Club (Settlers' Section) on Saturday July 29, at 4.30 p.m.

The agenda includes an address by Lady Francis Scott, Hon. Member of Political and Economic Affairs in Kenya.

The Nakuru Players will present two one-act Plays, "Four Roads to Cape" by Gertrude Jennings and "Workhouse Ward" by Lady Gregory.

There will also be supper, song and dance. Non-members are cordially invited.

THE LIBRARY

Books recently received include: "Inside Asia" by John Gunther; "The Open Sea" by C. S. Forester; "Dew on the Grass" by Eleanor Lewis; "All Else Must Perish" by Rachel Field; "My Lucky Star" by Louis Golding; "Be a Gent, Leslie," reminds us a lot of Elinor Wylie; and "The Mortal Storm," by Phyllis Bottome.

A GOLFING GROUP

THE ATHLETIC MEETING

Last year's Nakuru Athletic Meeting proved a great success and was splendidly organised. Another year was said to be the Jubilee in Kenya, and the times best suppost to this function. The same time was broken and for next month's event the ground is now looking even better than it did a year ago. It will be laid out on the same survey.

The jumps have been placed differently, to the advantage of competitor and onlooker alike. Improved arrangements have been made for the spectators, and the new pavilion will provide additional comfort.

The programme is similar to that of last year, with the addition of two ladies' events and a pole vault. The fact that all flat events will be on handicap, will, it is hoped, attract larger fields.

The prize list is fully up to last year's standard, which was greatly appreciated by competitors.

The number of entries already received give promise of greater competition than last year, and a thoroughly enjoyable day's sport should be generated. Entries close officially on August 1, but post entries can probably be arranged.

Events:—On Monday, August 7, starting at 10.0 a.m.: 100 yards Boys under 12 years; 100 yards Girls under 12 years; 100 yards Girls under 12 years; 100 yards Ladies' Open; 100 yards Club Members; 100 yards Open; 200 yards Open; 440 yards Open; 880 yards Open; 1 Mile Open; 120 yards Hurdles; High Jump; Long Jump; Pole Vault; Putting the Shot, Girls' Relay 4 x 110 yards; Boys' Relay 4 x 110; Mixed Relay 4 x 110; Open Relay 4 x 110.

All flat races are handicaps. Relay Race, entry 1/- each with a handicap of 3/-. Children's and ladies' events free.

RIVER RISES 16 FT. IN NIGHT

As a result of exceptionally heavy rain on Saturday the Molo River below Kampi-ya-Moto rose sixteen feet in the night. A cattle boma on one farm was carried away, and the stone pier of a bridge which is nearing completion was also destroyed. The gully about 2 miles to the direction of Elburgon Bridge on the main road was impassable to cars.

KENYA DEFENCE FORCE

Voluntary Parades every month, commenced on Monday, July 24th, at 6.15 p.m. and will be held on subsequent Mondays until further notice, in the compound of the East African Power and Lighting Company's Power Station.

It is hoped that as many members as possible will turn out and it is pointed out that these parades will be of considerable benefit to Class 1 men when they go to Camp in September.

The School Sports

RAIN SPOILS PROGRAMME

There was barely time for half the events in the Nakuru School sports programme to be decided on Saturday before heavy rain fell, and all hope of continuation was abandoned. After a delicious tea had been served to the parents and guests, the prize-giving was carried out so far as the circumstances would allow. Mrs. Hodge, the wife of the Provincial Commissioner, presented the prizes.

It was disappointing that the weather was not kinder. These sports are looked forward to by many in addition to the young competitors and their parents. The ground was looking well after the recent rain, and in all times picturesque. There was a good crowd of onlookers. In front sat the girl scholars on their picnicbaskets. They came down arrayed advantageously in houses, that is to say according to the colours of their blouses, and were then sorted out into age groups. They very smart race while shorts seemed to give rise to a certain amount of anxiety, and some last minute adjustments were made. It was noticeable that pigtails seem to have gone entirely out of fashion, though two plaits are favoured by a small number. The boys lined up on the opposite side of the course, but without colours, indeed it was only by luck that the race, just before rain ended the programme, that the boys were their house colours.

Everyone was as usual very excited. Mothers were trying hard not to forget that they must not urge their sons on by their Christian names, and that the really right thing to do was to shout the name of the house. The fathers for the most part stood behind, and though their interest in the events was no less keen, their demonstration was not so concentrated on the children. One heard between the races "my drive at the Alhambra" and "in Madagascar, where they were grown originally . . ."

THE RESULTS

Results of the racing and other events are appended.

'Tell me, doctor . . .

Are you sure? I can't believe that all this should have started with a tiny cut on the finger! There must be some way of preventing such awful results . . . Tell me, what ought I to do?'

The smallest cut or scratch is enough for the germs of blood-poisoning to enter. There is only one way to prevent their invasion; they must be killed—at once. 'Dettol,' the Modern Antiseptic, can be applied instantly. 'Dettol' is gentle and tender on human tissues, non-poisonous and non-irritating to the skin—yet death to germs. You should use 'Dettol'.

British Policy in China

Those who expect the British Government, and Mr. Chamberlain with his persisting regard for "appeasement," to back down before Japanese threats and agitation will no doubt search the wording of the "formula" agreed upon in Tokyo for confirmation of their worst fears. But if they take a reasonable view and have some little faith in the moral conscience which at times of stress comes to the aid of British political judgment, they will find nothing in that formula which means a step leading to the ultimate sacrifice of the interests in European nations in the Far East. It must be remembered of course, that Great Britain, more than any other nation, carries a heavy responsibility for the maintenance of these interests, in addition to her own great trade, financial and strategic concern in Far Eastern developments, and the position which has been built up over very many years, and is important in relation to Imperial security, could not lightly be sacrificed or even jeopardised over a comparatively minor incident such as that at Tientsin.

But if the Tientsin situation was not to be allowed to develop into something much worse, involving an added strain on Anglo-Japanese friendship and probably raising in a war atmosphere the whole question of foreign concessions in China, diplomacy was needed to find some workable basis for the Tokyo talks. These conversations have only begun and may even now come to nothing, but it is at least an advance that a beginning has been made. Britain has merely recognised inescapable facts in facing the situation created by a Japanese army of occupation—which does not mean recognition of conquest—and in those regions the British Government is only promising to take adequate steps to observe strict neutrality both through her own local authorities and her nationals in the area, thereby minimising the chances of conflict and providing some hope that as far as is possible normal intercourse and trade will carry on in the difficult circumstances of a large-scale war.

It has been insisted from the beginning that the Tokyo talks must deal primarily with the Tientsin situation, a situation which arose from a Japanese assertion that Chinese were using the Concession, with the knowledge of the neutral British authorities, as a centre for intrigue against the Japanese armed forces. In all the circumstances the view of the Japanese army leaders was not unreasonable, having regard to their difficult and indeed depressing situation, and there can be no decrease in British prestige in the East by an agreement that in future neither her own nationals nor foreigners will be permitted to use British Concessions as a secure base for provocative operations.

The new bargain, if such it can be called, is clearly based on the broad obligations and responsibilities of neutrality and is intended to stabilise conditions and relations in the concessions. It admittedly accepts a wider understanding of the purely Japanese point of view as an invading force, but failure to do so would have clearly involved Britain in the open taking of sides in the quarrel in the war area. Mr. Chamberlain has made it quite clear that the British Government has no intention of changing its foreign policy by threats either in the East or elsewhere and the Government reserves the right to employ its acknowledged friendliness to the Chinese struggle in all legitimate directions. That is why sections of the Japanese Press are dissatisfied. They realise that the British Government has not been moved by the campaign of insult and disorder organised by the Japanese army in China against British people and interests. They realise that what has been achieved is merely an acknowledgment of certain patent facts, and from that acknowledgment will follow certain clear responsibilities which the Japanese will have equally to face in their future relations with Britain in China. Whether Japan intends to do so will soon be apparent.

In the meantime the Tientsin dispute is a step nearer solution and has been deliberately localised against the background of war conditions. Mr. Chamberlain could have gone no further, even had he wished to do so. The British people, tolerant though they are, would not stand for many more insults at the hands of the Japanese and the Prime Minister was well aware of the state of public opinion. The Tokyo politicians are by no means the same thing as the Army commanders but it will rest with Tokyo to take steps to see that the army in China is brought under proper control so far as its relations with British people are concerned. If the present bargain is not kept, Britain has many other means at her disposal of making her friendly attitude to Chiang Kaishek still more usefully benevolent from the Chinese point of view, including throwing her weight into the struggle which is going on between the Chinese dollar and the Japanese yen in North China. It is significant that General Chiang himself sees no real departure from British policy in the Tokyo formula.

Success of Exhibition

The Railway Rolling Stock Exhibition, which was held last week-end—on Friday, Saturday and Sunday—was an unqualified success from every point of view. Discussing it yesterday, Mr. Kirkland, acting Chief Mechanical Engineer, who was responsible for the organisation, said that from the Railway's point of view it was a very considerable success and they were glad of the opportunity of "showing off their wares." The response by the public was most gratifying, and although no check of the number of visitors was taken, it is roughly computed that over 2,500 Europeans, about 10,000 Asians, and almost 15,000 Africans saw the exhibition. The busiest day was Sunday, especially in the evening, and this in spite of a shower of rain.

The R.A.F. Tragedy

The Executive Council of the Ahmadiyya Muslim Association, assembled at a meeting on Sunday, passed the following resolution: "The council is shocked by the very sad demise of Lieut. F. C. Camp and Corporal D. C. Smith, under very tragic circumstances on Saturday last, and places on record their heartfelt sorrow and grief and a profound sympathy with the Royal Air Force who have lost their two valuable comrades and with the relatives and friends of these who gave their lives in a noble cause." The President and the General Secretary were deputed to attend the funeral service.

Crocodile as Exhibit at the Museum

The female crocodile measuring 13ft. (writes a Zanzibar correspondent) which was discovered at Mtende, is now on view at the Museum extension. Excitement was caused when the crocodile was found dead on the beach on June 27. It is thought probable that, straying out of the mouth of some mainland river, it had been caught in the current and drifted over to Zanzibar. It is interesting to note that only once before has a similar happening occurred, when a crocodile was found alive on the beach at Chwaka in 1917.

SOVIET'S NAVAL STRENGTH

Warning To Japan

Moscow, July 25.

The Soviet Commissar for the Navy stated today that the Soviet now had more submarines than Japan and Germany put together. There were more than 100 Russian warships in Far Eastern waters in addition to smaller craft.

He continued: "The best guarantee against the danger of attack on the Soviet Union is the growing strength of our armed forces. Some of our restless neighbours in the Far East will need a lesson from these forces before they realise that our frontiers are inviolable."

Colonial Office Controversy

London, July 25.

The recent appointment of Sir George Gater, formerly Clerk to the London County Council, as Permanent Under Secretary to the Colonial Office has caused much comment and Mr. Chamberlain was questioned today about it. He was asked if there was no civil servant capable of discharging the duties and it was suggested that the appointment of Sir George Gater might upset and discourage the civil service.

The Prime Minister replied that having regard to the exceptional pressure on several departments he was satisfied that no equally suitable civil servant could have been made available. He said the salary and conditions of the appointment would be the same as if the post had been filled from within the Service.—(Reuter).

Native Dietary: A Valuable Report

London, July 25.

A report on nutrition in the Colonial Empire published today is the first comprehensive survey of the question ever attempted.

Investigation had shown few parts of the Colonial Empire where diet gave adequate nutrition. Judged by European standards it lacked building and protective value. It was predominantly vegetarian and apt to be low in first class proteins, fats, green leafy vegetables and strange to say, fruit. Only small quantities of meat figure in the dietary and milk is rare.

It is urged that money spent on nutrition would be a sound investment.

The two main causes of malnutrition were found to be low standard of living and ignorance coupled with prejudice. It is suggested that agricultural and health departments should co-operate with a view to achieving a balanced agriculture. All State labourers should be provided with land to cultivate gardens and keep animals.

Where natural milk is not available it is urged that there should be imports of dried skimmed milk.

FARMING PROGRESS IN NORTHERN TANGANYIKA

Need For Creamery In Cooperation With Kenya

[FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT]

The annual general meeting of the Arusha Branch of the Tanganyika Farmers' Association was held recently at Arusha. Great importance was attached to this meeting owing to the recent development of the dairy industry in the Northern Province, which will undoubtedly [illegible]

[illegible] a comprehensive scheme for a creamery which there is every reason to believe will meet with Government approval.

Chairman's Report

The Chairman, Brig.-Gen. Boyd Moss, addressed the meeting on the work done in the past year. In his report he said:—

"The T.F.A. has now been in existence for over a year and a half. A very great deal has been done in that time and I think farmers are beginning to realise that organisation and co-operation are essential if we are to make a success of farming in Tanganyika.

"The progress made by the farming community during the past year is largely due to Mr Anderson and Mr Hinds, who have given up so much of their time serving on the Dairy and Livestock Committee, and also to Mr. D'Avico who has done so much to organise the wheat growers.

"It will be remembered that the Association took up the question of the Pounds Ordinance with Government. An amended Pounds Ordinance has now been passed which accepts the recommendations made by this Association and does away with the anomalies of the previous Pounds Amendment Ordinance.

"Another question which we took up was the establishment of clean areas and compulsory dipping. An ordinance relating to diseases of animals has now been passed which deals with both these points, and empowers the Governor to declare compulsory dipping areas and also authorises the grant of money on loan to farmers for the erection of dips in these areas.

"The thanks of the Association are due to Mr Anderson for helping to get these Ordinances through the Legislative Council.

