CASELAP is this week hosting an international workshop on legal aspects on governance of natural resources. The workshop is happening under the ongoing collaboration between the University of Nairobi, and the Swedish University of Gothenburg. The Gothenburg delegation to the Workshop is led by Prof Lena Gipperth, while the CASELAP participation is coordinated by Dr. Collins Odote. During the two day workshop, participants will discuss and exchange views on the legal frameworks for governance of natural resources in Kenya and Sweden. They will also discuss and evaluate possible research areas of common interest, including climate change and gender; law, environment and development; and the question of multi-level governance and sustainable development. This workshop, intended to map out the direction of the collaboration, is the first of the many research outputs that will be developed.
