

Mr. Johnson Ileri Kinyua, Director of University Advancement

The University has established an advancement office to fund raise, establish endowment funds and enhance the University of Nairobi brand.

The office to be called University Advancement office is a directorate based in the Vice-Chancellor's office.

The University Council and management appointed Mr. Johnson Ileri Kinyua as the Director of University Advancement and Brian Ouma as the Deputy Director of University Advancement. Mr. Kinyua is a Bachelor of Commerce and MBA holder from UoN and comes in the Director's office with a wealth of experience gained from prominent organizations locally and internationally. He is the immediate former Executive Director, Alumni Association and has also worked with KCA University and VSO Jitolee NGO in Malawi.

Mr. Ouma is experienced in resource mobilisation, partnership and collaborations with development partners and has also worked with Daisy Eye Foundation, Centre for African Family Studies (CAFS) and Rattansi Educational Trust. He is a graduate of philosophy from Urbana Pontifical University, Rome and currently pursuing an MBA in Strategic Management from University of Nairobi.

The advancement office is expected to strengthen research, increase endowment funds, promote experiential learning for students and promote their welfare with the objective of strengthening the UoN brand both locally and internationally.

In another development, the University has promoted the following senior lecturers to positions of associate professors; Prof. Alina Rinkanya of Department of Literature, Prof. Sarfuddin F. Dossaji and Prof Agnes W. Muthumbi both from the School of Biological Sciences.
