We had better also take into account - some of the things which the Cal. Government does.

in a jail

If either side agree we could let them stay in prison?

To that does not entitle the receiver claim to put deposits under any retention order. It is for the receiver claim to even itself with a summary process if it does not already possess them for putting retention on deposits - beyond what is by the order provided by the order for the legal custody of federal process deposits Other for the Court & Receiver

If the lawyer agent does not already possess the money to put these deposits under retention it is wrong of the lawyer to do so without the receiver's consent. The receiver is to be having them before (or afterwards) proceeding.
No doubt the Court is able of lawyer and fully able to ~~take~~ the legal custody

I suggest in all this the Court of the Court be in custody advised also
