

Abstract:

In this article we discuss multistage group screening in which group-factors contain differing number of factors. We describe a procedure for grouping the factors in the absence of concrete prior information, so that the relative testing cost is minimal. It is shown that under quite general conditions, these designs will require fewer runs than the equivalent designs in which the group-factors contain same number of factors.