about

TANGANYIKA WITHOUT PREJUDICE

THE TIMES

"This excellent little book is very interesting, and should be read by all concerned in Africa."

THE MORNING STAR

"These are the best thoughts on Tanganyika that I have read. It can be used as a guide in this big new territory. Mr. Reid writes both for the settler and the sportsman."

THE EVENING STANDARD

"Mr. Reid has set out clearly all that needs to be known by a visitor or settler. The book is well-written and everything is done with, not in general terms, but with detail and precision."

THE CROWN COLONIST

"The author's vigorous and direct narrative makes pleasant reading, and that anyone can reasonably wish to know about Tanganyika will be found between the two covers. A special virtue of the book is the thoroughly practical nature of the information."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Nairobi Cathedral Appeal.

Funds Urgently Needed.

To the Editors of "East Africa"

The Late "Ken" Fairbairn.

Tribute to a Northern Rhodesian.

To the Editor of "East Africa"

It has been said in fact, a medical officer in Northern Rhodesia once asserted it as his experience that when a man, as an ordinary walk of life like ours does, he is only really sincerely regretted by from three to five people in number. That is emphatically incorrect when one thinks of "Ken" Fairbairn, whose passing you report.

He was a man without an enemy, a man of many personalities, a man who was really loved by all. He will be most sincerely regretted by all who know him down the years. The world would be a better place were there more like him, and he leaves behind a permanent memory.

"Late" Ken" Fairbairn, the sportsman and good fellow.

Killed by Elephants.

Analysis of Fatal Accidents.

To the Editor of "East Africa"

Sir, Captain Salmon in his review of Commander D. E. Hunt's "Elephants" an article from which is published in your issue of January 1932 bears out my experience, and that of others whom I have met in Northern Rhodesia during the past thirty years, that the main danger in hunting elephant does not lie in the possibility of being trampled upon in a blind stampede of the animals.

Of twelve fatal accidents which I can recall at the moment, all of which were the result of deliberate attacks by individual elephants, eight were caused by bulls which had been wounded and followed, one by a cow with calf which was come upon unexpectedly in high grass, one by a timber bull in a small herd which walked on foot road and at work and one by a garden-ranger cow which in the other case a Native hunter wounded a bull in dense, high grass, gave chase with the herd stampeded, and ran into three cows lined up directly in his path. One of the animals charged and killed him outright.

It may have been a coincidence, but of the unwounded animals were concerned the bodies of the victims were not badly mutilated, whereas the wounded animals continued to attack until they were killed or badly wounded and gored the body to a pulp.

In considering dangers in hunting elephant the time of the year and the country in which they are hunted are factors. In my experience August and June are the danger months for hunting herds, as during those months the "bush" cows appear and guard the calves which are then liable to get away quickly from the hunters.

Unwounded elephants are unlikely to attack from a distance of more than a few yards, but should they perceive an enemy at any close range they are liable to do so, and this might conceivably happen if a stampede should the herd come directly towards the hunter, which it is liable to do, and it is in such a case that the danger is greatest.

In 1920 and 1921 an appeal on behalf of the Nairobi Cathedral, Nairobi, was made at Home to those interested in the Church of East Africa. A sum approaching £5,000 was raised as a result of the appeal, and H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was among the subscribers.

The completion of the Cathedral after the war had been expected as part of the original plan made by the architect, the late Mr. Tommas Moore. It had been thought the North Tower had been added to a certain height, and the new South Tower started.

During the intervening years the Dean of the Cathedral has collected £1,500 for the purchase of a new organ; the organ has cost £1,800, and there is still £500 to be collected. The organ arrives in the country in July, and we want on its arrival to place it in its permanent position in the Cathedral. This can be done only by raising the South and North Towers sufficiently to carry the roof of the transept, and our present objective is to raise £2,000 which will be applied on this work.

In addition to subscribing most of the £5,000, the people of Kenya, and of Nairobi in particular, have subscribed the whole of the £1,500 for the new organ, and they are again making a great effort, despite bad times, to raise the £2,000 and the further £5,000 required to complete the purchase of the organ. I remember that when I was last at Home, Mr. Sir gave us every help and assistance to raise funds for the completion of the only Cathedral of the English Church in the Highlands of Kenya.

