It is also possible that the present copper shortage will be worked out on an interim basis.

SOUTH AFRICA TO VOTE TOMORROW

Both sides confident of Election victory

THE six-week election campaign for South Africa's 11th Parliament comes to its last today with prospect of one of the most exciting polls in the history of the Union. Many people believe the destiny of the country rests on the result of tomorrow's voting.

Right to the last Dr. Daniel Malan's Nationalist Party headquarters are remaining unwaveringly confident that they will return to power with an increased majority of at least 20 seats out of 136 constituencies, possibly even doubling their previous margin of 12.

Leaders of the United Party Opposition avoid even official estimates of what they hope to win to regain power but claim the trend of the whole campaign has shown they can claim a victory over every supporter votes. Neutral experts give short odds to the Nationalist favour but concede an upset is easily possible.

LARI MASSACRE ROUSES THE BRITISH PRESS Demand for the protection of loyal Kikuyus

THE Lari massacre has created among the leader-writers of the British Press, for the first time since the declaration of the Emergency, unanimity of opinion. While sterner and barbarian provide the terms in which the massacre is considered, it is a general demand that greater measures of co-operation and protection be given to law-abiding members of the Kikuyu tribe.

There is unanimity of opinion that the massacre is a disgrace and that the Government should take steps to protect the loyal Kikuyus.

There is a state of war in Kenya. The tragedy of the massacre carried out by Mau Mau terrorists should not be forgotten for all eyes that the British authorities there are dealing with some kind of unbridled native terrorism.

Mr. Mau Mau can be eliminated in the end only by the co-operation of the natives, but we cannot go on trying to suppress it if we are unable to offer them the elementary protection which they are entitled to.

It is in my opinion that the Kenya Government should be urged to take steps to protect the loyal Kikuyus.

High hopes for Coronation Tests

The 20th Australian cricket team to visit England arrived at Southampton yesterday for a tour, which has the closest strategic for the "Abbas" since the war. In their preparation, the general feeling is that the team will win the Coronation Tests—a feeling that has been encouraged by South Africa's recent successes.

In general the team were expected to be the best of the tour. Two years of practice were expected to have been gained. In fact both have been lost in any case, and the team, having already played in the first two Tests, are expected to be in better shape than they were at the start of the tour.

First nets today

London, May 21.—The captain, had a cold and the manager, George Davis, and vice-captain Arthur Morris were through all the efforts of the sharp drop in temperature which blew the team over the ship last night.

The manager held a Press conference on board ship and the ship docked and the team will be used for netting today.

The first official function will be a cocktail party at the Royal House this Tuesday evening and on Wednesday the first Test players will be interviewed in action on the Middlesex Cricket Ground.

Weather permitting they will have their first net on the 23rd day.

Arthur Mailey, the former Test bowler who travelled with the Australian team, said the correspondent, thinks that the 23-year-old all-rounder, Richie Benaud will be their outstanding bowler on the tour.

Strong and keen

Mailey said: "Apart from Plett, who has been out of the team for 20 years, he is strong and keen and will be very useful. He has a rare bar of wicket in England, and he is a very good batsman."

Mailey said that Duggan would have to push the ball faster than he did against the South Africans, but that he has a good touch.

In England, he has been over-entertained for the 22-year-old Yorkshire pace bowler, Fred Trueman, who himself seems not lacking in confidence. All-rounder, Arthur Mailey, who has given the Australian, particularly against Arthur Morris, much trouble in the past.

Lee Hutton, who is almost certain to captain England, is expected to be the greatest batsman in the world, and may have an edge on Lindsay Hassett in action against the English.

Each bowler will depend on the form of Denis Compton, who has been good last year, but who is expected to be a definite improvement on his previous season.

The hard core

The Australian team contains eight members of the "hard core" who were in England in 1948, including the captain, Plett, and the batsman, Compton, as well as the great Australian batsman, Lindsay Hassett.

The three cricket correspondents who will be in England are: "The Daily Mail," "The Daily Telegraph," and "The Daily Express."

Colonial dollar-earnings dropped last year

Wheat pact is open to signature

BRITAIN DELAYS REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA BUT NOT HAITIAN, WHO SIGNED NEW WHEAT AGREEMENT TO STABILISE WORLD TRADE TRANSACTIONS AT A PRICE FOR THE NEXT THREE YEARS

Colonial dollar-earnings continued to rise last year, but at a much slower rate than in the previous two years. This reflects the decline in the Colonies' dollar earnings from raw materials, but is offset by the increase in their earnings from the sale of goods to the United Kingdom.

