

Department of surgery hosts the inaugural annual comprehensive clinical neurosurgery review course for English speaking countries of Sub Saharan Africa.

Between the 11th and 13th May the department of surgery hosts the inaugural annual comprehensive clinical neurosurgery review course for English speaking countries of Sub Saharan Africa.

This review course is intended to provide the latest information in scientific work related to neurosurgery and demonstrate using associated clinical presentations. Target group are the Master of Medicine in neurosurgery students though qualified surgeons are welcome to attend. The theme for this years course is "Training the future neurosurgeon in Africa". This reflects the great strides made in the training of neurosurgery on the continent.

The department of surgery has had a neurosurgery training programme running for some time and graduated six neurosurgeons, one of who is employed by the department.

Amongst the distinguished guests to this years course include a panel of international as well as local neurosurgeons and neuroscientists. International visitors are from the USA and the UK. International faculty includes Prof Christian Raftopoulos, Prof. Marc Sindou, Prof. Luc Bauchet, Prof. Olivier Klein and Pro. Antonio Bernardo.