"On August 12 last year a deputation of the T.F.A. met the Governor and discussed many matters affecting the farming industry of the Northern Province and most of the points discussed have been satisfactorily settled.

Development Memorandum

"Development Committees have been sitting for some months to advise Government as to the development of Tanganyika. A memorandum was prepared by the T.F.A. and sent on to the Northern Province Committee dealing with the establishment of a Creamery, Experimental Farm, Clean Areas and the making of a road round Mount Meru.

"The Northern Province Dairy Committee, of which Mr Anderson and Mr. Hinds were members, sat for about a fortnight and prepared a carefully thought out scheme for a central creamery and other measures for the improvement of the cattle industry in the Northern Province.

"Although it may not be possible to obtain sufficient money for all their recommendations, we may feel assured that the Government fully realise the importance of the creamery and the vital necessity of assisting the dairy industry of the Northern Province. We have some of the finest cattle country in Africa and there is every reason to hope that the industry will become one of the most prosperous in the Colony.

"A Wheat Committee has been formed under the chairmanship of Mr D'Avico and a most satisfactory arrangement has been made with the K.F.A. for the sale of Northern Province wheat. There appears to be a great future for the wheat growers in the province if close co-operation is maintained with Kenya. A letter on the subject has been sent to the Government and it is hoped that legislation will be passed at the next session of the Legislative Council establishing a Wheat Board.

Legislative Measures

Mr. Anderson then addressed the meeting on the Bills which have been recently passed in Legislative Council dealing with the farming industry, chiefly the Pounds (Amendment) Ordinance 1939 and the Animal Diseases Ordinance 1939. The passing of these two measures has given great satisfaction to farmers, particularly the part of the Animal Diseases Ordinance relating to Clean Areas and Compulsory Dipping. Mr Anderson explained that single farms as well as blocks could be declared clean areas.

The meeting decided to ask the Senior Veterinary Officer, Arusha, to address farmers on clean areas and dipping tanks.

Mr. du Toit suggested that enquiries should be made into the cost and suitability of the Australian [illegible]

In discussing the wheat industry of the Northern Province [illegible] that it was essential that the wheat farmers should be protected if wheat growing was to be economically possible and expressed great satisfaction with the recent agreement reached between the wheat committee and the K.F.A. whereby the year's crop has been disposed of at a reasonable figure.

Wheat Board

A letter to the Chief Secretary was read asking for the establishment of a Wheat Board and the passing of the necessary legislation. It was felt that if Government could [illegible] a very good basis.

The Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Anderson and Mr. Hinds for their work on the Northern Province Dairy Committee and to Mr. D'Avico for his efforts on behalf of the wheat growers.

Mr. du Toit, in seconding, expressed his gratitude and appreciation of the great amount of time given up by these members in the interests of Northern Province farmers.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

SONGHOR FARMERS' SIDE-LINES

Learning From Mistakes

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Songhor, July 21.

So much has been written about Songhor this year that it might be of interest to readers were some of the leading facts recalled. Here are quotations from people who have studied the district and have given their own thoughts to their subject.

[illegible]

However, planters say that "Owing to the warm climate, fertile soil and heavy rainfall, high costs are involved in weeding and pruning." Nowadays, unfortunately, coffee does not bring in the golden ducats of the early years. Costs are high in comparison with districts such as Kyambu, where weed growth is much less luxuriant and the soil is lighter to cultivate. One notices several farmers here using small ploughs in the coffee to cope with the luxuriant growth at a cost within their means.

"The present depression is [illegible] [illegible] prices ruling during the immediate post-war period farmers reinvested most of their profits in extending the area under crops, often on land which ultimately proved uneconomic for crop production—an almost inevitable happening in pioneering an unproved district. The world-wide slump in agricultural commodities was also a bad shock."

Side-Lines

It will be agreed that there is always hope when mistakes are admitted like this and when a keen desire to rectify these mistakes is shown. Within recent years many farmers in the Songhor area have started to launch out into side-lines. Several people are already building up herds, some grade, others native. Poultry is likewise proving a success, while other farmers are devoting their attention to crops such as tobacco, fruit, and the new line of Kweme-nuts.

This week further interest in the latter has been shown, and plantings are extending. The planting of pyrethrum is taking place on the upper slopes, and at the lower altitude experiments are being carried out to find its toxic content at an unusually low altitude. Some of the daisies in an experimental plot were picked this week and measured as much as 1½ ins. diameter. These are from splits planted out at the end of April. Another activity in the district is the planting of live fences for paddocks.

It is unfortunate that progress usually depends to a great extent on £.s.d. and it matters not how active and full of ideas a farmer may be if he has not the wherewithal to launch out and prove these ideas.

Since all visiting experts have agreed that the district is eminently suitable for cattle, one hears the subject discussed on every side. There are undoubtedly pros. and cons. when grade versus native stock is the subject of debate. For those farmers who are establishing native herds a visit to Baraton Experimental Station would be well worth while. It is an amazing and heartening show. A process of severe culling (which after all is good animal husbandry) together with dipping, fencing, and hand rearing have produced a truly astounding result. The native cow is by no means to be scoffed at. Those farmers who can go ahead with native stock will see at Baraton a pleasing and not unattainable goal. The grazing does not appear to be better than that in Songhor-Muhoroni; indeed, some people think that it is not up to the standard of the latter. By the way though, if one wants to see anything at all on a stock farm the best times to call are the morning and evening milking times.

Moderate Climate

It has been mentioned that the climate of Songhor is warm, but what exactly does warm mean? This week, from a point of interest, maximum and minimum shade temperatures have been recorded in Lower Songhor at an altitude of 4,600 feet. The readings for six days show a maximum variation of three degrees 76 to 73 — while the minimum was 64 on five days and 63 on the sixth. People in the Homeland would be amazed that those temperatures could prevail on the equator.

A recent visitor from the South of England was impressed by the many varieties of English flowers, apparently very much at home in the gardens here. Snapdragons, chrysanthemums, roses etc. grow luxuriantly, showing that the district has scope for other members of the family as well as for the farmer himself.

At dairy farms in the same altitude, butter is made with no difficulty throughout the year; indeed at this time of year it can be "worked" at 10 o'clock in the morning—facts that give the lie to any idea of extreme heat. These points illustrate the conditions in Lower Songhor for the greater part of the year, at an altitude which puts no great strain on heart or lungs.

Jerusalem, July 25.

A further letter has been received from the American clergyman who is being held to ransom by bandits. The letter indicates that he was alive and well last night and his early release is expected.—(Reuter).

SUPPORT FOR LIEBIGS: A RUMURUTI RESOLUTION

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Rumuruti.

A public meeting was held at the Laikipia Club, Rumuruti, on Saturday. Mr. Weld was in the chair, and the Hon. E. H. Wright, M.L.C., Mr. Hopkins, the Provincial Commissioner, and Captain Richie, the Game Warden, attended and answered numerous questions.

The question of supplies of culls to Liebigs came up first. Mr. Chamberlein, the District Veterinary Officer, said that the first trainload would leave Thomson's Falls about the beginning of August, and that the trains thereafter would run twice weekly, and that ample notice would be given to farmers as to when to send their cattle. He urged all stock-owners to send as many culls as possible.

Mr. Wright strongly supported Mr. Chamberlein in this, saying that Liebigs had had a raw deal from Government in the past.

Mr. Armstrong asked if anything could be expected from the Samburu. The Provincial Commissioner answered that 600 had already gone and that he thought it would be a good idea if the Samburu hut tax could be commuted to a stock tax.

The following resolution was put and carried unanimously:—

"That this public meeting appreciates the action of Government and co-operation of Liebigs in the reopening of the factory, and trusts that this District will help in keeping the factory open to the best of its ability."

Capt. Richardson asked whether it was true that there was a test in America for the biological diagnosis of measles in the living animal.

Mr. Chamberlein replied that there was a test, something like the tuberculin test, but that there had been no definite success with it as yet.

Mr. Dykes asked if members of the Game Department shooting buffalo would send slides to the laboratory, as buffalo in this District had almost been proved to carry East Coast fever.

Concerning Game Control. Mr Ayre was not able to be present, but Capt Richie, as a member of the Game Policy Committee, answered questions. It was decided that the Laikipia Farmers' Association Committee, with one member from Thomson's Falls, should act as a local committee to hear evidence from farmers of damage done by game. The meeting also approved of Capt Richie's suggestion of simultaneous game control in Laikipia, Samburu and Nanyuki, and requested the application of it as soon as possible.

Major Edwards asked if the Taru Desert could be used as a game park. Capt Richie replied that the Game Policy Committee was going to look over the region between Taveta and Voi; in many ways it would be suitable, but it had very few scenic advantages and at certain times of the year it was difficult to see game.

Mr. Hopkins asked if the Northern Reserve could not be put aside for the bigger and rarer animals. Capt Richie said the Northern Game Reserve was ideal as a game park with some of the finest scenery in Africa, but the big objection of its being used as such was that it carried a native burden.

The meeting ended with a hearty vote of thanks to Capt. Richie and the veterinary officers for attending.

TRAGEDY ON GOLF COURSE

EUROPEAN FOUND SHOT

A groundsman employed on High Ridge Golf Course, Nairobi, was beginning his day's work on the course yesterday when he came upon the body of a European lying on the ground with a bullet-wound through the temple. A small automatic pistol was lying nearby.

The body was later identified as that of Mr. Herbert Vickerstaff, a married man with four children, who formerly owned a farm in the Kitale district and had recently come to Nairobi.

It appears that he left the house at which he was staying in Parklands, about 8 o'clock on Monday night and was not seen after that.

An inquest will be held.

INSPECTION FROM THE AIR

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Dar es Salaam, July 21.

The cotton crop in Rufiji this year is expected to be a record for the District. This will result from the planting up of fresh areas, especially in the Magongo hills to the north, in other outlying districts and from the constant air survey of the District on behalf of the District Officer, Capt. D. A. G. Dallas and Mr. S. Stenhouse, Agricultural Officer.

The chiefs' reports as to the areas they have under planting have been checked from the air with remarkable facility and the condition of the shambas has been noted. Where cleaning or clarifying has been needed, air-observation has been speedy and instructions have been sent to the natives concerned so expeditiously that respect for the inspecting plane is now established in Rufiji.

Rice Plentiful

Rice this year will be plentiful because the river spate came so late that none was damaged by flood—as usually happens. Mlau plantings of cotton and maize however will be late in consequence though they will be good.

There has been a record season of Arab and Persian dhows trading for mangrove poles in the delta and Dr. Eric Knoechel who superintended the business this year for the Liverpool Uganda Co. has been extremely busy moving about the mangrove swamps, controlling the loading of the dhows. As last year's cotton in Eastern Rufiji failed he was spared from his cotton ginning at Mtomeni to do the Delta timber work.

A very effective rat trap has been introduced into the district by Mr. A. Stenhouse. One of these traps at Mohoro caught over one hundred rats in a single night. It consists of an ordinary narrow-necked earthenware pot, half filled with water, sunk in the ground and a small bait of some food not common in the vicinity being suspended over the mouth of the pot by a long wand and line. Rats scrambling and fighting to reach this fall into the pot and are drowned.

The Weather

The British East African Meteorological Service yesterday supplied the following note on the weather:

Rain has continued over the Kenya Highlands and in Uganda. The principal falls reported this morning were Timboroa, 0.9"; Thomson's Falls, 0.8"; and Nanyuki, 0.5".

Upper winds continue variable and humidity remains fairly high. Rain will occur over the Kenya Highlands and in Uganda. Elsewhere weather will be mainly fine with only scattered showers.

UGANDA LOCUST REPORT

The Uganda Locust Summary for the first half of July states:—

WEST NILE.—Few reports have been received from chiefs and the position appears less menacing. One swarm is centred in northern counties, a swarm 1 x 1½ miles passed over Rhino Camp on the 8th flying south.

LANGO.—Further increases of the number of flying swarms and of the damage to food crops are reported.

KARAMOJA.—A telegram dated July 8 stated that scattered bands of hoppers were present in Labwor and Jie Counties. Destruction of hoppers in Labwor was being directed [illegible] [illegible] Bugangaizi) and returned north to Singo County on the 5th.

TORO.—The district is practically free from Locusts. The infestation of Nomadacris in Busongora County persists and no egg-laying has occurred there. Large bands of hoppers have appeared in the sparsely inhabited Lake Albert flats. Fliers are doing considerable damage west of Ruwenzori.

ACHOLI.—A telegram dated July [illegible] plots of Eleusine had been caused in these southern areas of the [illegible] district.

In CHUA hoppers were still generally distributed and increasing numbers were reaching the winged stage, flights being without definite direction. Fairly extensive damage had been caused to crops.

Flying swarms were reported to be generally distributed in MADI. Considerable damage to 695 plots of Eleusine was recorded, but it was thought that the damage was likely to be more serious than the figure indicated.

BUNYORO.—Small immature flying swarms were recorded at four places in the south-western half of the district and a larger immature swarm arrived at Bulindi from the east, departing south the following day; a fairly large swarm approaching maturity passed westwards near Hoima on the 28th. Hopper bands, stated to have crossed the Kafu River from Buganda, appeared in two gombololas on the boundary; extensive bands were present also in Kibanda County having originated in the adjoining game reserve, and survivors were reaching the flying stage. Damage was caused to 340 plots of Eleusine and to maize, Sorghum and banana.

TESO.—Many small bands of hoppers had become, or were about to become winged at the end of June. The worst damage to millet plots had occurred in Amuria, Usuku, parts of Ngora and Kumi, and in the lake margin area of Serere Counties.

Central.—No flights were recorded in Bugwere. Further hatchings occurred and action for control was continued.

