This is not to say that we have any objection of principle to the line you are adopting for the management of the Railway system, and I think that we should be generally content but should like to refer the draft to our Finance Department on any financial points that should be safeguarded. that they should be consulted before a decision was arrived at on this point, and mentioned that the recent? loan of £3,500,000 was secured on the revenue and assets of Kenya, Uganda and the Uganda Railway jointly.

In our letter of 20th August we said that the Secretary of State had decided this point in May, and had adopted the local view that provision should not be made in the draft Order in Council. We sent a copy of the General Manager's speech, showing that he was afram of specific provision for deficits to be made good by Kenya and Uganda, because it would lead to such a demand for reduction of rates that he would be unable to provide for the proper maintenance and improvement of the line. He pointed out that the Ordinances relating to the three and a half million loan definitely provided for the responsibility of the two Governments to the the railway administration as regards loan charges.

and example of the General Manager and not labour minor points but adopt the main principle, and seek to work it out. Lord Delamere said all the elected members were disappointed that Clause 31 had been whittled down, but a great point had been gained in that it was clearly laid down within the Order in Council that it was not irrevocable, and that His Matheto's down within the Order in Council was not irrevocable, and that His Majesty's advisers admitted that certain conditions might arise in which it might be desirable to amend or revoke the Order. Still, they to amend or revoke the Order Star, they on that side of the Council were not satisfied; they felt, however, that the main thing was to get on with the work as they felt that nothing real could be done until felt that nothing real could be done until

I found that there was very strong feeling in Uganda against the manner in which the Railway had been controlled by the Government of Kenya, more especially in connection with the financial arrangements. It was quite true the old system had been changed in April, 1921, but the feeling was still there and the people in Uganda still felt unsafe. I found the Railway position was most unsound. I have been much criticised lately, especially in Uganda, because there seemed to be an impression that Railway profits were not being used to the extent they might be for betterment and renewals expenditure. I realised immediately after I came to this country that there was going to be an enormous development and that the Railway was unfit to cope with it because of past policy.

change the organisation and to reduce expenditure and retrench. I had to do it, and in many respects the task was most unpleasant. I set to work to explore the financial position with the object of finding money to improve and to better conditions generally, to renew what should be renewed, and to extend facilities. But I also came to the conclusion that the system of control was fundamentally wrong and I submitted proposals for a better form of control. I submitted these proposals on the 23rd January, 1923, or exactly three weeks after I took over the management of the Railway - they are still under discussion in August, 1925 ! Much requires to be done before they can come into complete operation. Some supplementary legislation is necessary, and regulations are necessary. I regret it should have taken so long to get the Order through. Perhaps it would be well if I traverse very briefly what I said at the time I recommended the new system of control, because in all the time I have been here nothing has happened to change my mind in the slightest respect in connection with these proposals. In a report on the 23rd January, 1923 and I may say I sent in my report in response to a request from the late Sir Robert Coryndon, who asked that I should examine the position immediately - I suggested that a very important thing which seemed to be overlooked in discussions in Kenya was that the Uganda Railway and Lake steamers serve not only the Colony of Kenya but also the Protectorate of Uganda, and, to some extent also (through the Lake Services) the Mandated Territory of Tanganyika. So far as Kenya and Uganda are concerned, T pointed out that port facilities and efficient rail and lake steamer transport are vital to development, and that is essential that the control of those services be placed on a sound footing. I emphasised that any of control which subordinates port and railway development and management to the interests of either Kenya or Uganda would be harmful to both countries. I said that in some respects the position here to-day is similar to that which existed after the Boer War in the Transvaal and. Orange Free State, where for some years there were two separate Crown Colonies with one Railway Administration The problem here being comewhat a main common to both. I suggested that it should be dealt with secondingly. would ask the Honourable Mr. Shams - of D. of to take special tice of this. T suggested it. a fundamental principle that the Railway and Jarine services in Kenya and Uganda be vested in one local authority, and that authority I recommended should be a High Commissioner. I urged that the High Commissioner must be given extensive powers in the matter of transport I said: "The Railway is expected to pay its "way, or, in other words, the inhabitants in these "territories are expected to pay enough in rates and fares "to keep the Railway aclvent, but, notwithstanding local "financial responsibility, reference to the Colonial "Office is required to an extent which cannot but have "a paralysing effect on any business concern." a Railway is a business undertaking - and a very difficult business undertaking at that - is beyond question. Railway Railway can be administered only by the adoption of business principles. Any attempt to treat a Railway like a Civil Service Department and to control administration and management from a long distance must inevitably result in inefficient, uneconomical, and generally unbusingsslike methods of working. I reported that T found the difference between the powers exercised in the Transvess and the Free State during Crown Colony and the interpretations of the Crown Colony.

