that of a tropical Colony unless they can obtain rather the Candidates.

ville, and in conjunction with them to make a provisional selection of Candidates who could be recommended as suitable for filling the proposed new appointments. It would, of course, be clearly under-the expenditure being sanctioned, and so far as the applicants were concerned it should be sufficient to intimate to them that their names had been placed on a list and that their candidature would be considered as vacancies arose. In this way provision