BUDAMA.—No swarms were present. Hoppers at a few places in the south and east were being destroyed.

MENGO.—Additional egg-laying occurred on the 16th in the south-west; the swarm passed southwards towards Masaka District and appeared to have come from sparsely inhabited northern Singo County. Hoppers developed at further places in northern and eastern Buruli County and in the late Entebbe district. Action for destruction of hoppers were effective except in the north-west of Buruli and Singo Counties.

TORO.—The hoppers of Locusta in eastern counties were completely controlled. Oviposition by Nomadacris on a small scale in Bwamba County was recorded, some of the large swarms of this species in Busongora County moved into Belgian Congo.

P. W. D. AND CONCRETE DRIFT

Improvement Early Next Year

Last week a correspondent in our columns complained regarding a concrete drift on the Athi-Machakos road about four miles from Nairobi House. He held that this particular part was one of the most dangerous on the road and singled it out as a very pressing subject for the attention of the Public Works Department.

The East African Standard yesterday interviewed the Directorate of the Department and were assured by Mr Walmsley, Senior Executive Engineer, who is acting in the absence on safari of Mr Stronach, that the Department were fully aware of the difficulties connected with this drift and that it is down on the programme for attention early next year.

Mr Walmsley pointed out, however, that extensive alterations were at present being made on the Athi-Machakos road and the new Athi Road Bridge would be opened shortly. In consequence the funds available would not stretch meantime to a construction of the drift referred to.

HOSPITAL TOO SMALL

Farmers' Motion At Rumuruti

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Rumuruti.

At a meeting of the Laikipia Farmers' Association on Saturday, two new members Mr. Hudson and Mr. Braun, were elected.

The complete inadequacy of accommodation for patients at the Native Civil Hospital at Rumuruti was considered, and the Provincial Commissioner announced that the Medical Department [illegible]

[illegible] the next meeting of the Legislative Council. It was decided that the Laikipia Farmers' Association Committee, with Dr. Searle and the District Commissioner, would collect data to give to Mr. Wright.

The proposed system of fire rangers was discussed, and after a vote on the subject it was decided to send a letter to the Arbor Society, stating that the system was not necessary in this District.

Remission of Rents

Next on the agenda was the question of the remission of rents to farmers in the drought and locust-stricken areas [illegible] [illegible] that he had written to the Land and Settlement Board and that he was sure their case would be sympathetically considered.

The following resolution was carried: "That this Association considers that there should be a complete remission of rents to farmers in any area which is drought and locust stricken."

On the subject of Road allocation funds, a resolution was passed to the effect that the present funds were inadequate for the roads in the district, being £4 per mile less than roads in other districts received.

Mr. Wright spoke strongly on the proposed Government plan to settle the Abyssinian refugees on land belonging to the White Highlands, and a resolution was passed resisting any proposal whereby the Abyssinian refugees shall get access, temporary or otherwise, to White Highlands in North Kenya or anywhere else.

Kenya Airman In Road Crash

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT] Shabani, S. Rhodesia.

Pilot Officer Geoffrey Ross of Kenya was involved in a car accident at Shabani on Saturday night July 15, when a car he was driving had a head-on crash with another car driven by Mr J. G. Barkhuis of Shabani.

The drivers were the only occupants of the respective cars, and each received minor cuts. Mr. Ross sustained a slight cut on the forehead and another on the knee.

The cars were both badly damaged, that of Barkhuis was so badly battered as to be almost beyond repair. The foremost part of the chassis was thrust back beneath the engine while the front axle was ripped from under the spring bolts. Ross's car received less damage, and it is likely that he will be able to start on the return trip to Kenya within the next few days.

The case appeared before the Assistant Magistrate at Shabani when Barkhuis was found guilty of negligent or reckless driving, and fined £7.10/- or seven days' imprisonment with hard labour.

Mr Ross who has spent the past fortnight at Shabani, has announced his engagement to Miss Z. Thomas of the Shabani Mine Nursing Staff. He was to have started the return motor journey to Kenya on Monday July 17.

A BABEL OF BIRDS

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Dar es Salaam, July 21.

The Rufiji naturalist and hunter Mr. R. de la B. Barker reports an interesting visit to a breeding place of waders and water birds at the outlet of one of the large lakes in the district. The trees, flooded below at this time of the year, reach across the outlet and for an area of several acres are one mass of crying, squeaking and calling fledglings of egrets, herons, cormorants and snake-birds or darters.

A python replete with eggs and young birds lay on the stick platforms, which make the nests. Natives came to raid the fledglings and roast them against future use, and crocodiles below gobbled cormorant fledglings learning to fly and take off from the water.

By day the noise of the hungry fledglings could be heard two miles away. Ospreys sat on the dry limbs of a dead tree eating choice chicks when they felt so inclined. Thousands of lungfish fed below on the small meat which the youngsters disgorged when frightened or captured and which their parents had but recently disgorged into the babies bills.

NEW SCOTS MINISTER

Career Of The Rev. H. A. Howieson

The Rev H. A. Howieson, M.A., who was on Sunday inducted to the charge of St. Andrew's Church of Scotland a few hours after his arrival in Nairobi, is a native of East Wemyss, Fife, Scotland. He was educated at Edinburgh University, and graduated Master of Arts in 1931 [illegible]

[illegible] to the Presbytery of Edinburgh and was for two years assistant at St. Margaret's Church of Scotland, Edinburgh. He then went to Colombo, Ceylon, for a year as a temporary chaplain in 1937, and on his return was appointed assistant to the well-known Dr. Fleming of St. Columba's Church of Scotland, Pont Street, London, where he remained for a year and a half.

Before coming out to Nairobi, Mr. Howieson was married. Mrs. Howieson was formerly Miss Clark Wilson, daughter of Dr. Clark Wilson, of London and niece of the Rev. Mr. Youngson, a former minister of St. Andrew's, Nairobi.

Mr. Howieson is favourably impressed with Kenya and expressed particularly his admiration of the fellowship that exists between the churches in Nairobi.

NATIVE BURNED TO DEATH

Shortly after 5.15 yesterday afternoon the Nairobi Fire Brigade with Firemaster Powell assisted by Assistant Firemaster Botha turned out to answer an alarm from Pumwani.

One of the four cubicles was the centre of the fire and natives were endeavouring to extinguish the flames with water.

The brigade soon had the fire under control but when firemen entered they found a Native burned to death. Another was badly burned about the legs.

The cause of the fire was not hard to find; several petrol tins, a brazier and a lamp supplied the answer.

SHAMBA RAIDERS KILLED

Much Damage To Sisal

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Dar-es-Salaam, July 21.

Elephants—shamba raiders—visited the estates belonging to the Amboni Co. at Tanga and did damage estimated at over £1,000.

Permission having been obtained from the Government, Mr. A. Keller with Mr. Basil Reel got on their track, which was fairly easy, as the damaged sisal blazed the trail.

The herd were spotted, a quick aim and one was down. Then another, instead of rushing off, came in the direction of the hunters, who with no other alternative had to shoot and so a second raider was killed.

TANGA P.C.'s RETIREMENT

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT] Dar es Salaam, July 24.

Captain J. L. Berne, O.B.E., has arrived in Dar es Salaam from Tanga preparatory to proceeding on leave pending retirement. Recently Provincial Commissioner of Tanga Province, Captain Berne has served in Tanganyika since April, 1921. He leaves tomorrow.

Educated at Dulwich College, he entered the Army in 1904, in the Royal Irish Regiment, was promoted captain in 1910 and served with the Sierra Leone Battalion, Royal West African Frontier Force, 1907-12.

He served with the Franco-Liberian Boundary Commission in 1908, receiving the thanks of the French Government, and served later with the Anglo-French Boundary Commission.

Appointed assistant district commissioner in the Somaliland Protectorate in 1912, Capt. Berne served in 1914—16 with the Admiralty War Staff, intelligence division. He accompanied the British Mission to Abyssinia on the occasion of the coronation of the Empress Zauditu in 1917, and received the Star of Ethiopia, third class, in 1917.

After being senior assistant secretary to the Government of Tanganyika, in 1921, Capt. Berne was promoted to deputy provincial commissioner in 1931 and to provincial commissioner in 1934.

Cells As Homes For Families

The Police Lines

"I support the amendment. The cubicles referred to during the debate were originally used as cells for solitary confinement; they now house a whole family," declared Councillor Shams-ud-Deen, speaking to a motion dealing with the insanitary condition of the Police lines in Government Road which came before the Nairobi Municipal Council [illegible]

[illegible] the premises to the Ministry of Government signed by Dr Martin dealing with the public health activities of the Council, and urging that representations be made to Government as to the urgent necessity of making the premises habitable.

Council also adopted an amendment by the District Commissioner that a deputation should wait upon the appropriate authority to emphasise the urgency of the recommendation.

The Deputy Mayor, Councillor Wood, said that the condition of the lines had been a [illegible] [illegible] buildings which were far superior to this government building. The Government as the law makers should be the last to break the laws.

"Is it not possible to take action against the Commissioner of Police; he is the landlord of that edifice?" he asked.

Councillor Vasey said he had inspected the premises. He was strongly critical of the state he had found them in. They had got to get away from the theory, he said, that the Crown could do no wrong.

The motion with the proposed addition was carried.

Councillor Cocker, who saw no advantage in the proposed deputation, opposed the amendment. The unsatisfactory state of affairs, he declared, was perfectly well known and needed no stressing.

NO NIGHT SCHOOL FOR AFRICANS

The Native Affairs Committee of the Nairobi Municipal Council after consideration of a memorandum on the subject of evening classes for Africans submitted by the Municipal Native Affairs Officer recommended to Council, which held its monthly meeting yesterday, that the proposal to establish such a school be not approved.

In the memorandum it was stated that one African only had asked for instruction on carpentry whilst there were no applicants for instruction in other industrial subjects; over 40 applicants asked for instruction in typewriting, book-keeping, commercial arithmetic and English.

Council yesterday approved the decision of the Native Affairs Committee.

Councillor Bliss, however, did not agree with the Committee's view. While he did not think it would be easy to provide practical instruction in carpentry without considerable expense (and the N.I.T.D. provided this training) they had to consider that they had 42 applicants in clerical subjects, English and subjects needed by clerks; and the Africans were prepared to pay for the tuition. Clerks should be encouraged to become better clerks.

"Not the Best Method"

Councillor Shams ud Deen said the matter had been thoroughly thrashed out in the Committee and the Committee had come to the conclusion that the classes were not the best method to be adopted.

Councillor Newmark reminded Councillor Bliss that there were commercial schools which could supply the training asked for.

Councillor Wood, the Deputy Mayor, did not think it was the duty of a Local Authority to supplement what had been called the Coat and Collar Brigade. He recalled a comment in this direction made by H.H. the Aga Khan when he had last visited Kenya. Too many were engaged in commerce in relation to the demand and population; more training of artisans was required.

The District Commissioner (Major Sutcliffe) said it was only fair in justice to the Municipal Native Affairs Officer to say that officer naturally desired to advance the Native in any possible sphere. The Natives who had indicated their desire for instruction were prepared to pay and secondly they were mainly already in clerical occupations. So really what they desired was an opportunity in their spare time to gain efficiency in their occupations and to that extent he thought they should sympathise with the efforts of the Municipal Native Affairs Officer. The thoroughly well trained efficient Native clerk was rare.

British Foreign Policy

THE TOKYO TALKS

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—Your report of the preliminary negotiations for the Anglo-Japanese talks on the Tientsin situation seems to indicate that British politicians are contemplating a complete volte-face in their Far Eastern policy. Before this Chinese Godesberg results in another Munich, permit me to raise at least one small voice of protest.

If my reading of the political verbiage quoted in your cabled report in yesterday's issue is correct then the following would appear to have become the British attitude to Japan's rape of China:

(a) We are prepared to recognise that war conditions prevail in China, although the parties concerned are not to be granted belligerent rights. Does not this mean that in return for the unmolested (?) passage of British trading ships to the Treaty Ports, we will condone Japan's policy of aggression, and absolve her as far as we are concerned of the legal and moral responsibilities, which are the "burden" of every belligerent state? To China, we will no doubt apply a high-sounding though callous policy of non-intervention, which means that thousands and possibly even millions of ignorant and unarmed peasants will be systematically machine-gunned, bombed and starved to death. Of course as they are not Jews, benefiting from the protection of wealthy and influential compatriots in other countries, and unlimited publicity in the international Jewish press, their fate will be of little interest to a "Christian" world.

(b) At the dictation of the Japanese military oligarchy, the greatest Empire the world has ever known is to behave itself in Tientsin and keep order on behalf of Japan amongst its unruly subjects, who in the past few months have suffered the indignity of being stripped in public for no reason whatsoever. We are also to prevent Tientsin from becoming the centre of anti-Japanese plotting, and so the hollow farce goes on.

(c) Britain is to retain full sovereignty in the Concession, and on paper Britain probably does. But Japan is in a position to take away the paper sovereignty as soon as she feels strong enough to do so, because under (a) Japan is free to work out her own salvation in defiance of all the laws of warfare, and, even if this proved ineffective, under (b) she could always claim that we had not carried out our side of the bargain, on a hypothetical charge of countenancing anti-Japanese plotting in Tientsin.

Baron Hiranuma, the Japanese Prime Minister, hits the nail on the head when he reveals that agreement will only be reached on a basis of recognition of the annexation of Manchukuo and the military adventure in China, and the withdrawal of our support of the Chiang Kai-shek regime.

