Coir Fibre Manufacturing Process. The coir palm is largely grown throughout the tropical regions of both hemispheres.

Mr. Lehmann constructs the spinning machines in two ways. No. 1 is for spinning the coir fibre into yarn and No. 2 is for spinning the coir fibre into cord.

Considering the possibilities before our factories in B. E. A. we reproduce a description of the process of our manufacture here undertaken by Ernest Lehmann of Manchester.

The bunks are first of all submitted to a washing process. The coir fibre is cut into plants and is performed in lots or compact tanks, and the resultant strain from the mill is carried to the tank after the chief part to be determined in the duration of the washing.

After a thorough washing the coir fibre is ready for the first machine in the process of cranking. This is effected in a cranking mill, containing two massive fitted iron rollers. The bunks are dropped through a ledge at the top of the machine.

The main point to be kept in view is that the coir fibre must be prepared by hand before being put into the spinning machine.

Mr. Lehmann constructs the spinning machines in two ways. No. 1 is for spinning the coir fibre into yarn and No. 2 is for spinning the coir fibre into cord.

Teff Grass.

EMERSONIA AETHIOPIACA. By J. Westworth-Sykes, in the Agricultural Journal of the Union of South Africa.

I have been written by the Government Agricultural Officer, Botswana, Mr. J. Burtt, Bury, F.R.S., to ask me to advise on the value of teff grass for a practical purpose, and to give a trial in South Africa. I am sending you a sample of the seed which I am sending you in a trial in South Africa. It is a very good crop, and it is well adapted to the climate of South Africa.