Visitors to this country acclaim as they see the unfinished state of the Cathedral that there is not very much religion in Kenya when we allow our churches to be still in an unfinished state, but few of our visitors realise the hard and desperate times we have been through. Now, in the best approach of better things, we are again pressing forward with the work of completing our Cathedral.

If £2,000 can be raised, this will see the new organ in its permanent position, and will encourage us all to go forward towards our ultimate goal we have in our minds, the completion of the architect's plan.

The Cathedral is the centre of English Church life in the Highlands, and it is one of our greatest gifts to us a vista of our ambitions and our aspirations. The Cathedral will stand as a monument to the objective which is now standing in the heart of the Cathedral Commission who they have the first and supreme duty as a Cathedral is by its own ministry and by the religious services held within it to be witnesses to the things unseen, and eternal to man to offer prayers and reverent worship to Almighty God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

It is a sad thing that the funds in Kenya are having a falling July and of no help in August. We would especially like to see some help us if they can be given in this form, or in any other small way to be welcomed and gratefully acknowledged.

Subscriptions may be sent to Major Corbett and Colonel M. East African Dependencies Office, and Buildings, Trafalgar Square, W.C. 2, to Mr. Sandford Peck, Hon. Treasurer to the Cathedral, P. O. Box 530, Nairobi.

Short-wave Receiver Hints.

How to Ensure Constant Good Reception.

To the Editor of "East Africa"

SIR, The Rules by "Ubique" in your Feb. 1 issue should be very helpful to beginners in the short wave receiver sets, but there are several points I should like to bring up.

First, it is no longer true that "well-tuned" is good in the tropics. With a good wooden case you can be any amount of receiver, and have three stations at reasonable loud speaker volume and what might be called "gramophone" quality.

Next comes the matter of wave lengths. On the so-called short waves there are no stations set aside for broadcasting. They are to be used for news, 5000 metres, 31 metres, etc. Nearly all road-a-long stations, and all those heard by the East Africa people, come from these wave bands.

Take for example Johannesburg, Durban, Salisbury and Johannesburg again in this wave band, and being comparatively close to most East African stations, one or both of them can be heard without any difficulty. Johannesburg has a full-time programme and the other a part-time programme. Nairobi heard a German broadcast from a band I not at all best, still about 1000 metres (Germany) and Daventry G.S. is a very good late at night.

On the 10 metre band Daventry G.S. is the only reliable station working between about between 30 and 40 p.m. it is very good indeed.

On the 16 metre band there are many stations, but the most powerful station, starting at 6.45 p.m. to 8 p.m. is quite good from 30 to 40 p.m. but almost all it is difficult to separate from Paris. From 8 o'clock for an hour or so, Paris, Daventry G.S. and another station are quite good, but these two become inclined to interfere with one another.

The 10 metre band is at its best during the hour before sunrise. Paris is a very good station work on this wave length from 6 to 8 a.m. The 16 metre band is supposed to be a daytime wave, and certainly it is, but there is an excellent here, Lambrook (U.K.), which starts at 6 p.m. does not reach its best until as late as 8 p.m.

A useful hint to remember in East Africa, where atmospheres are almost always such that the shorter the wave length the less good reception will be. For this reason Band 10 is a very useful band for the beginner.

Many other stations can be heard on a good set.

but I have named only those which can be heard readily well in East Africa. Buy a good set, and you will be able to catch excellent entertainment at any time of the day and by time. It will be money well spent. Yours faithfully, A. J. ...

To the Editor of "East Africa"

As a sportsman to enjoy days of dangerous and exciting game, and of the reactions of my hounds thereto, I would be very grateful if any of your readers with personal experience would get in touch with me by sending as detailed an account as the leisure will allow, of the game track on the subject in the autumn. Unsound Mining Flotations

Within a few hours of reading the leading article in your issue of April 29 warning your readers that there was reason to fear the flotation in London of unsound mining companies, for the examination and exploitation of mining proposition in East Africa, I happened to read a report of an address given to the Rhodesian Chamber of Mines by Mr. V. B. Durham, who said, inter alia, "There has been nothing speculative about one or two of the recent flotations. These ventures have had a chance of becoming successful, more than the others. The ways of reaching the Kingdom of Heaven would be schemes do the country and to stimulate white mining. It is to be hoped that our mining and gas will be successful." - From a Rhodesian.