If you want an acid test of this, watch the Chinese dollar. On Friday last, it fell to 4d.—a new low record. Britain and the U.S. can save the dollar, and keep the Chungking Government going. If it crashes, Japan will be able to flood North China with her paper currency, and there you have the real condition for the settlement of the Tientsin dispute. Japan will then have financial as well as military control of Northern China, Chiang-Kai-shek will not be able to buy badly-needed armaments for his troops, and the Japanese military machine will do the rest.

And then, dear reader, you will be able to add China to your list of totalitarian successes — Abyssinia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Memel, Spain and ultimately perhaps even you.

Sic transit gloria mundi.

Yours etc.,
VIGILANT.

THE PRICE OF WHEAT

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—In your issue last Thursday was a note that the price of wheat on the Liverpool Exchange fell on Thursday to 3/7¼ per 100 lbs. This was lower than during the slump of 1931 and was the lowest price recorded for three and a half centuries. In your Saturday's issue appeared the news, that the price had fallen to Shs. 3/6.

I should like to ask if any of your readers can inform me authoritatively of the purchasing power of the £ sterling in 1589 compared with today. This would provide a better basis of comparison of the real fall in value of wheat as the £ is not a fixed measure of value but declines with time.

Yours, etc.,
"FARMER".

GREECE AND ITALY

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—For Fascists to reply to Mr. Matsis' letter is quite comprehensible, but when an individual, afraid of disclosing his name and yet unashamedly declaring that he is a Rhodes Orthodox, born of Greek-speaking parents, thought fit to reply with sarcasm to Mr. Matsis and others defending the cause of his own Mother-land, this is beyond understanding.

I thought that after the reply of Mr. Matsis to your two Fascist correspondents, the matter was closed, but after the letter published in your issue of July 21 under the nom de plume "Rhodiotus" I feel compelled to reply to him as follows:

1. When he is deriding "Mr Matsis and Company", it will be a good thing for "Rhodiotus" to know that "Company" in this case means the whole of Greece including the real and true Greek patriots living in the Dodecanese (don't be afraid, this name doesn't belong to him).

2. As to his sarcastic remark that Mr. Matsis is a British subject "by interest" this formula is unknown to us living under free Democratic skies; We welcome however the information that such a formula exists and this confirms up to the hilt the denunciation of Mr. Matsis regarding the Dodecanese paradise since the Italian occupation of the Greek islands, where most certainly Italian subjects "by interest" exist. (As per example of "Rhodiotus" good self).

3. If he "Rhodiotus" had at any time any respect and love for the great blue and white Flag of our beloved Greece and if he cared at all about the sufferings of his fellow-countrymen (those who are ignorant of the formula "Subjects by interest") or anything about the bitterness which we free Greeks feel when even the word Dodecanese is mentioned, he would never dream of expressing his anti-patriotic views.

4. Though legally he is free to express (in a Democratic country only) his views and take advantage of a free Democratic press, morally "Rhodiotus" is bound to respect the hospitality offered to him and so save people the trouble of reminding him that he is merely a guest of British East Africa.

5. It is quite likely that he has been sent here for work in the interest of his present rulers, but as a Greek I deeply regret that one with the mentality of "Rhodiotus" ever landed in British East Africa where the whole Greek population, together with our brothers in Greece, honour and respect their traditional protectors.

GEORGE ALEXANDER.

ASTRONOMICAL QUERIES

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—Mr. A. S. Corden is mistaken in supposing that I have quoted from some out-of-date book on astronomy. "Wonders of the Sky" is reviewed in the Journal of the British Astronomical Association for January 1939 as "a short, up-to-date account of elementary astronomy written in an easy and pleasing style calculated to interest the 'lay' reader and to sow the seeds of enthusiasm in the young beginner, much as did the popular books of the author's illustrious father". It is "recommended as an introduction to astronomy for those unacquainted with but mildly interested in, the science."

Yours, etc.,
C. R. SPIERS.

IGNORANT CHILDREN

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."

Sir,—I read with interest the two articles that appeared in your esteemed paper of 18th instant—one by Mr. Hussey formerly the Director of Education Uganda and Nigeria and the other a leading article under the heading "Ignorant Children." The matter being of general interest, I feel inclined to discuss it in the light of my experience and observation extending over a period of 10 years in the education line.

The failure of a certain number of pupils in an English school to answer satisfactorily questions on the East African territories has been considered a matter of immense astonishment both by Mr. Hussey and yourself. My object in writing this letter is to show that the so-called appalling ignorance, which has been viewed with so much surprise is not only of common occurrence obtaining everywhere but also quite a natural and proper one on the part of the pupil world, and, as such, the grave anxiety and commotion that has been made will appear just trivial and merely frivolous if the matter be viewed from the view-point of a child.

Mr. Hussey observes that it is disappointing to find boys and girls leaving schools without having been made aware of the simplest facts about African Colonies at a time when they must face the Colonial Question in its international aspect. But, if it be natural and necessary for the adult citizens to take interest in such questions, it should not lead us to expect that even the children of elementary schools necessarily and reasonably feel interested in them, as the interests of parents and children cannot be identical. Children are citizens only in miniature and in the making. Their mental, moral, physical and emotional development is gradual. It has become a general tendency these days to expect every imaginable thing from the pupils and to frown at even a little ignorance of certain matters on their part, which in my humble opinion is not reasonable.

Mr. Hussey has mentioned with surprise the case of a student who thought Kenya was a town about 250 miles from London. In this connexion, it may be pointed out that the conceptions of children regarding time and space are very vague and they seldom see with the eyes of the adults. Again, similar questions would be answered similarly everywhere. Even the European and other children in the African Territories reveal a similar ignorance not only with regard to the countries far off but with regard to Europe and England, as also the country in which they actually live. I don't think it should be at all disappointing to see elementary pupils remaining unaware about the economic importance and problems of Java, Sumatra, Borneo, Philippine Islands, Fiji, Alaska, Labrador, Gilbert Islands, Tanganyika, as also their situation. (Not to mention Jamaica, Dominica, Antigua, Barbados, Tobago, St. Lucia, Grenada, Bermuda etc., etc.).

The countries which formed the subject matter of the questions put to the elementary pupils of England might appear among the most important of the African Dependencies to the adult and advanced politicians and explorers, but to the small children they might seldom appear so. The Editorial mentions with a tone of anxiety and sadness that "these children will be among the next generation of Trustees!" But it may be said that this anxiety is like that of an over—anxious old millionaire who may beat his forehead at learning that his only son of 12 years of age knew nothing about Income Tax, death duties, interest, bills, documents, transfer of properties, wills and probates, assets and liabilities etc., without thinking for a moment that he himself was equally ignorant at that age. Poor Little Tommy is playing with marbles and shells, just as old Daddy in days past chased mice and butterflies and did not hunt lions and tigers!

Why not take a more liberal and reasonable view that they will know all that is necessary for them at the proper age and time, and why not trust and hope that they will manage like their ancestors their heritage and bequest dexterously, and ably tackle the colonial questions in their respective capacities either as citizens or custodians of the Empire? It is a general experience that a great deal that is not necessary is even forgotten in after life and what is necessary is learnt afresh. To resort to a reasoning of induction per simple enumeration is just like a case of a gentleman who recently condemned vehemently a big secondary school simply because his son failed to pass a particular Cambridge Certificate examination and his relative's son could not follow a particular school syllabus. Should we pass over all that children, as children, know and think that all is not well and bright simply because there is a negative something?

There is no harm but a definite gain in revising and thoroughly overhauling the curricula and the methods of education; but there is every danger and no way out in keeping the curriculum open, like a cosmopolitan public register, to any and every imaginable item and for everybody's fresh and novel suggestions. This way, the very purpose for which the curricula are made would be defeated.

I would conclude by saying that children are children after all and will ever remain so in spite of all the adults' imaginary fears and anxiety about them. Nothing will bear fruit prematurely. We should not expect grey heads on green shoulders. The lack of knowledge on the part of children should have rather been taken humorously and jocundly......"Enjoy, enjoy my boys, it is the time of spring and merriment!"

Yours, etc.,
"CHILDREN'S ADVOCATE."

This Queer World

These Stories Made News

London, July 27.

An excellent plan for helping refugees was suggested yesterday by Professor Brunsvicky, of Leeds University, although whether it is practical can be doubted. He suggested that an international loan of £500,000,000 should be raised to help them. "The whole refugee problem" he said at a Leeds conference "could be converted into an opportunity for developing backward countries. The hundreds of thousands of refugees would be the strongest factor for democracy."

When Count Ciano visited the Yugoslav capital recently, the police escorted the police to "give the Italian Foreign Minister a welcome deserved by a nation which is friendly to us in times of difficulty." And such was the confidence in the goodwill of the people that the order was given and enforced for all cafes, bars, cinemas and shops to be closed during the visit. No one was allowed to look out of windows along the route; doors had to be locked, and were guarded.

Kismet—and Tosh—Pope's Ring

The Pope had his pontifical ring taken on Friday, July 24th during an audience to 1,000 people from all parts of the globe. The Pope has had the ring kissed by a man and was proceeding to the person next in the line when there were cries of "Your ring, your ring." A Noble Guard drew the Pope's attention to it. The Pope went back to the man, who returned the ring to him. The ring is a fine emerald surrounded by large diamonds. It was also revealed that the Holy Father is starting another big building scheme, lost one of his cuff-links. A search arrived at four Vatican rings £100 and saying the writer wished to keep the cuff-link as a souvenir.

At last somebody is thinking about the poor fellow in his hard seat. The corncrake, which is about as big as a sparrow, and which is the water-hen family, seems to be disappearing. The Wild Life Committee is to conduct a nation-wide census in the summer and autumn to find out what is happening to them. It is a great friend of the farmer and helps him to destroy grubs and insects. It is feared they are quite extinct and they seem to be disappearing from the country. The census has been organised by the British Trust for Ornithology. More than 1,000 observers—amateur bird watchers and others—will take part.

Partner for "Adam"

Joseph Epstein, sculptor of "Adam," which was put on show at Bloch's last week, has been commissioned to carve a companion figure of Eve. The work will be started as soon as suitable stalwarter is obtained. "Adam" is still in the nude, but some time at "Adam," which weighs three tons and is 10ft. 3in. high, the sculptor Wright, the composer who purchased "Adam," has arranged that the sculptor £15,000 for the companion statue.

There seems to be an epidemic of missing goods and jewellery among Society women at parties. The latest mystery is the vanishing of a bracelet from the wrist of Lady (From the London Correspondent of the "East African Standard")

Jersey during the Georgian Ball she gave at her home in Middlesex, Osterley Park. Lady Jersey—the former Virginia Cherrill, film actress—missed it soon after midnight. About 1,000 guests were at the ball, many of them wearing black silk masks. The bracelet—a diamond circlet with a central sapphire—is worth about £200. This loss follows the disappearance of valuables at the party given by the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim Palace last week and losses at other country house parties. So far there is no suggestion of a solution.

There is a sideshow going about the country at the present time which is, we are reminded, to say the least of it. Travelling from place to place in a motor-hearse at a hurry is the bullet-riddled body of "the greatest of all bandits"—Jesse James. For 50 a time children can see the naked body of the bandit in a elaborate coffin. "Crime does not Pay". It is explained that James was shot dead in Mexico in 1882. There the body was placed in some catacombs where the refrigerating process was left in operation by a John Whitney of Doncaster, who is an interviewer to the James family is reported to have said, "Society it is an object lesson for children."

Early National Beverage

What was described on the largest wholly artificial reservoir in Scotland was inaugurated in the Carron Valley of Stirlingshire by Mr. John Colville, Secretary of State for Scotland. The reservoir, which holds 2,000 million gallons, is the largest in Scotland, and will be used to supply Stirlingshire and Clyde Valley Water Board, was three miles long and about 900 acres in extent, with a dam 1,400 feet long. It cost £4,500,000. They tended to take water for granted in Scotland, he remarked, so much so that they used for more a head of population than the rest of the country. That was a reason of their cleanliness and was also a reason for the saying that they about their national beverage. Water was Scotland's real national beverage.

A peer's daughter who desired to work for her living has found romance in a London chain store. The Hon. Guy's Hospital is in serious financial trouble. They owe £4,000 to Southwark Borough Council for rates, two-thirds of which the Council has already paid over to the L.C.C. and the Police. In the case of ordinary default, court proceedings would be taken or the bailiffs put in. This could hardly be done in respect of Guy's Hospital.

GOLF:

A BUSY WEEK-END FOR KAREN

Karen golfers had a busy time at the week-end with a mixed foursomes match against Nairobi on their own course, and an inter-Club match against Kiambu, on the Kiambu course. They lost against Nairobi on Saturday afternoon by 4½ matches to 7½, but beat Kiambu in a series of morning foursballs and afternoon foursomes on Sunday by the narrow margin of 6½ to 5½.

While Kiambu did not have out their strongest side, the match was an extremely pleasant one and produced some most enjoyable golf, and Karen did well to win on what is now a decidedly difficult course, as the scores in a number of major events have shown this year. The scores are given below. Karen players being mentioned first in each case:—

MORNING FOURBALLS: R. D. England and J. R. Cooke lost to H. S. Potter and E. M. Gare, 4/2; M. F. Hill and E. A. Archer halved with J. A. Palfreman and E. Belcher; E. Robins and R. K. Figgis halved with Mr. Doddington and C. E. Pedley; F. S. Dunn and D. Duncan beat W. McL. Wilson and A. J. Beakbane, 8/3; G. J. Burton and A. K. Gibson halved with B. Sanerville and F. McEntee; E. G. Garneys and D. V. Wanstrocht beat H. Grahame-Bell and R. Pryce Williams, 4/3. Karen 4½ Kiambu 3½.