I advided that both administration and management should be addisted, advised, and checked by a suitable Board on which the users of the Railway in both territories should be represented. Further, I stated that while local control is essential it is wise not to overlook the need for guarding against the intrusion of political influences upon questions of Railway policy and development. Such influences have had serious consequences in other countries, and can be counteracted more effectively by the existence of a partially representative Railway Board so constituted as to be, as far as practicable, politically independent. I cannot understand, Sir, why our Asiatic Members of this

The General Manager: British Indian Members can possibly take exception to a principle which is designed partly to remove the Railway from political influences in both Kenya and Uganda. I should think that would be welcomed by them. I am very sorry indeed that the Secretary of State has decided to delete the clause dealing with the policy to guide the railway in the matter of administration and management. I am very sorry indeed. The original clause I suggested was that the Railway should be administered on business principles, due regard being had to the agricultural and industrial development in Kenya and Uganda by means of theap transport. other words, business principles were laid down as the guiding factor. It was really a Charter suggested in connection with Railway Administration and management. It has been advanced that such a policy clause should not find its way into a law. A similar principle has found its way into law in other countries. The argument has been advanced here that those concerned with the administration of the Railway could be trusted to see the same principle is adhered to. The same principle exists in other Colonies. It was Inid down elsewhere in respect of Government Railways only because it was found to be absolutely necessary to establish it firmly. It is in existence to-day in South Africa, has been recommended for Australia, and I believe for Indian railways. Government Rallways will, in my opinion, arrive at the

In regard to Kenya and Uganda, I have in mind what happened with railway revenue prior to 1921, and I sincerely trust the policy, the expression of which has now been excluded from the Order-in-Council, will be laid down in the supplementary legislation necessary.

In regard to ownership - and particularly land matters - I do not know whether the clause I submitted, and which I think I am at liberty to say the Honourable Commissioner of Lands has agreed to, has been accepted yet; but my intention is to try and arrange for the supplementary legislation mecessary in both Kenya and Uganda to include clauses dealing with the yexed question of Railway land. As I drafted ut, all hand, and other property asset. anday In the mire of the co neertion to egy ta midinulous recently to buy a nouse in a certain centre. having it impressed upon no that we much have more ura on lake ports und elbewhere, but Nor course, they min heve bouses to live in. Mone areses to on weet that the White should e transferred to myself personally! The whole matter of the registration of land and property should be put on a sound footing. All immovable assets in Kenya should remain vested in the Government of Kerrya, and those in Uganda in the Government of Uganda. Then, if there is ever a separation, the position would be in order.

I have never quite understood what the Honourable Member for Plateau North really proposes should happen in connection with the Control of this Railway. He states that Kenya is handing over an asset, a very valuable asset. Kenya is certainly handing over the control and the working of this section of the Railway; but what method of control, what method of management, does the Honourable Member really want? He seems to forget that a large portion of this hailway exists in Uganda and not in Kenya, and it is quite absurd to think that the Government of Kenya is to-day actually controlling the Railway The Government of Kenya cannot do it and is not attempting to do it. Who is doing it? no Government is controlling the Bailway as a whole, and the General Manager is left to struggle as best he can with difficulties that arise. What is the General Manager's position as between these two territories ? The Government of Kenya has no control in Uganda You must have a High-Commissioner who is recognised by both Governments. It is clear to me that there pur only two alternatives for the future. You have either got to introduce a system something like this and have one control, or you will soon be forced to separate the management in the two territories with separate Governments. T say do not separate. I believe separation would create auch trouble that there would soon be almost a feud in connection with transport work between the two Colonies. I believe also that the Post Office system, with a division of revenue and expenditure, is unsuitable for Railway purposes, and I decline absolutely to fall into line with one suggestion made by a British Indian Member that the betterment fund should be carefully divided up so that Kenya gets what it is entitled to and Uganda gets what it is entitled to. I resolutely decline to adopt that policy It is one railway service and one lake service, and the betterment and renewals fund moreys will be spent fairly where required. I have argued in Uganda that it is, for example, as much for the benefit of Uganda as of Kenya that the main line is being relayed, and they accept that as the case.

The question of loans has been dealt with by the Honourable Attorney General. That question should present no difficulty. Similar systems have been in operation elsewhere and no difficulties have been experienced. I regret that it has not been found constitutionally possible to accept the notice clause, but I agree entirely with the Right Honourable Member in his point that the wording agreed to at least implies that the Order is not unchangeable and that it may possibly be necessary to consider termination at some future date. I cannot help thinking that is the correct point of view.