Car Chased by a Rhino

The Irish Motor News has published an entertaining article by Mr. Murray Blizard, entitled 'A Motorist's Thrills' in which he gives graphic descriptions of 'coasting' a complaining car over rough tracks, and recounts some exciting adventures. The following occurred between Mombasa and Nairobi.

The driver, who was fully occupied in steering the car, suddenly started to wobble and attempted to stop the wobble which was rather annoying in the road. He managed to get over his wobble, but the driver was a huge rhino who had been on a rampage on a road. He had been down his little wicked eye, and he was looking at the car. He was looking at the car. He was looking at the car.

As the rhino became more and more annoyed, he began to charge. He was a huge rhino who had been on a rampage on a road. He had been down his little wicked eye, and he was looking at the car. He was looking at the car. He was looking at the car.

The rhino followed the car for some time, and it was a very strange sight. It was a very strange sight. It was a very strange sight. It was a very strange sight.

The Tanganyika Mandate.

Dr. J. J. Linn to Speak in London.

Dr. J. J. Linn, M.C., of Kampala, formerly Chief Secretary of Tanganyika, and now Governor of the British North Borneo, is to talk to the African group of the Old Seas League at the House, Park House, 13, Leinster Street, Savoy, on Thursday, May 7. The Tanganyika Mandate, a most interesting address is certain, and all East African and African friends, whether members of the League or not, are cordially invited to attend. The talk will be held at 8 p.m., and the address begins at 7.15 p.m. The lecture arrangements will be facilitated if those intending to be present would notify the fact by post card to the Hon. Secretary of the Group at Vernon House.

East Africa in the House.

Minutes of Kakamega.

Asked about the alleged Kikuyu plan to visit Kakamega, Mr. Philip Cunliffe Lister replied that it had been made known to the Government during the visit he had made to the area. The Government has since taken steps to ensure that the Kikuyus are not harassed in any way. He said that the Government was not prepared to prevent any such visit, but would ensure that the Kikuyus were not harassed in any way.

Mr. Mamwaro asked whether the Government had made Kakamega to the neighbors, allowing adequate share for the housing and for the recreation of Native workers. Mr. Philip Cunliffe Lister replied that the Kikuyus employed in Kakamega were housed in adjacent villages, and lived in their own homes. The arrangements for housing those who had come from a distance were satisfactory. He assured the House that the Administration would ensure satisfactory arrangements for the Kikuyus' development, and that he was very ready to discuss the matter with their employees.

Mr. Lejor was informed that no change had been made in the status of the Kenya Labor Department. For convenience, the duties of officers in the Labor Section had been taken over by a number of more than one Department, but no change in duties or status in relationship to other Departments was involved. When Mr. Lejor asked that the Kenya Government be advised to see that there was no weakening in the labor Department in the course of development in the Colony, Mr. Philip Cunliffe Lister replied that it would be a mistake to advise them of something which they were already aware of. He said that the Kenya Government had been advised of this in the House of Representatives. Mr. J. J. Linn and the draft Workers' Compensation Bill was also discussed. Mr. Linn said that the Bill had been recently communicated to the Governor of Tanganyika, and that the Government of Kenya had been advised of this. He said that the Bill had been recently communicated to the Governor of Tanganyika, and that the Government of Kenya had been advised of this.

Representation of Native Interests.

Mr. Philip Cunliffe Lister said that the Government was in accordance with the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee of the House of Commons that the appointed representation of native interests be increased. He said that the Government was in accordance with the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee of the House of Commons that the appointed representation of native interests be increased. He said that the Government was in accordance with the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee of the House of Commons that the appointed representation of native interests be increased.

Mr. Bamford asked the Colonial Secretary if he had any plans to visit the East African region in the near future. Mr. Linn replied that he had no plans to visit the East African region in the near future. He said that he was very busy with his work in the House of Commons, and that he would not be able to visit the East African region in the near future.

change of a college for secondary education for African children, the teaching in English instead of Swahili, in the abolition of schools, the restriction of alienated land, the abolition of the hut tax and of the Native Registration Ordinance, the payment of proper salaries to African Civil servants and chiefs, and the abolition of restrictions on coffee, kinyasi and Natives. Sir Philip Cunliffe Lister replied that he had asked the Governor of Kenya for his views on this memorandum, and he would await an answer before replying to the question.