AFTERNOON FOURSOMES: R. D. England and J. R. Cooke lost to H. S. Potter and E. M. Gare, 2/1; J. R. Marlin and H. A. Archer lost to J. A. Palfreman and E. Belcher, 1 down; M. F. Hill and T. P. Filoon lost to J. M. Doddington and C. E. Pedley, 2/1; F. S. Dunn and D. Duncan beat W. McL. Wilson and A. J. Beakbane, 4/3; G. J. L. Burton and A. K. Gibson beat J. Anderson and R. Burton, 3 up; E. G. Garneys and D. V. Wanstrocht beat H. Grahame-Bell and R. Pryce Williams, 1 up. Karen 6½ Kiambu 5½.

ROYAL NAIROBI WIN MIXED FOURSOMES

On Saturday afternoon at Karen, Royal Nairobi won the mixed foursomes match by 7½ to 4½. It was a thoroughly enjoyable match enjoyed equally by visitors and hosts. There were several close matches. R. K. Figgis and Mrs. Martin were four up after nine holes and petted lost their match. W. L. Tibbon and Mrs. Grudgen played well to halve their match and H. M. Nefdt and Mrs. Tannahill were down all the way, but managed to get a richard in an excellent finish. A. Holden and Mrs. Dunn had a hard fight with J. R. Cooke and Miss M. Shaw, but a very nice two at the 16th of the match put them dormy two and a half at the next gave them victory. The course was playing very well and was in excellent condition in the circumstances. The results were as follows, Royal Nairobi players being mentioned first: H. V. Anderson and Mrs. Gourlay got a walkover from R. D. England and Mrs. Freemantle, scratched; A. Holden and Mrs. Dunn beat J. R. Cooke and Miss M. Shaw, 3/1; A. H. Tannahill and Mrs. Bryant halved with H. Anderson and Mrs. Tannahill; W. S. Nefdt and Mrs. Tannahill halved with H. Anderson and Mrs. Tannahill; W. L. Tibbon and Mrs. Grudgen halved with A. Holden and Mrs. Dunn; R. K. Figgis and Mrs. Martin beat J. R. Cooke and Miss M. Shaw, 4/2; H. Brown and Mrs. Anderson beat R. K. Figgis and Mrs. Martin, 4/3; H. V. Anderson and Mrs. Scott beat D. V. Wanstrocht and Mrs. Mountain, 5/3; R. Pryce Fisher and Mrs. Walmsley halved with G. J. L. Burton and Mrs. B. Pitt; L. Beaumont and Mrs. Bryant lost to E. G. Garneys and Mrs. England, 3/2; R. Ketlewell and Mrs. F. Hill lost to E. Wright and Mrs. Sarvett, 3 down; R. F. Hunt and Mrs. Wright beat A. Murphy and Mrs. Wright, 2 up. Royal Nairobi 7½. Karen C.C. 4½.

The June monthly medal competition, which did not fill on the original date, will be replayed on Saturday next (July 29), on the Karen course.

Railway G. C. Events

The Blondes Club played off last Sunday on the course of the Railway Golf Club (Nairobi) resulted in a win for G. P. Carlisle, after a tie with H. Kirkland. 3 up on holes.

The conditions of this competition are 36 holes against bogey, on Handicap. G. P. Carlisle played the most consistent golf, being 1 up in the morning round and 1 up in the afternoon, being 2 up for the 36 holes played.

H. M. Kirkland returned a good score of three up in the morning round, but was one down in the afternoon and by the rules governing the event, Carlisle was declared the winner as his afternoon round was the better of the two. H. M. Kirkland was runner-up. He had a piece of bad luck during the afternoon round, when he had the misfortune to play his partner's ball and thus lose a hole which he certainly would have won, but for this.

Times vs. Muthaiga 6½ 5.

The Railway G.C. team to meet the Muthaiga Golf Club at the week-end will be today before 5 p.m.

THE SECOND TEST MATCH DRAWN

Rain Prevents A Decision At Old Trafford

London, July 25

The second Test match, played at Old Trafford, ended in a draw, England scoring 104/7 declared and 125/6, declared and the West Indies making 133, all out, and 45 for 3 wickets.

Rain again interfered seriously with play on the second day at Old Trafford and England did not start until 12.15 and there were several stops before luncheon. The wicket was very responsive to spin and England's forcing tactics were reducing to defensive play. Hutton and Fagg continued and the first wicket fell at 21, when Fagg played Hylton on. Thereafter they fell rapidly at 34/2, 34/3 when Martindale got Hutton caught at short leg in the next over, 53/4 and 62/5. Hardstaff, the Nottinghamshire batsman, made a gallant stand and his 70 was the great feature of the innings. He was most aggressive and by his example materially helped the bowlers and only took 80 minutes to complete his half-century, hitting 8 six and seven 6's.

England were 151/6 at tea-time and the crowd had increased to 10,000. There was a certain amount of rain and when Hardstaff was caught at Headley by Grant, Mr. W. R. Hammond declared the innings closed.

Gomez's Bad Luck

Gomez had the misfortune to score a duck in his first test, West bowling off at the wicket. The latter was the only one of the West Indian batsmen to get a good length ball from Bowes and he was beaten completely by the pace and swing of the Yorkshire professional bowler. George Headley played a fine innings, unfortunately to run out time in the murky light, but opened out now and again and took a couple of fours off Bowes. Grant was batting when play was stopped, but was having a beautiful length, however, and was not subject to a fault in playing him. Bain stopped play in a quarter of an hour from time, when the Umpires decided that the light was too poor for further play. Headley played a fine innings of 76 and Grant 29 not out. Bowes was the most successful bowler for West of England, with an invaluable 4/1, compared to Copson's 3/5. Gibb took 1/3 and Constantine 1/26. Hammond also bowled a few overs.

George Headley and Bailey resumed yesterday morning on a drying wicket which was drying rapidly and a heavy overnight downpour under the influence of a bright sun. Headley played a fine innings of 76 and was out at first sight taking one of his typical risks. Grant was bowled by Bowes for 29 and Constantine was run out for 0. Hylton was unbeaten at 11, 0. Hammond declared at 11/6. Hutton made a fine 32 before Constantine bowled him. Scores:—West Indies 1st innings made 133 (Headley 76, Grant 29, Hylton 11 not out, Bowes 4/1, Copson 3/5, Gibb 1/3, Constantine 1/26).

With little more than an hour and a half to get the runs, it was evident that a draw was inevitable and the light steadily worsened near the end. Grant, trying to flog the first ball to Bowes, gave a simple catch to Headley and Hutchinson and Hammond had by-followed, but Gomez and Sealey settled down and batted well. Gomez was bowled at 1 but that was the only wicket to fall and the match was left drawn with the scores as they were.

A FRESH APPROACH TO COMPLETE UNION

Iringa Conference Gives Movement New Impetus

BRITISH ASSOCIATION OF TANGANYIKA

For the first time in the history of East African demands for Complete Union detailed proposals to this end have been framed at an unofficial Conference—that held last week at Iringa—and it is confidently expected that a fresh impetus to the movement will result.

The draft proposals provide for the Seat of Government in Nairobi, contemplate the possibility of an Upper House and the introduction of Electoral Reform.

To implement the resolutions of the Conference and to expedite the movement for Union, the British Association of Tanganyika was brought into being with a view to its becoming a completely representative political organisation covering the whole Territory.

[FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT]

Iringa, July 22.

There is little doubt that the movement for the Union of the East African territories, which originated over a decade ago, will receive a fresh impetus from the Iringa Conference, concluded today, as only very few opposed to the subject in the whole of the Conference and all the delegates, who had come from all parts of Tanganyika, attended), took a new out of the history of the Union of South Africa and proceeded to draft proposals for an East African Union suitable to present day circumstances and more likely to be acceptable to all parties concerned than similar previous proposals.

Major the Hon. John Dow, M.L.C., was unanimously voted to the chair, and the following members or representatives of legislative Council were among those present: Major the Hon. Sir William Cavendish, the Hon. F. J. Anderson, Brig-Gen. S. Heywood-Mose and Mr. B. Bugo Sir-Salve.

Although a wide range of subjects was subsequently discussed, on the first day's session was entirely devoted to the question of the Union of East Africa. All the delegates present were members of the Tanganyika Legislature or represented members of that Legislature. While there is not the slightest desire to desperately hurry or to do anything in any way from the very useful work being done by the Standing Inter-Governmental Committee, to previous pledges already given by the Governments of the Union—the question of East African Union could not be discussed within the framework of that organisation. Accordingly it was decided to form a new organisation, called the British Association of Tanganyika, which is not up to handle subjects other than the question of another, but not within the purview of the Committee.

Demand for Early Union

The first Resolution, which was unanimously adopted by the Conference, formed the basis of subsequent discussion in regard to which was as follows:—

In the opinion of this Conference, the best interests and the permanent happiness of East Africa can only be secured by the early Union, under the British Crown, of the Protectorates, Crown Colony, and Mandated Territory of Tanganyika.

The drafting of the proposals for an Act of Union for the East African Territories was referred to a Committee consisting of seven members, reported to the Conference, and the proposals put forward for discussion, revision and general consideration, were unanimously adopted.

They are as follows:—

Part I—Preliminary.

Part II—The Prosecretaria, Colonial Secretary Territory concerned, to be appointed by Royal Proclamation.

Part III—Executive Government.

(a) A Governor-General, appointed by the King, shall represent His Majesty in the Union, and shall exercise subject to this Act, such powers and functions as He Majesty is pleased to assign to him.

(b) There shall be an Executive Council.

(c) The seat of Government shall vis- to be decided.

(b) The Legislative Assembly shall be composed in its order, of the Members of the Legislative Council at the time of Union.

(c) Provision shall be made for the election of the first Speaker of the Legislative Assembly.

(d) Provision may be made for an Upper House.

Part VI—Supreme Court.

Communities' Rights to be Safeguarded

In part IX of the proposed Act of Union for East Africa, it is stipulated that:

No legislation shall be introduced in the Assembly which is repugnant to existing treaties, obligations, or rights of the territories concerned, while all existing rights and privileges of the Asiatic, African and other communities shall be adequately safeguarded.

Under this part of the Act provision has also been inserted for the admission into the Union of other territories (e.g. Zanzibar) under the protection of His Majesty.

The holding of the Conference was that the steps may well serve as a skeleton outline of an Act of Union. The fact that the proposals are of a nature have, for the first time in the history of East African politics, been framed by an unofficial Conference, and not by a Government Committee, is of unique interest. The delegates felt that, through modifications may have to be introduced into these proposals to make them acceptable to all concerned, they at least furnish a basis of discussion, and because a milestone on the way towards Complete Union.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION OF TANGANYIKA

To implement the resolutions of the Conference, and primarily to expedite the Union of the East African territories, it was decided that the British Association of Tanganyika should be established. The Conference, after discussion and revision, unanimously adopted the proposed constitution of this Association, as recommended by a Select Committee of its delegates.

8 Millions For Poland

TO PURCHASE ARMS

London, July 26.

The British Government have offered Poland credits amounting to eight million pounds to buy defence requirements in Britain. The details are being worked out with the Polish Delegation which is now in London.

The British and French Governments are also discussing the possibility of a cash loan to Poland but it has not yet been possible to agree upon the conditions.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer told the House of Commons yesterday that the eight million pounds would be for purchases in Britain and that both British and French guns willing to help Poland to buy ammunition from other countries if terms could be arranged.—(Reuter).

Russia's Budget

Moscow, July 26.

In introducing the budget today the Commissar for Finance said the development of the country was proceeding at a greatly increased revenue which was 12 per cent higher than that for the previous year.—Reuter.

Britain's New Machine Gun

London, July 26.

The Minister of Supplies, Mr. Leslie Burgin, was sworn in at a Council held by the King at Buckingham Palace yesterday.

Mr. Burgin has been handling one of Britain's latest weapons, a new machine gun called the Besa. It is being manufactured at a new factory erected by the B.S.A. Company at Redditch, near Birmingham. The factory is based on the design of the Bren gun and can be used by infantry, in tanks, aircraft and for anti-bolt defence. (Reuter).

1 Killed, 16 Injured In Bomb Explosion At King's Cross

London, July 26.

A bomb which exploded in the parcels office at King's Cross today killed one man injured 16 other people and shook the whole station. Another man is on the danger list.

Contents of suit cases were blown through the doorway and all the front windows were shattered. People in the parcels office had remarkable escapes from being hurt by flying glass fragments.

A man and two women had almost the whole of their clothing blown off.

Time Bomb

The station was crowded at the time and it is considered remarkable that more was to loss of life.

The Prime Minister was asked in the House of Commons, if in view of this most recent I.R.A. outrage it was not desirable that the Bill designed to suppress such lawlessness should be passed as soon as possible.

Mr. Chamberlain said he did not know when effort today's explosion would have on consideration of the Bill by the House.—Reuter.

Mongolia Frontier Fighting

Tokyo, July 26.

Heavy fighting has broken out again on the Outer Mongolia-Manchukuo frontier, according to Japanese reports which make large claims for the Japanese forces.

It is announced in Tokyo that new air defence provisions are to be put into force shortly throughout the whole Japanese Empire as a result of the continued trouble in Mongolia. —Reuter.

CONSERVING U.S. OIL FOR DEFENCE

HISTORIC PLANE

The thirtieth anniversary of the first flight across the English Channel was commemorated on Monday. This photograph of M. Blériot's machine was taken five years ago when the purpose of the flight was being observed. The French President, M. Lebrun, is seen examining the historic plane.

British Pact With Japan

PROTEST FROM SHANGHAI

Tokyo, July 26.

There were ten further meetings today between the British Ambassador and the Japanese Foreign Minister to discuss the report of the specially appointed committee on the question of co-operation for the maintenance of order within the Tientsin Concession.

