

The School of Journalism is proud to be associated with Mr. John Mucangi Njiru, a graduate of the School who was among the winners in this year's CNN Multichoice African Journalist of the year award. Muchangi was named the overall winner in the HIV/AIDS Reporting award. Mr. Mucangi is a Science Features writer for Radio Africa Media Group and a sub editor for The Star daily newspaper, he also reports for Radio Jambo.

John is also one of the 12 Journalists selected for the prestigious Knight Science Journalism Fellowship at MIT for its 30th class of Fellows. The journalists will study science, health, environment and technology at MIT during the academic year 2012-13.

The School of Journalism and Mass Communication congratulates Mr. Mucangi and wishes him the best in his future endeavours.