Mr. Linn asked whether the Government was going to make any provision for the revenues of the Game Department or other public funds, for devastation caused by the Kikuyus, by replanting and, if that was not done, whether the Secretary of State would recommend the compensation should be made in future for such damage. Sir Philip Cunliffe Lister replied that, as far as the Government was concerned, no compensation was payable in such cases, but that the Government was in a position to make such provision if it was considered necessary. He said that the Government was in a position to make such provision if it was considered necessary.

Mr. Hall Gaine called attention to the Tanganyika Government's proposal to prohibit the carriage of goods by motor transport for any roads, and asked whether it was intended to do so. Mr. Linn replied that the Government was not intending to do so, but that it was considering the possibility of doing so in some circumstances. He said that the Government was not intending to do so, but that it was considering the possibility of doing so in some circumstances.

Mr. Gaine asked the Secretary of State whether it was intended to introduce a new tax to encourage any particular industry, and whether it was intended to encourage any particular industry. Mr. Linn replied that the Government was not intending to do so, but that it was considering the possibility of doing so in some circumstances. He said that the Government was not intending to do so, but that it was considering the possibility of doing so in some circumstances.

Miss Platt Memorial Fund.

Mr. Linn said that he was pleased to learn of the death of Miss Platt, and that he was sorry to hear of her death. He said that Miss Platt was a very kind and generous person, and that her death was a great loss to the community. He said that he was pleased to learn of the death of Miss Platt, and that he was sorry to hear of her death.

Mr. Norman Linn.

Mr. J. Norman Linn, well-known consulting mining engineer, who recently returned to England from Kakamega, and who had for previous years carried out various investigations in the Tanganyika Territory and in the Aden area, has been asked to give a lecture for British students. He hopes to do this in London in August or September.

Mr. J. J. Linn.

Mr. J. J. Linn, former Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce in Tanganyika, is in the Chamber of Commerce in London, and is acting in connection with a bill to compensate the Government for the loss of the ship during the war in the East African region. He said that the Government was in a position to make such provision if it was considered necessary.

MATTERS OF MOMENT.

In discussing the appointment of Economic Advisers to the East African Governments, it has been generally assumed, and ECONOMIC ADVISERS FOR GOVERNMENTS, that such guides, philosophers and friends, must necessarily be attached to the Native Affairs Department. We have the advantage of treating this important subject before the public on a number of occasions, and not once has it been completely changed. We are, however, by the main convinced that it is necessarily the best arrangement. We do not doubt that the territories as a whole, and not least their Governments, would benefit greatly from the systematic provision of advice by experienced business men of broad outlook and long vision who, since they could succeed in their task only by winning the confidence of the chief officers of Government, would also have to be men of good will and openhandedness. It would not be better to attach them to the Treasury Secretariat than to the Native Affairs Department. The advantages of treating each industry as a whole, and not making separate compartments of European and Native production within it, have been strikingly demonstrated. Tanganyika and Uganda have learned, for instance, that Native coffee growing cannot be regarded as something entirely distinct from European production of the same crop. Uganda has been taught the same lesson with regard to tobacco, and Kenya's finding that the dairying of the proposed Economic Advisers, Native Affairs, shows they would tend to think, or at least to have the impression of thinking, primarily of Native production and not of each crop as a whole. As we consider that the scope of usefulness would thereby be increased, it is a pity that the suggestion that they should be placed in the Department of Native Affairs, and not in the Native Affairs Department, would require each proposal from the final stage and point of view to be advantageous for the territories.

forced at the outset to reckon with the financial applications of each subject. There, of course, a good deal has to be said for and against this idea, and we shall welcome the views of our readers upon it.