It is understood that progress had been made towards a settlement on that some points are still outstanding. A further meeting will be held tomorrow.

Mr. Chamberlain told a questioner in the House of Commons today that the meetings so far held in Tokyo had dealt only with preliminaries and fact finding.

The Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs also answered questions. He said no licence had been issued in this country for the export of war material to Japan for nearly 16 months.

German Arms for China

A Conservative Member asked if it were true that exercising quantities of arms were being supplied to China by Germany.

Mr. Butler replied: To that certainly is the case.

In reply to another questioner Mr. Butler said he would be glad to receive any information concerning a suggestion that a Japanese merchant recently shot down by the Chinese forces contained bombs made in Britain.

"Betrayal"

A cable has been received in London from the British Chamber of Commerce China Association in Shanghai. It severely criticised the formula agreed with Japan and announced by Mr. Chamberlain in the House of Commons on Monday. The agreement with Japan, it says, is likely to result in a betrayal of British rights, interests and obligations in China and by implication recognises the limits and legalises the Japanese occupation. It is being justified although Mr. Chamberlain himself had described them as intolerable. The Association notes that legitimate British interests are apparently placed at the mercy of the Japanese Army.

Chinese newspapers today are also bitter and pessimistic concerning the formula.

The Chungking message says that the Chinese Foreign Office has expressed much disappointment regarding the British Government's attitude at the Tokyo talks, but the statement made by Marshal Chiang Kaishek (reported yesterday) is interpreted as meaning that he con-

New Japanese Offensive

The Japanese have begun a big attack on the area North of Hankow. They are said to be advancing northwards along the Peiping-Hankow railway and claim to have cut off the retreat of 30,000 Chinese troops.—(Reuter).

SNOW IN BRITAIN

London, July 26.

The weather has been good in parts. In some districts in April there were falls of snow during the night but during most of the week temperatures have returned.

There was plenty of sunshine yesterday in London and the temperature rose rapidly during the day until it reached 71 degrees which is the usual for July. This, however, was 17 degrees higher than the best temperature of the previous day.

And Now Zealand

Many New Zealand towns are isolated as a result of snowstorms which have been sweeping the country during the last few days. The streets of Dunedin are under six inches of snow and many of the roads to the city are blocked. Rail and air services are dislocated.

200,000 More "Terriers"

London, July 26.

During the last three months no fewer than 200,000 men have been recruited for the Territorial Army, says an official announcement.—Reuter.

Trawlers As Minesweepers

London, July 26.

According to reports current in Hull and Grimsby the Admiralty will purchase from local owners as modern steam trawlers for use as minesweepers. This represents about a third of the deep water fleet of the two ports.

The effect of the withdrawal of so many vessels from the market supplies of fish will be counterbalanced by lifting the present voluntary restrictions on landings at Hull and Grimsby.

So far the report has not been confirmed by the Admiralty. One owner said last night that while the sale would be regretted it was in the national interest and they had no option. (Reuter).

Staff Talks With Russia To Start Soon

London, July 26.

It is believed that Anglo-French-Russian Staff talks could be started almost immediately following the stage reached in the Moscow negotiations, according to Reuter's Diplomatic Correspondent.

A British Mission representing the three Services is expected to go to Moscow in ten days' time.

A general will head the French Mission.

PREMIER'S STATEMENT

In the House of Commons this afternoon Mr. Chamberlain was asked again about the progress of the Moscow talks. He said fresh instructions were sent to the Ambassador last night and he (the Premier) hoped to be in a position to make a statement early next week.

Asked if he had agreed that there should be Staff talks in Moscow, Mr. Chamberlain said that certain instructions had been sent to our Ambassador in Moscow but the Government had not yet heard what the reactions were.—(Reuter).

AUSTRALIAN BOYCOTT TO END

Melbourne, July 26.

Representatives of the Trade Union Federation of Australia have unanimously recommended that the boycott of the Government's plan to prepare a National Register of man power and wealth be dropped. They are understood to be trying to obtain repeal or amendment of the Bill by constitutional means. (Reuter).

Arab Terrorist Chief Captured

Jerusalem, July 26.

A well known Arab who described himself as commander of the rebels has been captured in Northern Samaria by the Emir Abdullah el Tell's Arab Legion.

He is believed to have been responsible for many outrages during the last two years. (Reuter).

COMDR. KING-HALL'S "MEDDLING"

Retort By German Agency

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 21.

A long, violent attack on the British people, in reply to the speech made by Commander Stephen King-Hall in Germany, has been issued by the Deutsch Dienst, official German agency.

The agency says: "It is note-worthy that the British Press, particularly on a visit from abroad, immediately begins to meddle in the internal affairs of the Foreign Office. The impression is created that the representatives of other countries are unable to find their way about in the Foreign Office. Commander King-Hall is also mistaken if he thinks that he can influence the British Government by his visit to Germany. Such attempts are doomed to failure from the start.

"Commander King-Hall is entitled to his own opinion, but he has no right to express it in the form of a lecture to the British people. He is not the first to do so, and he will not be the last. Many others have preceded him, and many will follow him. Their efforts have always been in vain, and will remain so.

"Commander King-Hall is also wrong if he thinks that the British people are afraid to express their opinions. Every Englishman has the right to criticise his Government, and he does so. CLOSER UNION

An Iringa Conference

It is many years since the late Lord Delamere, host in an old mission station at Tukuyu in the Southern Highlands of Tanganyika, entertained representative politically-minded settlers from East Africa, Nyasaland and the Rhodesias and expounded to them his vision of an East African Dominion comprising the northern Dependencies, linked with amalgamated Rhodesias and through them with the Union of South Africa. He did not lack support. In those early post-war years when the complications of present day international relations were not thought of, and would have seemed unbelievable had they been prophesied, there was no Colonial Question, and only a few dreamers and theorists, vasily dismissed by the patriots and the practical-minded, thought or talked of internationalisation of Colonies or of any scheme of world cooperation in the development of Africa. But we are approaching serious consideration of these things today. There have been very few references to the German claims by responsible British statesmen in recent months which have not included some indications, however vague, of a fundamental change in the conception of Colonial responsibilities and opportunities. It seems to us that without any doubt if peace is maintained, as is now much more likely than that war will break out, part of the great boom in world trade and development which will follow any settlement in Europe will be a profound and permanent alteration in the attitude of the Imperial Powers [illegible] national prestige and ideologies aside, has had that already visible effect on world opinion, and not least in Britain.

There is, however, a long way to go before a change in view brings in its train, and as part of it any serious proposal to include territorial redistribution in Africa. There are too many difficulties and complications to make a territorial solution easy or likely. Strategic considerations will continue to play an important part, even in a world bent on peace, and still more important is the British conception of the Trusteeship of African peoples, a factor which in its moral influence alone will make the nation hesitate long before millions of natives are handed over to any Power whose political creed and social practices cannot well be changed without revolutionary reorientation of present-day trends of government and nationalism in Europe. But these difficulties do not mean so much in the field of economic development; they can in practice be largely eliminated from any scheme for the rebuilding of a new world economic order in so far as access to sources of natural wealth of young countries is concerned.

That is a background which has to be kept steadily in mind in East Africa. It does not permit of complacent acceptance of the views which governed our outlook in the past. But there is nothing in that background, as we see it, which would prevent the East African Territories from building their future on the basis of unity, if even because of the obvious fact that unification would offer a better and stronger basis for the ordered development of civilizing influences and the exploitation of economic resources of Africa by the world at large which is the probable trend of the future. Closer Union has been more than a dream among the British people of East Africa. It has always been a steadily pursued objective and though it may still draw its inspiration from the history of the Empire in the past, and particularly from the ideal of local political freedom which is the mainspring of the Commonwealth, we can find nothing in that conception of destiny which is at variance with the principle of international economic cooperation.

After a lapse of years impetus has come again from southern Tanganyika. A Convention of British settlers, realising that times and conditions have changed, has produced a scheme which accepts unification as the wise solution and rejects Federation or any other half-way measure of loose association. The outlines of that proposal are published today. Those who drafted the scheme have in mind such stumbling blocks of the past as the Uganda Agreement and the Congo Basin Treaties. They are prepared to believe, and rightly, that there is room inside a unified East Africa for respect for all these vested political and economic interests, and that there need be no interference with the existing rights of any community. Essentially the purpose of the simple Closer Union proposal is that a start should be made by bringing together all the existing Legislatures into one under the direction of a Governor-General, leaving such difficulties as electoral reform and reserved subjects to be worked out through experience. Even the difficult Railway problem is not to be complicated by suggestions of amalgamation; it would start on the road to a solution, under the scheme, through the agency of a representative Railway Board under the direction of the Governor-General. In the expectation that there would be a true partnership, the plan proposes that all Colonial revenue and surplus balances should be pooled for the common purpose, and that the principle and practice of an official Colonial Office majority should be maintained unimpaired in a united Legislature at the outset.

[illegible] this occasion it is a Kenya project, and therefore suspect. It has come from Tanganyika and should find ready sympathy and understanding, at least in Kenya. But sympathy is not enough. If the idea is to make headway, and is not to suffer the fate of its predecessors, or be overwhelmed and East Africa caught unprepared by the development of the new theories of policies of Colonial responsibility which will assuredly come upon us all from every overseas quarter once the moment arrives, it is necessary that the leaders of East African thought should seek an early opportunity of examining the proposals with determination to carry an acceptable plan forward to the stage when it becomes once more a live issue not only here but in authoritative quarters in Britain. Unless these steps are taken, and taken resolutely and quickly, Iringa will merely be another chapter in a story of futility. The fault will not lie with the people of Tanganyika, the blame will rest on the other Territories who have neglected to seize another opportunity. We should like to see called at an early date an East African Conference devoted to the one object of preparing an agreed plan for Union to be pursued with determination to bring this fundamental question to an issue before these young Dependencies are caught up in the flood of a new world movement. They will be much better equipped to protect themselves if they have the wisdom to stand together now and pool their strength, so that when the time comes they are at least in a position to choose together the lines of their future. Today they would all be sacrificed on the altar of any idealism, however unrelated to Africa, that attracted a distracted Europe.

2½ MILLIONS FOR COLONIES IN 5 YEARS

("STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT) London.

In the House of Commons Mr. Liddall asked the Colonial Secretary what amount had been expended on development and research in the Colonies and Protectorates during the last five years.

Mr. MacDonald: Expenditure by His Majesty's Government from the Colonial Development Fund on development and research in the Colonies and Protectorates during the five years to March, 1939, amounted to £2,580,848. In addition grants for similar purposes amounting to £366,000 approximately were made from the Vote for Colonial and Middle Eastern Services (Class II, Vote 8).

As regards expenditure incurred by the Governments of the individual Colonies and Protectorates on research and development, it would be very difficult to separate and abstract such expenditure from the financial returns, but this also involves considerable sums of money.

ANGLO-FRENCH COLLABORATION IN CIVIL AIR SERVICE

Big Companies Agree To Pool Resources On Channel Route

30 YEARS AGO AND NOW

Another evidence of the close collaboration in the air between Britain and France is provided by the announcement of an agreement between Imperial Airways and Air France to pool their resources on the London-Paris route.

Appropriately the agreement was signed on the thirtieth anniversary of the first flight across the English Channel made by the famous French pioneer, M. Louis Blériot.

London, July 26.

Great interest is shown in the fact that the third and largest mass demonstration flight of British aircraft will take place on the 30th anniversary of the first crossing of the English Channel by a flight made by the French aviator, M. Blériot, in 1909. It is regarded as significant that this day was chosen to mark closer collaboration in the air between France and Britain.

The second evidence of that collaboration is provided by the announcement that an agreement was signed on the anniversary by Imperial Airways and Air France to pool their resources on the London-Paris route.

The agreement between Imperial Airways and Air France will increase the number of services each way between London and Paris every day during summer and receipts will be shared by the two companies.

In the course of a speech at a dinner in London last night, to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of Louis Blériot's first flight across the English Channel, Prime Minister Mr Sir Kingsley Wood, referred to the close co-operation between British and French civil aviation.

The Minister added: "British and French enterprise will be rapidly spreading their wings to the far ends of the earth, and have no fear of any rivalry or racial friction, for flights over their respective territories.

Half Hourly Service

Referring to this agreement, an Imperial Airways official later stated that for the last five years the need for closer co-operation had been felt. Under the new plan, there would be twenty services daily each way between London and Paris during the summer, and ten services during the winter. All the machines employed would be the journey-time of one hour and a quarter. The new scheme would come into operation at the beginning of the winter season. At rush hours there would be a plane every half hour, and it is thought that passengers will not have to wait more than three minutes after each other. As traffic increases, it would be possible to add to the services from both companies without the company encroaching on the other's ground.

French Efforts Praised

The guests at the Blériot commemoration dinner included the French Minister for Air, Monsieur Guy Chemino, who was congratulated by Sir Kingsley Wood on the way he was achieving in the considerable aircraft production of that country. Sir Kingsley Wood said that he was obtaining still more pilots and aircraft from this source in the country. In all that the French and British Air Forces did, and in the policies that they were building, they thought to preserve peace, but if aggression came they would maintain justice and right. They threatened no country. They desired to live in peace with the rest of the whole world over. But they were resolved to defend their liberties and the common ideals of civilisation and the independence of mankind.

Germany's Example

The French Air Minister in reply said that already the volume of the annual construction of France and France was on the same level as that of Germany. The effort which had been made mankind the benefit of these rumour services would be made, if necessary, if it had to take as great for the purpose of output corresponding to the partial utilisation of the industrial possibilities of the country. With the progress of time the routes traced by Blériot over the Channel had not remained with the prophetic form of a long column the two countries, the air of the beginning of the century had not worth a single sky.