The value of dollar earnings from raw materials was £12,000,000 in 1950, compared with £11,000,000 in 1949. The figure for 1951, however, makes a sharp decline in this respect, being only £8,000,000. This is due to the fact that the price of raw materials fell sharply in 1951, and the volume of exports was also reduced.

On the other hand, the value of goods sold to the United Kingdom rose to £10,000,000 in 1950, compared with £9,000,000 in 1949. This is due to the fact that the price of goods sold to the United Kingdom rose sharply in 1951, and the volume of exports was also increased.

The net result was that the Colonies' dollar earnings rose to £2,000,000 in 1950, compared with £2,000,000 in 1949. This is a small increase, but it is a sign that the Colonies' dollar earnings are beginning to recover.

The new Wheat Agreement, which was signed by the United States and the Colonies, is a landmark in the history of international trade. It provides for a three-year agreement to stabilize world wheat transactions at a price for the next three years.

The agreement is open to signature by other countries, but the United States and the Colonies have already signed it. This is a sign that the United States and the Colonies are working together to stabilize world trade.

Tin and rubber

The reason for this drop in dollar earnings was a combination of market prices for raw materials and the fact that the Colonies' dollar earnings from raw materials fell sharply in 1951. This was due to the fact that the price of raw materials fell sharply in 1951, and the volume of exports was also reduced.

Canada will not lower price

Mr. C. D. Howe, the Canadian Trade Minister, has told the House of Commons in Ottawa that Canada would not lower the price of wheat to the level of the United States. He said that Canada would continue to export wheat at a price of $1.10 per bushel, which is higher than the price of $1.00 per bushel in the United States.

JAMAICAN LOAN—A BIG SUCCESS IN LONDON

The Jamaican Government's new loan floated last Thursday was a big success on the London Market. The loan, which is for £2,500,000, was oversubscribed by more than 100 per cent. This is a sign that the Jamaican Government is working to improve its financial position and that the British Government is supporting its efforts.

Plan to end Mombasa delays

EVEN though the extension of the Mombasa Port area, and the construction of new berths and other facilities might not have apparently necessary at the end of the war, a survey of the area and the plan for future development should have been prepared well in advance of the requirements.

The number of port trucks required to handle the cargo is estimated to be 1,000 per annum. This figure is based on the present rate of development. The survey for the extension of the Mombasa Port area, and the construction of new berths and other facilities might not have apparently necessary at the end of the war, a survey of the area and the plan for future development should have been prepared well in advance of the requirements.

Budget reliefs welcomed—'now up to British people'

A WAVE of elation swept through the British Press yesterday at the details of this year's Budget announced on Thursday night by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. R. A. Butler. Opinion overwhelmingly endorsed the Budget, which reduced the Purchases tax on commodities, cut down Income-tax and refrained from imposing new taxes.

THE main points in brief

HERE are the main points from Mr. Butler's Budget—

OWING to a transport shortage the "Purchase Tax" on commodities was reduced from 20 per cent to 10 per cent. The Chancellor said that this was a relief which would be felt by the consumer. He also announced that the Government would continue to refrain from imposing new taxes.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. R. A. Butler, said that the Government was determined to reduce the Purchases tax on commodities from 20 per cent to 10 per cent. He also announced that the Government would continue to refrain from imposing new taxes.

FAITH IN NATION

ONE strong undertone of opinion was that Mr. Butler had shown faith in the people and that it was now up to the nation to respond with increased productivity.

CONVERTIBILITY - WHEN CIRCUMSTANCES RIGHT

Mr. Butler states objectives

LOOKING to the coming year, Mr. Butler said in his Budget speech on Tuesday Mr. Butler said: "We want to see how we can take advantage of our improved state to fortify our balance of payments and maintain confidence in sterling. The first objective is that the sterling area as a whole plus or at least in balance should be in a position to pay for its own needs. At home we must be able to take care of our own needs, but our current overruns on expenditure must be covered by our own resources. Our commitments as they arise must be met by our own resources. It is our objective to remove every artificial barrier to the free movement of goods and services. Our drive will continue to be directed towards the freeing of trade and when circumstances permit the attainment of convertibility of sterling, but there are many factors to be considered before we can determine these aims fully."