The future of the Native looms so large in African debates and publications that the destiny of the European settlers sometimes seems to be almost ignored; yet the progress of the Native is wrapped up with that of the white man, and white and black must swim or sink together. The importance of the white side of the question is brought vividly home by the Southern Rhodesian Agricultural Committee's report, parts of which are quoted on another page. The reports of the Morris Carter Commission and the Economic Development Committee in Kenya will shed further light on this side of the problem and it may surely be assumed that Sir Malcolm Hailey, when making his survey, will not neglect the most important aspect or relegate it to the background. Without stable white settlement on the land Southern Rhodesia and Kenya, for instance, would obviously revert to Native States; and in greater or lesser degree the same is true of other territories. In the Rhodesias, Kenya, Uganda, and Tanganyika, will prove an essential element in development, and they can never take the place of agriculture.

However important, mines are an auxiliary, though exceedingly helpful in providing international markets, creating wealth, and providing roads and railways, they are not substitutes for farming. The Southern Rhodesian Committee emphasises the fact that the whole structure of white farming may collapse. So far it has kept upright, partly because

WHAT ARE ITS FOUNDATIONS?

Propagating Tropical Plants. East Africa in the House.

Sir Daniel Hall's Address.

SIR DANIEL HALL, addressing the Planters' Group of the Royal Empire Society last week, pointed out that in tropical and semi-tropical countries a number of crops which have comparatively recently been brought into large scale cultivation could be greatly improved by breeding and selection, and that whereas the ultimate improvement in these crops is brought about by controlled breeding and seedling selection, the first step generally involved vegetative reproduction. In this connexion he referred to six important plantation crops raised from seed to which his remarks were applicable: tea, coffee, coconut, oil palm, rubber (Hevea) and cacao.

After describing the work at the East Malling station, especially with apples, and elsewhere, he passed to the practical questions involved, especially the different methods of reproduction. Of these the most important is the establishment of the clones of the selected plant on the roof system of an open plant by budding, grafting or inarching. Though he has been told that coffee would not respond to such measures, he had found it possible to graft coffee seedlings with the greatest ease in an English greenhouse. Moreover, Dutch investigators in Java had already worked out methods for reproducing selected examples of coffee bushes by using the same methods. This means to say that the clones of the selected plants which would be a boon to the tropics and semi-tropics would be found in a paper by Feryard in the forthcoming July issue of the Empire Journal of Experimental Agriculture.

Passing to the importance of stock selection, Sir Daniel Hall enumerated the different methods, pointing out that experiments had shown the value of vegetative propagation of stock to clones themselves, wherever a high degree of control and uniformity in the plantation was sought. Then he dealt with the liability of vegetatively propagated plants to "wear out," and their susceptibility to disease, especially virus diseases.

As regards coffee, tea and cacao experimental work was in progress, though success seemed to be assured; he was not sure that any clonal plantations of tea and cacao on a commercial scale had yet been established. He did not know of any firm vegetative propagation would be possible with coconut and oil palm, but he believed that no plant would more repay a sustained large-scale experimental programme in breeding research than the coconut, which might become the most important commercial plant in the world.

Governors' Conference Agenda.

The Governors' Conference, which opened in Nairobi last week, has considered proposals by olive producers in Kenya, Tanganyika and Malawi regarding the suggested restriction of tea planting in East Africa. Local growers understood to agree generally with the scheme proposed by the International Tea Resection Committee. Control of sugar planting was also to be discussed by the Governors.

The agenda of the Conference included consideration of reference, Native policy, transport, education, and an examination of the incidence of the consumption tax, excise and trade licences, and similar taxes within the East African Customs Union, with special reference to any difficulties which may affect individual territories. The unpublished report of the Commission of Enquiry into the administration of the African Native Council was also to be considered.

Japanese Exports to the Colonies.

The Japanese Government has shown the utmost forbearance in the face of the abnormal increase of Japanese exports to the British Empire, but at last action has had to be taken, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the House of Commons on Monday that steps were to be taken by the colonies and Protectorates to subject all foreign imports of cotton and rayon goods to quotas based on the average imports from 1927 to 1931, such quotas to be retrospective to the beginning of the current financial year. This is a measure of the highest importance, and therefore without precedent in the history of the East African standards is clear.

Questions Concerning British Somaliland.

Mr. Lunn, who asked whether District Commissioners in British Somaliland, sitting the magistracies, not subject to death penalty, was told that they were liable by the Protectorate courts, but that under an amendment of the law passed in 1927, D.C. might be specially empowered by the Commissioner to try offences for these offences in the absence from the Protectorate of either the Commissioner or the Secretary of the Protectorate.