Sir Edward Ellington, Chief Officer of the Royal Air Force mission, he said the union between the two countries was not only a more brilliant affirmation than ever of the ideal of liberty, and the common sky of liberty. The French Air Minister returned to the Paris that morning.

The number of British aircraft which participated in the long flight was 240, all heavy and medium bombers.

Among the cities included in the flight were Paris Lyons and Bordeaux. In addition to being escorted by French aircraft on the outward journey the bombers were intercepted by British fighters on the return journey.

The effort which had been made mankind the benefit of these rumour services would be made, if necessary, if it had to take as great for the purpose of output corresponding to the partial utilisation of the industrial possibilities of the country. With the progress of time the routes traced by Blériot over the Channel had not remained with the prophetic form of a long column the two countries, the air of the beginning of the century had not worth a single sky.

Sir Edward Ellington, Chief Officer of the Royal Air Force mission, he said the union between the two countries was not only a more brilliant affirmation than ever of the ideal of liberty, and the common sky of liberty. The French Air Minister returned to the Paris that morning.

The number of British aircraft which participated in the long flight was 240, all heavy and medium bombers.

Among the cities included in the flight were Paris Lyons and Bordeaux. In addition to being escorted by French aircraft on the outward journey the bombers were intercepted by British fighters on the return journey.

NEW NAVAL RESERVE

London, July 26.

A new Special Reserve of the Royal Navy is to be formed from men enlisted up in the Territorial service. Already some 10,000 of the men called up have expressed a preference for service in the Navy. The Royal Navy will take 12,000 of these men a year, and it is expected that nearly half of this total will come from the Merchant Navy.

In order to avoid hardship to apprentices men of the Royal Naval Special Reserve will in certain cases be allowed to defer their six months' training any time in a period over four years.

The Admiralty is to set up two training centres. At one of them a thousand men from the fishing fleet will be trained for mine sweeping and anti-submarine work. At the other men from the Merchant Navy will be taught gunnery so that they may become officers in charge of the handling of the types of guns they will find in merchant ships.—Reuter.

HOW NYERI HEARD THE CHIEF SCOUT

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]

Nyeri.

Although officers of Cable and Wireless had been busy here for a whole fortnight preparing for the Chief Scout's broadcast to Scotland, all I had to do was to turn a switch and there was the voice of the Chief Scout as clear and distinct as if he were sitting in my chair and listening to him from his home a few hundred yards away. At the same time I heard the cheers of the Scouts assembled at Gilwell, the speech a few thousand miles away.

As a party of Nyeri Scouts came up during the week to the Outspan Hotel they went up to the Thomson's Falls and Rumuruti area.

BEAUTIFYING SCHEME AT THIKA

[" STANDARD " CORRESPONDENT]

Thika, July 24.

One of these Thika residents who keep boats at the four Pools Hotel to paddle on the somewhat perilous waters of the Thika River, and who covers noticed earlier in the year the amount of damage that was being done to the banks below the confluence of these two rivers. Natives were burning and destroying large forest trees and opening up the ground for cultivation right down to the river's edge. Mr. E. J. Davies was appointed an Honorary Forest Officer and the matter was investigated.

What it is being considered whether a new beauty spot can be added to the district by opening up a beauty spot on the banks of the river below the Township and replanting them with trees of which they have been destroyed. Two members of the Thika Arboretum Committee, Mr. Cuthbert and Mr. Alan Hastings, would when be entrusted with the task of selecting suitable trees and planting up.

A few years ago it was proposed to form an Arboretum very near the level of the township, but it has been found that the soil there is not of good and that scheme has been in abeyance. Good work might also be done by the Committee if more shady and ornamental trees could be planted within and around the favourite boundaries, and some of the existing trees are getting needed attention. There are some attractive white bougainvillaeas in the main street but these are being allowed to grow many-shouldered as if they were in danger of being pruned to 6 or 7 feet the graceful flowering trees they might become.

Query For Supreme Court

"An Absurd Position"

When the case of Francis Walter James was called in the Resident Magistrate's Court, Nairobi, yesterday, Mr. Coffey, the prosecutor, intimated that he had received a letter from the Attorney General stating that the case was to be re-opened under Section 225 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but he had not been given the depositions in the case. He thought the only thing to do was to send a note to the Supreme Court asking for them.

When the documents were delivered, Mr. Anderson, advocate, for the accused said there were two points he would like to bring to the notice of His Honour. In the original proceedings against the accused the charge against him was one of manslaughter, and as the case was not one which could be tried by the Magistrate, the accused was committed for trial.

As he understood the position at the moment, the papers had now been sent back to the Attorney General, and his submission was that before this second charge of dangerous driving could be proceeded with, a "nolle prosequi" should be entered by the Crown in respect of the charge of manslaughter. The return of the case to the Magistrate's court for trial on a charge of dangerous driving was a position which he considered to be an absurd one.

His Honour, continuing, said that His Honour had already given a decision on the preliminary enquiry on a charge of manslaughter, and was now being asked to reopen the enquiry on a different charge.

Mr Coffey agreed that it should have come to him as a completely new case.

The second point to which Mr. Anderson drew attention was that the second charge of dangerous driving was laid under a different magistrate. At the preliminary His Honour had to come to the conclusion that there was a "prima facie" case for that to be written on the depositions of the accused. Now, if this second charge would obviously place His Honour in a most embarrassing position if he were to try the case for dangerous driving on what would be the same facts. The District Commissioner (Major Orr) declined to reverse his decision on the same set of facts.

Mr Coffey said that it was a case which I think is very important, and he would be grateful if the attention of the Supreme Court in your connection that the section under which the case is raised in which the Magistrate has had jurisdiction.

Mr. Anderson replied that he did not know if this question had been raised before, but he was content to hear His Honour could reopen a completely new enquiry.

Mr Coffey said he is an absurd position.

Resigning to a question by His Honour Mr. Fenham, the Court Interpreter, said he was entirely in agreement with what Mr. Anderson had said, but he pointed out that Mr. Anderson had not referred in answer to the case of dangerous driving.

Mr Coffey admitted this additional complication.

Mr. Anderson was asked for his objections to be reported to the Supreme Court and the Magistrate agreed to do so.

The case was thereafter set down for mention on August 2.

The Weather

The British Fast African Meteorological Service yesterday supplied the following note on the weather:—

It was decided to form an Association to be known as the Eldoret Guides and Trans-Nzoia Oyster Nut Organisation, and a committee was elected.

Native Housing

FURTHER DETAILS FOR COMMITTEE

After some discussion recommendations of the Native Affairs Committee of Nairobi Municipal Council relative to Native housing, which came before the ordinary monthly meeting of Council on Tuesday, were referred back for further consideration. The recommendations were made in order to enable the Town Clerk to issue a circular letter to large employers of Native labour on the question of housing for their employees.

The recommendations were:—

(a) That the Council construct a road to the Pipe Line, provide a sewer, water mains and facilities for street lighting.

(b) That the type of building to be provided by the owners be of permanent construction, that is to say, stone, brick or concrete.

(c) That the rent to be charged be at the rate of £1 per month for a quarter of an acre.

(d) That leases be granted for a term not exceeding 99 years.

(e) That the ordinary scale of charges be imposed for water and conservancy and sewer.

(f) That the dwellings to be provided shall conform to the by-laws of the firms erecting such dwellings.

(g) That latrine accommodation and bathing places be provided

A Tremendous Charge

Before the recommendations were referred back Councillor Rhind raised a point in regard to the proposed rent, which he considered to be too high, and in passing commented upon the fact that one engineering firm had put up good quarters for its boys on land for which they had to pay £3 per acre with a ground rent of £50 an acre a year. This he considered to be a tremendous charge.

He considered that the charge to an employer under the proposals was too high. It should not exceed £3 per month.

Councillor Thakore supported. The Council must not set out to make a profit but to encourage employers to provide this accommodation for their labour.

Further support was coming from Councillor Newmark, who said that the real value of the land was a few shillings an acre, and he thought the value at £16 an acre and cost of improvements at £50, that gave them a capital value of £66 an acre, and for the purpose of the scheme £100 per acre would be a fair valuation.

The Deputy Mayor, Councillor Wood, also supported the amendment.

Councillor Bompas pointed out that in Johannesburg the charge in a similar scheme was £1 per month on one-eighth of an acre and in addition the lessee had to pay for their own water. Nairobi was one of the out-post of their rates.

The Town Clerk pointed out that rent would be chargeable on the property. He suggested that the rents proposed might be charged were rents for a developed estate and not for the bare land on which development. They intended to provide roads, water mains and lighting for the streets; in fact there would be considerable capital expenditure.

The District Commissioner (Chairman of the Native Affairs Committee) explained the proposals to be for back in view of the fact that further information which had not been before the Committee was now available.

The amendment was carried.

TARIFFS RISE IN ZANZIBAR

Designed To Yield £1,600 A Year

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT]

Zanzibar.

At the July meeting Legislative Council sanction was obtained for increase on Customs duties on sugar, rice, wine spirits and imported and silk piece goods. These articles were selected from the list of imports as being the most capable of raising additional revenue to meet the deficiency caused by a serious budget deficiency.

It must be emphasised that these tariffs still, with the exception of motor spirit, be lower than those of the mainland. The increased tax on such necessary commodities as rice will hardly fall by the public was appreciated by H.E. the British Resident, but in a long speech explained that the country

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

London, July 27.

Two Isle of Wight schoolgirls, Joan Holmes, fifteen, and Audrey Macdonald, seventeen, last week swam six miles across the Solent from Ryde Pier to Lower-a-Sconce in just over three hours. They were accompanied in a rowing boat by Mr. Holmes, Mr. J. Westwood, Sergeant Lock and Colonel Hendren, son of Ryde Rowing Club.

ALLEGED BRITISH SPY'S LETTERS TO GERMANY

In this letter, which enclosed two £5 notes, was a slip of paper bearing figures.

Mr. Evans said that when these figures were decoded by means of the code they read: "Join Territorials for your Army job. There is big money for you."

There was evidence that Adams was in Germany from April 12 to 14.

"My Dear Sammy"

In a letter, dated May 22 to the Editor, International Press Cuttings, Adams addressed the person to whom he wrote as "My Dear Colonel."

He mentioned "Canadian lives," and added, "All new stock from Ireland will be coming in drawers for binding." Mr. Evans said that apparently Adams referred to the Militia.

The letter continued: "I have heard officially from Egypt and have a vacancy offered when I arrive in Cairo. So many Greeks and Syrians have been discharged from civil employment with the British Army because of so much spying. I have found the contacts very useful, and hope to get some good sporting photographs this year."

Mr. Evans referred to a letter sent by Adams to a Captain Dawson of Cuttings, Enclosed were some paper cuttings of articles written by Mr. Adams.

"One of them," said Mr. Evans, "deals with the London Metal Exchange and another with the Lewis gun. There is also a newspaper cutting relating to the Tanganyika. In these were the documents, either being opened, or sealed in envelopes. These were retained and the originals will be produced.

Typescript Form

In a letter to Fricke, Adams wrote: "It would be better for me to see you when, coming home for your July holiday, as I have several big camps to attend in the Eastern Province and other activities to complete. I have not seen the latest photos of the Tanganyika Territory, but I understand that several surprises are ready to be sprung on the market in the next three or four days."

Mr. Evans said when Inspector Gaze, of the Special Branch at Scotland Yard, with other officers, searched the Association, certain documents were found in typescript form.

Told the charge, he said: "I can give you my correspondence with Germany. I can give you everything you want."

Written on the cover of an envelope which was at one time sealed, said: "That is the code I used to write letters with," and explained that it was a correspondence with a German friend about some books he wanted him to get from the War Office.

He declared that everything he sent to Germany was first submitted to censorship.

Another letter was found in a letter rack and two more codes in a copy of "Sergeant's Year Book." He had been detailed to report on "I am not guilty of giving information."

Photographed copies of correspondence were produced by Lieut.-Col. Reginald Ernest Hesketh-Cook, of the Directorate of Military Operations and Intelligence, War Office, who said that as a result of information he caused Adams' correspondence to be intercepted.

Work Of African Surveyors

UGANDA DIRECTOR'S REPORT

In his annual Report on the Land and Survey Department of the Uganda Protectorate for the year ended December 31, 1938, just published, the present Director (Mr. H. R. Thomas, O.B.E.) pays tribute to the work of Mr. F. T. Wells, O.B.E., Director of Surveys who retired in October, 1938. Mr. Wells had been head of the Department for nearly nine years. "His period of office," says the Report, "is notable for the completion of the original mallo survey, and for the great expansion of mining activity."

Comment is made in the Report on the expansion of Native staff.

Native Technical Staff

The African technical staff consisted of 11 plane-tablers; 2 computing assistants and 1 computing pupil; 1 survey learners; and 15 tracers. There were in addition 22 Africans trained.

"Practical efforts to widen the scope of African employment in technical branches have continued," says the Report. The plane-tablers are now all Africans, 3 graduate Makerere pupils who have received the Intermediate Certificate have passed departmental examination stands them in good stead. In general they prove reliable men whom, when duly rewarded work, and some show a good sense of responsibility and of discipline for training other Africans. Seniors of these men have been given charge of areas dealt with mainly subdivisions on the Sese Islands for several months almost without supervision. Disposing of instructions and of the work of subordinates and assisting landowners with the demarcation of their holdings. In addition, it is pleasing to note the title of these African plane-tablers has been changed to that of "Surveyor."