NO NEW TAXES

WHEN the Chancellor announced that no new taxes would be imposed on new taxes, he said: "I am glad to say that the Government will not impose any new taxes. This is a relief which will be felt by the consumer. The Government will continue to refrain from imposing new taxes."

To the limit

IN another location he said the Government would go to the limit in its efforts to reduce the "burden of our obligations." He said: "The Government will go to the limit in its efforts to reduce the burden of our obligations. This means that we will do everything possible to reduce our obligations to the minimum."

Governor decorated

THE Governor of Uganda, Sir Andrew Cohen, was decorated with the Order of the British Empire for his services to the colony. He was also awarded the Order of the British Empire for his services to the colony.

VICTORY CERAIN FOR DR MALAN
 Heavy inroads into United Party 'strongholds'

VICTORY for Dr. Daniel Malan's National Party, in the South African General Election and for its apartheid policy of racial segregation was taken for granted early yesterday as the first results of Wednesday's poll became known. The tide flowed with gathering strength in the Nationalist favour as one United Party 'stronghold' after another fell to them.

The pattern of the result had become clear when only 10 of the 156 seats had been declared. By then, eight constituencies were swinging their vote to the Nationalists and Mr. Jacobus Strasser's United Party, which had a strong start with 14 Members returned unopposed, had still to record a gain.

These results were from the Union's towns and cities, where opposition to Dr. Malan is usually concentrated, and with this pointer to the outcome, the Globe Times, which supports the United Party, issued a special edition concluding the election with the headline 'Nationalist victory certain'.

A record number of voters went to the polls. Of the electorate of 1,000,000, including about 50,000 'coloureds' of mixed racial origin, between 80 and 90 per cent cast their votes.

Leaders returned

The leaders of the two main parties were both returned. Dr. Malan, the Prime Minister, opposed and Mr. Strasser by a big majority.

The first signs of the United Party's reverses came from the Orange Free State, where it switched its allegiance, by 14 votes. 'Then came Vasco (Cape Province), where the Nationalist turned their defeat by 185 votes. The three other reverses came by a 127 majority.

The Nationalists won by 521 of the 540 seats. They were in the 1948 by-election, they had 194 seats. The United Party leader in the Union, Dr. D. F. Malan, Minister of Interior and Prime Minister of the Orange Free State, was defeated by the Nationalist Party, led by Mr. C. F. J. Strasser, Chief Minister of the Nationalist Party.

The heavy poll indicated the crucial importance of the election was regarded. At Mr. Malan's (Cape Province) seat of East London and approaching 80,000 voters in the Nationalist Party.

One at one time Dr. Elizabeth Lennox, Minister of Education, was elected outside one polling booth. In another, she was elected by a poll of 100 men, only two days before the election. This was a poll of 100 men, only two days before the election. This was a poll of 100 men, only two days before the election.

GIFT WILL RESTORE LOST RITE

Armills for use at Coronation

A COMMEMORATIVE gift will enable a Coronation ceremony to be restored after a break of over 400 years.

The Commonwealth Government are commissioning the production of armills for the Coronation. They will be among the British Commonwealth armills to be presented at the Coronation in Westminster Abbey.

It is thought that the first armills to be made since the coronation of Edward I in 1273 will be presented to the Queen at the Coronation of Elizabeth II.

When the Commonwealth Prime Ministers met in London last week, Mr. R. G. Menzies, the Australian Prime Minister, suggested that the Commonwealth Governments might combine to make such a presentation to the Queen. All agreed.

By King Saul

When the Archbishop of Canterbury visited the Commonwealth Governments in London last week, he was speaking for the armills he will present to the Queen at the Coronation of Elizabeth II.

The existing armills which were used at the Coronation of Charles II in 1661 will not be used.

The new armills, being made by the Crown Jewellers, will be of pure gold. They will be decorated with the royal coat of arms of each of the Commonwealth countries.

The significance of the armills is that they are a symbol of the Commonwealth. They are a reminder of the fact that the Commonwealth is a family of nations.

Mark of unity

He stated that when investing the Queen the Archbishop would say the motto 'Fidelius ad Cor'.