Mr. Lunn asked whether any provision existed in Somaliland whereby fines and imprisonment by District Commissioners were resumed and, if necessary, revised by the Governor. The Secretary of State replied that where fines were authorised by law in Somaliland, they might only be imposed by the Commissioner, except in the case of fines under the Protection of Boundary Pillars Ordinance, which might be levied by a D.C. after judicial inquiry. The fine under that Ordinance was fixed at Rs. 100, for each boundary pillar damaged, and there was no provision for appeal.

As in Somaliland there are no Courts of Justice other than those held by local administrative officers, Mr. Lunn asked whether the Secretary of State proposed to take steps to establish a judicial system. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister replied that while he did not think it would be either possible or desirable to establish a separate judicial system in Somaliland, he had already had under consideration the question of providing legal assistance for the Protectorate administration, and he proposed to discuss this matter with the Commissioner who was proceeding on leave shortly.

To a supplementary question Mr. Lunn, who asked if the Colonial Secretary did not think that there should be some right of appeal against D.C.'s in cases of sentence of death, the Minister answered that, speaking from memory, he thought that in all cases there was a right of appeal to the Commissioner. On the broad issue, he was sure it would be both impracticable and undesirable in Somaliland to separate the judicial and administrative functions.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister told Mr. T. Smith that there was one elementary school in Berbera, British Somaliland, and another about 200 miles away. The cost of the school, including the 100 a year, was borne entirely by Government. Government also subsidised £100 a year a subsidy of various kinds, schools in the Protectorate, and £200 a year to pay for the education of selected boys at the Gambia Memorial College, Khartoum.

Mr. Smith also asked whether any scheme of economic development, particularly concerning water conservation and irrigation, was being considered in British Somaliland.

The Minister replied that water-borne operations had been in progress in Somaliland since 1920. A new supply had been discovered at Silbi, but in other places these supplies had not been discovered, but in other parts the work of the borne party had not met with success. He was awaiting a final report by the Geological Survey which would shortly be submitted. General surveys had in several occasions been conducted in various parts of the Protectorate, but the practice did not warrant the sending of a further expedition to study development. He said that the question of how to deal with the question of the desirability of opening up the Congo basin territories had been under consideration by the Government, and that a decision had been reached. The Government had decided that the question was examined by the Government in 1927, and had since been under continuous review.

Mr. Lunn asked whether the amount of the fine imposed on the Samburu tribe, members of which were held responsible for the death of an Englishman in Kenya, and whether, in view of such imposition, it had been definitely ascertained that the man was murdered by members of that tribe.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister replied that the fine had yet been imposed, and that the case had not yet been completed in respect of the murder of Natives, but a decision had not yet been reached as to whether a collective fine should be imposed. He said that the case was proceeding into the death of the Englishman, and that the fine had been made.

Mr. Lunn asked whether the Government had arranged to arrange for the purchase of the land in the Protectorate, and whether the Government had arranged to purchase the land in the Protectorate, and whether the Government had arranged to purchase the land in the Protectorate.

"When King George came to the Throne the new coins issued in Rhodesia showed the King's head facing in the reverse direction to those issued during the reign of King Edward. As it always the case with a new King, Natives in Rhodesia refused at first to touch them, declaring them to be spurious."—Mr. W. Robertson, writing in the "Liverpool Echo."

"Among the 10,000 Natives, the compound manager at Nkana showed me records of men from Sierra Leone and Nigeria, the Unions, Bechuanaland, Tanganyika. It is said that these copper mines will one day become the hub of Africa, as far as the Natives are concerned these words have come true."—A. Green, in a series of articles on the Northern Rhodesia Copperbelt contributed to the S. African papers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

POINTS FROM LETTERS.

Northern Rhodesian Fertility.

Settler Refutes Lecturer's Statement.

To the Editor of "East Africa."