In regard to the remarks of the Honourable Member for Mombasa, it seems to me that the Honourable Member has got the matter of control of the port in his pocket very much like some King Charles's head which will pop out on every possible occasion. I think I have been fair in what I have said in regard to the control of the port and the wharfage work: I have always drawn a line between control and working. I have always contended for my view that the control in this country must be vested in some Government, department, but I have also said that if it is considered necessary, and found possible, to have a Port Trust, I would be the first to work loyally with that Port Trust; but I have implored the Government and everybody else concerned not to impose on the country and the railway a Port Trust unless that Trust is made financially responsible. It would be monstrous for the Railway to have to pay the loss when the control is in other hands. regard to the landing and shipping work, I would like to state publicly that I have reported that the Railway would agree to do the work only if the country wants the Railway to do it; if it is the Government policy for the Railway cto do it; if the General Manager be given full powers to select his own staff at such rates of pay as he deems necessary, to discharge them if inefficient, to take action in connection with claims, and generally to do everything required in a businesslike way. I have also said that the Railway is not out to do the work. I feel I have quite enough to do, but the Railway is prepared to do the work if the country wants it to and if all concerned will give it the necessary business powers and a fair chance. I have suggested that the matter should be the subject of an enquiry. I have also said that if the Wharfage Companies honestly think they can do the work more efficiently than the Railway they should prove to the public, by their charges and otherwise, that that is the principle really guiding them, and they should as to control and regulation, because under present conditions there is no control, there is no licensing or any other form of regulating charges, etc. There must, of course, be central control, but, from a working point of view, whether that is in the hands of a Port Trust or the Reilway does not matter, providing the controlling authority carries the financial responsibility. Honourable Member for Mombasa has made a most astonishing statement. He said Kenya is parting with one of its most important assets in the Railway, and he objects strongly. In the past he said this asset has contributed nothing to the Government . He also said something about requiring from the railway a substantial dividend to the Government which might be set off against other liabilities. He must surely be aware (I am telling him now, in any case) that the Uganda Railway actually paid into Kenya Government revenue before 1921 no less than two million pounds, and that is exactly what is the case of the trouble to-day. If that £2,000,000 had been spent on betterments and renewals it would not only be a totally different railway, but the General Manager would have a much easier time. I sincerely rust that the argument raised recently at the Coast, that the proper thing to do is to allow the Wharfage Companies to retain their profits and to require the Railway to make good the loss out of betterment funds, will not carry much weight.

With regard to certain remarks made by the Honourable Mr. Smans-ud Deen let me state first of all that the decreases in Indian rates of pay made some time ago were made with the full approval of the Secretary of State. They were not made on my mole authority seems to think. What the Honourable Member does not kno s that where there has been really good work on the part of Indian servants of the railway, I lilve made exceptions Ment I say good work, I refer to work such as, for example, work done by the station mester at Kampala and the pier clerk et Port Bell during the period of congestion? such cases I have made special exceptions. I have no objection to paying for good work, but that is totally different from paying all and sundry high rates of pay. The Honourable Mr. Sham-ud-Deen also referred to a despatch from the Secretary of State contained in this Blue Book and he said that it is obvious that what we said about the position elsewhere was wrong, and that, therefore, in his opinion, the Order-in-Council should fall to the ground because the precedent had been wrongly quoted. Secretary of State referred not to the whole Order, but only to the one policy clause. We informed the Secretary of State this policy clause was embodied in the South Some doubt was thrown on that, but it was African Act. clearly proved the clause was there. the nonourable Member has been out of touch with the matter lately, so I cannot blame him, but the fact is he has read the Secretary of State's remark on one clause as if it applied to the

to a remark I made when this Order was last before this Honourable Council in regard to indirect control. Governments will be better represented on the new Council than they are now. The provision here is for a High Commissioner, a strong High Commissioner, who acts as advised by a very comprehensive Railway Council fully representative of Governments and public - a much more comprehensive and representative body than the present Railway Council - which should be of more againtance to the Colonies and High Commissioner. Not that the present Council has not done its best, but it is a non statutory, non-articulate, body at present. The position in Uganda would have been much better this year if this new Council had been in operation. The position in Uganda to-day is that most unfair criticisms are sometimes made against the Railway Department - not consciously unfair, because that is the last thing these people want to be. Quite a large proportion, if not practically all concerned, are out to assist, but they do not know. The Estimates. are introduced here and not in Uganda, and in Uganda, therefore, they know nothing about the Estimates. future Uganda will have on the Council two official and two unofficial members, and all minutes will go through a central High Commissioner, who will be able to keep in touch with the Governments of the respective Colonies. The Estimates will be introduced not only here, but also in Uganda, and will be subject to full criticisms in both Legislative Councils. I believe myself when this system is brought into full operation it will be a great improvement on the present system. At the same time I would be the last person to suggest that these proposals are perfect They will be subject to evolution, and are a tremendous advance on what exists to-day, and they will, I feel, serve as an excellent foundation for the nuture.