"An experiment is being made with a new grade of African surveyor to be known as Assistant Surveyor, when duly rewarded, the title of African plane-tablers will be changed to that of Surveyor. These are being recruited for the most part from Makerere College. The object of this effort is being made to attract people of the right type and with a good education to African surveyors. Only experienced men will be allotted to more important duties and it is hoped to train them to exercise the simpler functions of the profession. The necessity of learning is every out small extra property surveys, and to survey in detail villages, township buildings, and efforts to open up new areas. Also to train men in triangulation and in topographical mapping have met with some encouragement

"It is Hell," Says Ex-P.C. In Foreign Legion

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London, July 17.

Search for a Metropolitan police officer who disappeared while on his beat at Leyton four months ago has ended in the Sahara desert.

The missing man, Police-Constable Patrick McPartland, has joined the French Foreign Legion and is in hospital in the Sahara suffering from malaria.

News of him has just been received by his wife and six-year-old son in London.

McPartland had been twice commended for saving life. Once he dived off the old Waterloo Bridge into the Thames and brought a woman ashore. Later he dived into the Thames fully clothed and rescued a man who was trapped in a car which had plunged into the water.

Accomplished Officer

He was a good boxer, swimmer, runner and walker and had thirty cups and prizes on his sideboard. He had studied and passed his examinations to become a sergeant.

"He was a clever musician, and besides playing in three police bands, used to run dance bands of his own," his wife told the Daily Mirror.

"He has five years to serve in the Legion so I am going to start life afresh with Michael.

"After Pat disappeared a Catholic priest came round with £20 to help him but he had gone.

"By deserting the police force he forfeited all rights to his pension, but, as my boy and I were left without a penny, the police have allowed me £100."

In a letter he has written home, McPartland says: "It is hell here. The worst tramp in England is ten times better off. . . . My heart is broken."

AUSTRALIAN GOLD MINE SHARES UNSALEABLE

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

One of the biggest financial sensations for many years swept the City when the Stock Exchange Committee banned any further dealings in the shares of eight Australian gold mine companies.

The decision affects nearly 30,000 people all over the British Isles. It means that their shares, valued in 1935 at £8,608,511, are now officially unsaleable.

For instance, Commonwealth Mining shares, which were hoisted to 17s. 9d. in 1935, giving a total market capitalisation of £4,481,875, were last quoted at 9d. nominal, at which the market valuation is only £181,875.

Shares of many other companies in the group were last dealt in at 6d. or under. In fact, the shares of the eight companies are now valued in the market at £380,912 only.

SHELTER FOR 7,600, PROOF AGAINST [illegible] TON BOMBS

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London, July 18.

Finsbury is to have its £100,000 deep bomb-proof shelter giving protection for 7,600 people, after all.

After advice by four leading counsel, negotiations were completed yesterday for financing construction of the shelter and a scheme under which the Council will lease it for £7,400 a year from a private concern was agreed upon.

It will now be unnecessary for the Council to secure Home Office sanction for a loan. The Government had already refused to approve the proposal, says the News Chronicle.

Mr. Lionel Wigram, prospective National candidate for the Pontefract Division of Yorkshire, who recently purchased for clients the £30,000,000 South Wales estate of the Marquis of Bute, is behind the new scheme.

He has concluded agreement with Mr. J. E. Arnold James, the Town Clerk of Finsbury, and work will be commenced within the next fortnight on the shelter which will withstand even one-ton bombs.

The deep shelter formed part of the scheme, estimated to cost in all £1,387,760, which the Council submitted to Sir John Anderson in February. It was rejected on technical, financial and national grounds.

Underground car parks which could be used as air raid shelters in an emergency were provided for in the original proposals.

SLASHER IN GAS-BAG FACTORY

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

Gas-bags for babies are being slashed and ruined at the rate of twenty or thirty a week at a factory in Hendon, N.W., despite a watch by detectives and officials, and an offer of a reward for information.

One of the 700 workers in the factory is the slasher, and according to one member of the staff the culprit is in danger of a lynching by his fellow-workers when discovered.

The factory does not make the complete apparatus. It concentrates on making the bags. Filters and other parts are made elsewhere and attached later.

Latest fashion note from Paris announces that women are having their knees painted. Roses, or any other pretty flowers selected by madame or mademoiselle are the favoured designs.

THE SCIENCE BABY

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London.

A woman doctor in Manchester has proved that motherhood is possible from the laboratory. She is the mother of a "test tube" baby, a girl now two years old; healthy, happy, strong and in every way normal. The success of the experiment means that many childless wives can now realise their greatest hopes—that of becoming mothers. The operation is a simple one, but requires the attention of a medical man. No anaesthetic is needed.

The mother of the "test tube girl" is in her thirties. She carried out the operation on strictly scientific lines, and after a careful study of the father's medical history. She means to bring the baby up herself.

Specialist's Comment

A specialist with whom the experiment was discussed said: "Its success is particularly valuable. It means that in the case of a couple unable to have children, but who particularly require an heir, their wishes can be fulfilled. Medical men would be quite willing to perform the operation in such justifiable cases as these. It is quite simple. The few cases which have been performed in England have been done quietly, and I do not think that even medical journals have published any accounts. We in England are always too shy."

One of Manchester's foremost gynaecologists said: "We do not make a great deal of fuss about this kind of operation in England, but it is certainly done. In fact, I have performed the operation myself. Normally any difficulty about childbearing can be rectified by a minor operation but if that cannot be done and the parents particularly want a child, this is a safe way by which to overcome the difficulty."

RECRUITING COMEDIES

Incidents at the Depots

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London, July 17.

There were many laughs and comedies over the joining up of militiamen.

One man was so stout that he could not be fitted with a stock uniform. Another was so short—4 ft. 11 inches—that nothing could be found to fit him. Both had to remain in their civilian clothes. Yet another man had such small feet that no size in regulation boots would suit him. He walked about in carpet slippers a size too big. One militiaman arrived at camp carrying a wicker basket. He opened the basket and a pigeon flew home to mother with a message "Arrived safe, all's well."

Some of his fellow recruits laughed when a lad arrived at camp near Harrogate with golf clubs, and asked the sergeant "Where can I get a game." But he had the last laugh—for the sergeant assured him there were several courses near the camp.

Stoughton Barracks (depot of the Queen's Royal West Surrey Regiment) handed each newcomer a stamped postcard on which to write home. A shortage of hot water has made washing up facilities inadequate at Arrowe Park Birkenhead. Between courses plates have had to be washed in minute quantities of water swimming with grease and scraps from dozens of other plates. This has certainly affected many appetites. At the beginning of the week there are medical and dental inspections and rudimentary drill such as saluting and standing to attention. When the depots have settled down more general training will be begun.

All the men seem very happy and are looking forward to their training as a great change from everyday life.

English Classroom Incident

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]
London, July 19.

It happened in Sunderland. Herr Sutor is a Hamburg German. He is 6ft. tall, an ex-war pilot, and now, by profession, a secondary school teacher. He is "interested in English educational methods." Hence his presence in Sunderland.

Herr Sutor presented himself at a local school. He was received by the headmistress, Miss W. J. E. Moul. He presented credentials from the education authorities. Miss Moul was duly impressed; she decided to take her guest round the classrooms herself.

Moses and Hitler

They entered a room filled with girls aged from 11 to 12. The subject was Religious Instruction. Miss Moul took a hand. She told the children the story of Moses. She talked of Moses as a great religious leader. Herr Sutor was not pleased.

What happened then was told to The Daily Mail yesterday by Miss Moul:—

"Herr Sutor startled me by saying in a very loud voice: 'We Germans also have a very great leader—Adolf Hitler!'

"I thought it best to ignore the comment, until the German said again, loudly and in a manner that seemed to frighten some of the girls: 'We Germans want our colonies back!'

"Then I asked him kindly to leave the classroom."

Scholar's Version

"The lesson was going on quietly, when suddenly the man started shouting at us. He said the German Army and Air Force were much better than ours, but there would not be a war if the Germans got their colonies back."

Said Mr. William Thompson, Director of Education for Sunderland: "This man came to see me yesterday. I had not the slightest hesitation in granting him a courtesy which has often been granted before. It is most regrettable."

Said Sunderland's Mayor, Councillor Myers Wayman: "I have called for a full report. I want all the details. There is considerable feeling in the town about it. We are not going to tolerate things like that."

Sutor's Denial

Here, finally, is Herr Sutor's own version of the affair, given by himself as he stood on the deck of a German steamer at Sunderland last night:—

"I did not interrupt the lesson. When I spoke to the children it was with Miss Moul's consent. I told the children how difficult it was for us Germans to live 140 on every square kilometre of soil. I pointed out that Germany has no great empire, and she has not, like Britain, hundreds of ships coming into her ports every week with food. We have to raise our own on our soil.

"I said that Herr Hitler had promised that the colonial question was the last issue between Britain and Germany."

YESTERDAY'S DOBBIE CUP, MATCH

Nairobi Ath. Get Revenge On Caledonians

(By "Centurian")

Nairobi Athletic consolidated their position at the head of the Dobbie League yesterday evening by beating Caledonians on the Railway ground, by the only goal of the match scored in the first half. They thus avenged their defeat by Caledonians, when the score was also 1—0, last month.

For the first ten minutes of the game, play was mainly in mid-field, Caledonians forcing a corner which Fraser took. From a melee in the goal area, the ball was returned to him and he put in a terrific shot which Wallace got well to save.

The game continued on even lines for some time after this and neither side seemed to be playing up to form. Then a mistake by Caledonians, usually very safe at Deadman in goal with only the keeper to beat, he passed to Fraser and Marsh intercepted and cleared.

One of Marsh's clearances to his forwards initiated a good move and Jenkins centred to Wharton, who took a snap shot and scored. Lindley appearing to be unsighted.

Nairobi Athletic continued to attack and both wings sent over some nice passes which generally resulted in a melee in the goal from which the Caledonian defenders cleared. At half-time Nairobi Athletic still led by 1 goal to nil.

After the Interval

In the second half Caledonians tried hard to equalise from the kick-off and succeeding in forcing a number of corners all of which, however, were fruitless. They continued to press for some time after this attack and both wings sent over some nice passes which generally resulted in a melee in the goal from which the Caledonian defenders cleared. At half-time Nairobi Athletic still led by 1 goal to nil.

The Ladies Beat Henry Cotton

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

Henry Cotton was unexpectedly beaten by one up in his second match at Muthaiga, near Nairobi, with the three lady champions.

The ladies were Miss Wilson, British champion, Miss Armstrong, Scottish champion and Miss Wilson, English champion and they played a foursome against Cotton and Mr. Bell. The men by no means played their best golf but it was a splendid performance by the ladies to win the first hole in 4, 5, 5, 3, 4, 5, 4, 3, 4—37.

Miss Morgan clapped the put with a beautiful 3 at the fifth, where, following a long drive, she pitched first put past the hole. This reduced Cotton's lead to three up. He lost another hole, the seventh (300 yards) where he took 4 to get down near the green. With two halves Cotton turned two up with a score of 33. The best-ball score of the ladies was 35.

After scrambling a half in 4 at the tenth, Cotton lost the twelfth, where he hooked a straight shot many yards wide of the green. He took 5 while Miss Barton and Miss Anderson each had a 3.

More Than Holding On

After Cotton's flying start this was a most unexpected development. There were more surprises to come. The next four holes were halved in the correct figure. Miss Anderson saving the side at the seventeenth with a 4 after her partners had failed to find the green with their second shots. It was Miss Anderson who won the match, for at the eighteenth (300 yards) she put her 3rd shot to 6 feet from the flag. Although failing to hole the putt for a 2, a 3 was good enough, as Cotton took three putts, missing one of four feet and a half. Cotton's score for the inward half was: 4, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4, equals 37—total, 70.

BOXING:

Harvey Refuses U.S. Offer

["STANDARD" CORRESPONDENT]

Len Harvey has decided not to fight in the United States, either in New York or Chicago, according to a cable received by Jack Solomons in London. His opponent would have been Lou Ambers for the lightweight championship, a quite considerable purse had been offered from New York asking him if he would be willing to meet Ambers for the fight at Madison Square Garden. The cable received by Solomons stated that it would probably be possible to arrange a fight between Harvey and Louis (Kid) in the year. Harvey has replied to this offer by letter stating that he is not interested. "I have had enough travelling for a bit and try until the end of September" Harvey's letter adds. Solomons and probably most Tommy Farr with any British and Empire heavyweight title at stake".

* * *

It was generally supposed that Len Harvey would retire after the last Harvey-Jack McAvoy championship match, and the Dagenham Public fight at the White City Stadium was the largest ever to be staged. Half-a-million people went in this country and it was thought the takings would create a record. But Mr. Harvey is not boxing. People in the fight game know that parts of grounds go to what the total will be, and the official quarters it was suggested that the takings might amount to £75,000 or £80,000. How the figures have been given, they show that the net takings were about £12,000. Harvey got of a gate of just over 40,000, half of which went to the boxers for tickets sold by people who came through the turnstiles and by holders of complimentary tickets.

PUTT MOSSMAN IN NAIROBI

Putt Mossman, who is very well-known in the United States and Canada as a first-class road-racing and fender bicycle competitor, arrived in Nairobi yesterday and left again for Kisumu this morning, driving an exhibition of riding today.

His reputation is such that many remarkable ballooning feats and tricks on both a particularly skilled and sporting nature are said to his charge. In Kampala drew immense crowds. In addition to these tricks, he holds the record on the track and road is a good one.

He has competed on G. K. Chesterton's machine of Mark V.T.T. races and intends to race on that machine next year. He is at present on route to Durban, where he will ride in the Natal Grand Prix races there. It is possible that he will give a display of trick riding before he leaves Nairobi.