Sir—Who is the Lieutenant Colonel Peake, M.C., R.E., who read a paper before the Royal Geographical Society, as reported in your issue of February 1931, in which we have never heard of the presence of this gentleman in this area, we doubt if he has travelled more than 400 miles from the east of Lusaka and within Northern Rhodesia. We believe he was employed upon the Rhodesia Congo Border Commission some 200 to 300 miles from here. He is geologically illiterate to a general conformity with the East Luangwa Province varying from the Congo border region, being far more akin to the northern part of Nyasaland.

Has Colonel Peake ever had the misfortune to encounter extensive areas in which the buffalo bean flourishes and has he seen much of the Rhodesian numerous elephants? In either case he should have found it unnecessary to search afar for truly fertile soil.

The Fort Jameson and Letaba districts comprise about 12% of the total Native population of Northern Rhodesia. I really do not see why you prize as important an area of Northern Rhodesia.

Yours faithfully,
ALFRED W. ALINDA

Uganda Petrol Tax.

If the Uganda Government must introduce this non-native graduate poll tax, the tax on petrol should be taken off. Thus would all communities benefit. From a well known Uganda Statesman's opinion of the Pegasus.

Your obituary notice of Jackie Ingles and everyone will be glad that you have so emphasized his lovely nature—you make it clear that the sinking of his ship in Zambezia was by no means a disaster. Koelmans could not have been stranded since the British ship "Pegasus" was engaged in repairs and left for East Africa at the time that the "Pegasus" had drawn all anchor. That was not the matter as a matter of fact, the ship was 200 miles away before she sailed. It was widely believed at the time that German spies had been in that vicinity and that the mainland immediately the British ship sailed on her errand of destruction. The truth is that the "Pegasus" was then at sea on her way to the island, and that when she approached the island at dawn on her way back from the Persian Gulf she was met by a British ship which was to find a British warship there. Her greatest hope had been to seek or seize a liner. So far was she from knowing of the presence of the "Pegasus" that after the action she returned to England and reported that she had accounted for the "Pegasus". From an East African view in English.

Piles of Stones.

An Explanation Wanted.

It is a common sight here at the summit of a hill to see one or more piles of stones. This is common in East Africa, and similar cairns of stones mark the paths of the people as the Southern Abyssinia frontier escapement to the limit of my wanderings.

Locals say that these stones were piled up by the people of Songhai to mark the route of the stone to the pile which is placed at the top of the hill. They also tell me that this custom is found in the mountains of the Alps, and in the mountains of the Himalayas, and in the mountains of the Andes.

The Penalty not protecting Timber

The rising cost of Solignum has been included in the cost of this structure, the destruction caused by White ants has not have happened

The cost of Solignum is not a fraction of the cost of the timber which is not protected and the risk of the small expenditure is not to be compared with the loss of the timber which must be replaced at a heavy loss.

READ THIS SIGNIFICANT BOOK

"BEIRA NEWS"

Dares Salaam from the air

The Beira News, in a two-column leading article on our recently published book, "Tanganyika Without Prejudice".

"Tanganyika Without Prejudice, although it contains all the information of interest and value to the prospective settler or tourist, goes much further than to set the author dispassionately and impartially before the various problems which are of such vital importance to Tanganyika alone, but to East Africa, British and Rhodesia, in its entirety, that we felt compelled to deal with it as more than a mere book review."

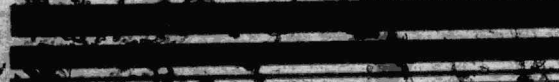

"The Chapter on 'Travel and Communications' and the 'Digging and Merchants' are extremely valuable, it for nothing else than for the fact that they contain the first comprehensive descriptions which, as far as we know, have yet appeared in print of South-Western Tanganyika, including the 107 Goldfields and peoples, European and Asiatic, whose industries it is hoped that, with the help of the Port of Beira will serve to benefit these and other descriptive chapters. Our lead is enlightening, its style is seen to its best advantage."

"Tanganyika Without Prejudice is a significant book, a combination of historical and unbiased commentary on Britain's East African Mandates. It should be read, added and kept on the bookshelf of everyone who wishes to take an intelligent interest in East African affairs."

A tribute is due to East Africa for the format of the volume. From these publishers we have had 'Kenya Without Prejudice', 'we have had 'Tanganyika Without Prejudice', and we await with interest 'Nyasaland Without Prejudice'. The book is available in paperback and is published in paperback.