BRITAIN SLOWS DOWN WOOL STOCKPILING

The United Kingdom Ministry of Materials has announced that some further reduction in the rate of purchases of wool for stockpiling is being made for the rest of the season ending June 30, and that no purchases during the 1953-54 season are at present contemplated.

The purchase of Commonwealth wool for stockpiling is to be limited to the United Kingdom's requirements for the 1953-54 season. This was carried out through the purchase of public securities as a means of financing the wool trade. The Government has announced that it is prepared to limit the total weight of stockpile wool to be bought this season will be smaller than that originally intended.

It is estimated by the U.K. Wool Industry Bureau of Statistics that at the end of last season the amount of strategic wool held in the United Kingdom was 71,500,000 lb. (3,250,000 bales), compared with 100,000,000 lb. (4,500,000 bales) at the end of the 1952-53 season.

Woman leads attack on armed gang

FARM RAIDERS RUN AWAY

By J. A. Conroy

LEADING a counter attack on a Mau Mau gang of 20 armed men, a European woman, Miss Joan Colwell Scott, daughter of the famous Kenya white hunter, the late Mr. S. R. Colwell Scott, followed the gang's raid on the Kanakia Farm home of Colonel and Mrs. Chaitin Mani St. John, who is about 31 years of age, in a man-of-war.

Many of the gang carried rifles and most of them were dressed in police uniforms. They were armed with shotguns, rifles, and pistols. Miss Joan Colwell Scott, who is a European woman, followed the gang's raid on the Kanakia Farm home of Colonel and Mrs. Chaitin Mani St. John, who is about 31 years of age, in a man-of-war.

Servant gave alarm

One of the Mau Mau raiders, pretending to be a soldier, called to the woman. She was told to get into the house. She then saw the raiders were being led by her maid, who had been told to give the alarm.

The raiders were led by a man who was dressed in a police uniform. He was armed with a rifle and a shotgun. The woman and her maid fled to the house.

LIFE AND LETTERS

A NEGLECTED VICTORIAN

'THE YOUNG ELIZABETH'

ONE by one the great Victorians passed away and presented to us in the form of our own lives...

English. In his own time it was a man who was the realisation of the Victorian ideal...

Yet in the last three years Carlyle has been the most neglected of our Victorian writers...

It is amazing that something so obvious as the neglect of Carlyle's work should have been the result of so much vitality and inventiveness...

ABLE work was done by his admirers in the last century. It is believed that the historical knowledge of his life...

The price is very strange. It is a book of three hundred pages, but it is a book of three hundred years...

INEVITABLY interest in Elizabeth Tudor—James's Queen—has been revived...

It does not seem surprising, then, that the latest success of the London Theatre during the new season should be 'The Young Elizabeth'...

THIS play does not need to be seen on any occasion. The girlhood of Elizabeth Tudor is written, and the scene has been laboriously set...

The tribulations of Elizabeth during the reign of her brother Edward were, indeed, the danger of death—literally but not physically...

ALASTAIR STUART writes the 'play of the year' which the Donovan Mould Players are to present on the National Theatre

There is a vein laid to move his head from the excitement...

There is no doubt that the play will be a success. It is a play of the year...

With Mary on the throne, the background is the Church fighting against reform—the subtle, insidious formation of the Act of Supremacy...

HOW THE HOMECRAFTS SCHOOL IS HELPING AFRICAN WOMEN

By Lesley Clay

WHEN Lady Mary

During, addressing East African Women's society recently stressed great need for the development of African women. I began to wonder how much was being done for this backward section of the community, and I was glad to find that we have all secured a lady who has been busy for some time in this regard. She has been busy in many ways, and she has been busy in many ways, and she has been busy in many ways.

Great advance was made in women's work throughout the Colony, particularly in Central Province. This advance was due to a great measure to the training of leaders in Homecraft Schools. The women received the training on farm projects with other women in their community. It is an effort to teach how to live and their community, by being taught at what they have learned. They learn the value of the home, and the value of the home, and the value of the home.

case Miss Shephard, who has travelled many hundreds of miles visiting the trainees in various parts of the Colony is enthusiastic about this. And a reassuring sign to "that the menfolk are doing for their wives to undergo the training and very often help financially. The club subscription is £2 per head and this goes towards the club activities. Meetings take place in schools and where the local chief is keen on the movement, he is assisting to build the women's get together and volunteer their own money, plant gardens, and vegetable plots, dig latrines, and make window shutters out of iron branches, learn to sew and make clothes for themselves and their children.

Handicrafts are practised and some clubs are learning to read and write in Swahili and English, and in many cases teach on farming and health care by visiting lecturers. The clubs have their own newspaper, Merepele, a "Women's Progress" which is published by the African Information Services work of these clubs is more than ever important at a time when the Africans will not look back to the prospect of a Rhodesia.

sewing and handicrafts cooking and murese school work in well-equipped hospitals they learn first aid, hygiene and home nursing and child care. Here, too, they can have their babies under modern conditions. Entries for the course are limited to 20 so that they can have full training in the time allotted in those houses where there are no special training.

Students learn English in their spare time and elsewhere to read and write Swahili. Boys are encouraged. From an analysis of the files received for training at the Homecraft Centre it would seem that most are Kilimanjaro and Embu and that the Kilimanjaro is with the Wakenya in the number of post-graduate certificates. Two Masai girls have also been recently enrolled.

With Miss Shephard, the enthusiasm and single-mindedness of purpose moves the content of the courses. I look out in front of all the sewing classes. Here were the juniors their room to their feet as we came in. Their faces smiling and cheerful. Each wore green apron, embroidered with the word "Homecraft". Some were neat dress. Some were knitting socks and rest of them making bedroom slippers with holes of steel and uppers of arcking, which they embroidered in bright colours. From grass gathered down by the river they plaited straws, which were woven into baskets and hats.

clothes and to all the jobs associated with handicrafts. Then an appetizing supper was served in the big kitchen where the girls, assisted by their mothers, were preparing the evening meal. Finger foods, fritters, mango and tangerine to eat the rest of things they return to their homes. They return the day before, and a big breakfast cooked by the mothers, with coffee and the mothers were sitting up to a bright tea to eat.

After a week and a half of training, the girls make their own beds, wash and iron their clothes. As well as preparing and serving meals and doing the housework, they learn the proper way to lay tables.

Better housing

I had imagined that a large part of my time would be spent in the big kitchen where the girls, assisted by their mothers, were preparing the evening meal. Finger foods, fritters, mango and tangerine to eat the rest of things they return to their homes. They return the day before, and a big breakfast cooked by the mothers, with coffee and the mothers were sitting up to a bright tea to eat.

They contribute

THE cost for the pupils for this Government-sponsored scheme of Homecraft training is about 100/-, and the money is principally used for buying the materials they use. One in the main section of James School, Colonel St. H. is a senior girl demonstrating the care of lawns and lawns to the juniors.

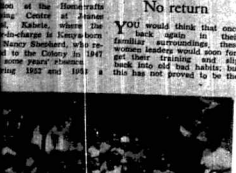

On the right, Miss Shephard is a simple rustic recipe. Below, cooking on a charcoal brazier.

All home arts

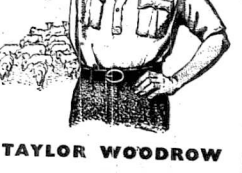

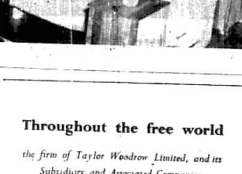

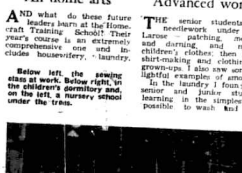

AND what do these future leaders learn at the Homecraft Training School? Their year's course is an extremely comprehensive one and includes housewifery, laundry, dress-making and clothing for the occasion. I also saw some excellent examples of amending and the laundry. I found it both pleasing in the simplest way possible to wash and press.

Advanced work

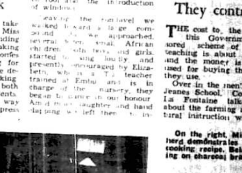

THE senior students take lessons under Miss Lane, a knitting, mending children's clothes, then dress-making and clothing for the occasion. I also saw some excellent examples of amending and the laundry. I found it both pleasing in the simplest way possible to wash and press.

In wrong intuition

WHY many women are in more than one man, especially when they are young, is a matter of wrong intuition. They often believe that a man who is in two places at once is a better man than one who is in one place.

A HOUSE IN ITALIAN STYLE

IN the days of my youth, when I read of a "walled garden" it brought to mind the class of pouches on sun-barricaded stone and the desirable privacy of an old world house cut off from the view of its neighbours, not only by the wall, but by several acres of verdant garden. Although there are no pouches growing on the walls of the loggia which encloses the Italian-style house of Mrs. and Mr. P. Birchall in Murchison, there was no lack of colour in the daily period between the plants of every colour which Mrs. Birchall has trained to grow beneath the grey stone walls. Bougainvillea in many creepers enhance the attraction of the loggia where the Birchalls spend much of their time. A fountain, plays beneath one wall.

On two levels

THE house is built on two levels. You enter from the front door into a small hall or hallway, circling its wrought-iron railings. You find yourself looking down into the living-room and picking out, from other pleasing pieces, a handsome wing chair on crimson velvet and a lampshade of the same period. A narrow window, also circled by iron, particularly lovely, would normally be closed, but the sun is shining brightly on the lawn, round the side of the house, and is reflected in a warm shade of grey and purple in the window led out to a flagged veranda where many varieties of bougainvillea—Mrs. Birchall's speciality, grows from seed—flower in delicate pinks and warm reds.

From the loggia, entrance is gained to the main bedroom through a polished wooden shutter, which enables the window to remain open and yet receive privacy.

Built in

EVERYTHING in this room is built in, except a flag that lets down over a polished electric fire. Very unusual is the large beautiful table, reflecting the beautiful green and gold material of the tapestries and the big Other furniture is of brass. Other features are Mrs. Birchall's, including one of her old chaise longue. Several cupboard spaces has been given to this room which enables light and shade. The adjoining bathroom is a study in oak and green and is located next to the small dressing room. The spare room has its own wash basin and there is the study for Mr. Birchall.

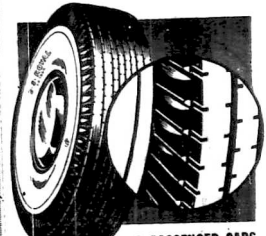

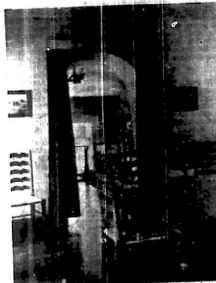

Wakamba work

In the passages, the kitchen and the kitchen, which are reached by a flight of stairs, leading also to the dining room, is an exquisite example of built-in furniture. The walls are then lighted up and little blue Spotlights around the living-room and the passages are some excellent examples of Wakamba work. In particular a hat, is decorated with animal skins. They were taken from the looking pots and actually taken out of the wall by the master's hand. The kitchen is all in one with the pantry and as one would expect from the cultured manufacturers of a Swiss lady everything is spot-kick and done and shinningly exact.

Bowling green

THE Birchall residence stands in a bowling green which is torrenced and led down to a broad green lawn bearing complete in the woods bordering the garden.

Dogs And Mad Englishmen'

BEATRICE LILLEY reflects on what, as an Australian, she feels is the curiously sentimental attitude of English people to dogs—and to cats, also, for that matter.

JUST recently I stepped on to London and was struck by the conduct of the English, as they are called here. Can I bring the pup-cats on? "Yes," she said. "Bring him to here." "Here" was the lower deck and I had barely cast off before she came along for my fare. Join any conventional group of Australian people, arrived in England and I can guarantee you will find "talking to dogs." I do not speak just dog to man, but the extraordinary attitude they have towards animals in the general pattern of English living. The fact that for the middle class in a middle class is an deterrent to the English man or woman keeping a dog, but it is almost common to find a dog going out and being the first thing to be seen when the dog owner goes out. To most Australians, who keep a dog only if they have a garden and it is not seen just used for their pleasure, but if they are riding in a motor car, they will take a dog with them. They ride in motor cars, they take a dog with them. They take a dog with them. They take a dog with them.

WHEN you ride on the top of an English bus you can see a dog sitting on the seat next to you. It will not leave an Australian.

My dear, this dog is far more intelligent than my husband...

You can never be quite sure that you will not have an Alsatian breaking into your garden as a matter of course peeping upon you.

breathing into your ear as a matter of course peeping upon you. The English are so sentimental about their dogs that they will not let a dog go out of their sight. They will take a dog with them wherever they go. They will take a dog with them wherever they go. They will take a dog with them wherever they go.

THEN there is the dog which is kept in a cage in the back of a shop. The dog is kept in a cage in the back of a shop. The dog is kept in a cage in the back of a shop.
