PRESERVATION OF ANTIQUITIES.

Proposed New Legislation in Interests of Archaeology and Science.

Kenya is rich in ancient monuments. Scattered throughout the country, particularly in the Coast Province there are signs of the ancient civilisations which preceded by many centuries the establishment of British rule in East Africa.

It is the intention of Government to make provision for the protection of those monuments and antiquities and a Bill has been prepared for introduction to the Legislative Council.

It might be remembered that thirty years ago some of the most famous of the Arab community at Mombasa were concerned with the gradual decay of the old buildings of this town which are to be found on the coast.

ROMANTIC STORIES.

Among the antiquities there are such objects as the stone of the Kenyan Office which contains the text of the agreement for the preservation of ancient monuments and objects of archaeological interest or artistic interest.

MUSIC

No. 1.—The Panfleur.

(By "R.V.W.")
 The panfleur is, without a doubt, the best known and most popular musical instrument made in France. It is the most used of the triple 11 notes violoncelle and is frequently used by composers great and small who are impatient of its limitations. The melodies of the panfleur were the melody of the symphony and the harpsichord; the two first appearing only in the 18th century and the harpsichord about 10 years later.

I suppose that every household in Kenya, if they are not already the proud possessors of an instrument, hope the day is not so distant and although I obviously cannot mention the names of any particular makers in this article I can give some practical hints to assist the would be purchaser in choosing a good instrument.

THE REPERTOIRE

Test this by repeating a note over and over again, the more times lowering the key with a finger of the other hand. The smaller the repetition the smaller the sound received by the key to enable it to sound again.

THE PEDALS

See that the right hand pedal drops promptly and also completely. Pay chiefly up and down the instrument. Drop the right hand pedal before each chord and make it clear the chord has sounded. There should be a small note of the sound left in the hand. See that neither pedal is loose. See that neither pedal is too tight.

THE TONE

The tone should be rich and sonorous and the triple note. The most important, try the triple note and over again and see that each note comes out clear and distinct and does not overlap with the next one. Chopin's Scherzo from his Sonata Op. 40 and the same composer's Value in G flat Op. 10 No. 1, are a splendid test. Also try Chopin's Prelude in C minor on the base and see if it comes out "rich" as opposed to "thin."

DEPTH OF KEY DESCENT

Essentially key descent is about 2 1/2 of an inch but a deep touch is better than a shallow one made over too shallow.

THE HAMMERS

These should be hard, but business like in touch.

DOORS

Here are a few "Do's" in connection with the care of the piano.

Don't stand it against a corner.
 Don't stand it in a draught.
 Don't stand anything on top of it (I know that it is hard to resist the temptation to stand a vase or bowl of flowers or the photograph of your wedding group in so coveted a place but the photograph is first, last and all time, an instrument and the 500 of precious musical sounds is interfered with by having things placed on top of it.)

Don't rub it with a polish.
 Don't rub it with any material surface with anything dry, but brush it lightly over with dry chamois cloth.

And a last recommendation
 Have it tuned regularly, at least once a year.
 The piano in the Queen's Hall was tuned every day, professional pianists in their homes have their pianos tuned once a month which is the ideal. In this country have a year is practicable, once in the rainy season and once in the dry. But remember that an instrument will not stay in tune as long as an old one and should be done often if possible.

I hope that I shall live to see the day when every house in Kenya will have its own well tuned piano for man does not live by making alone and there are few better forms of relaxation in the evening than listening to a little music even of the home made variety.

Tanganyika.

WILL NON-BRITISH SETTLERS BE LOYAL TO BRIT?

The majority of the speakers at the recent special meeting of the East African section of the London Chamber of Commerce to call attention to the increase of non-British immigration into Tanganyika Territory, are to be disappointed on the temper and direction displayed towards a subject of considerable difficulty and some delicacy, says the Times (Friday). It is undoubtedly desirable that the immigration of British settlers should be encouraged, but as was pointed out by more than one speaker it is needed a different kind of assistance than was granted to South Africa, Rhodesia or Australia.

Only a certain selection of Tanganyika can be regarded as suitable for occupation by settlers from this country, and as the territory is laid under mandate the Government cannot discriminate against the nationals of any country, the advantages provided, naturally for one must be shared by all. That when an elected assembly is granted to Tanganyika the majority may and probably will be non-British in origin is undoubted, but surely it would be a decidedly retrograde step to refuse direct representation to those in the country and who are making their homes there because of such a contingency. Such an arrangement implies that those who have their own lives will have cause to regret that they were not permitted to participate in the welfare of that country, their own interests, and the allegiance which they undertake in the existing form of Government.

HISTORY'S EXAMPLES

History does not furnish such an argument. On the contrary, the late war suggested that nationals of the Central Powers when permitted to share in the extent of their own interests, and the allegiance which they undertake in the existing form of Government.

ANOTHER BIG LOAN ARRANGED

Under the Trade Facilities Act Treasury has granted the African Railway and Finance Co. a loan of £2,000,000 in addition to the loan of £1,250,000 last year for the construction of the Benguela Railway. The money will be devoted to additional rolling stock and the provision of port facilities on Lobito Bay, which is part of the scheme for the line from Lobito Bay to Namibia, Angola, where it will connect with the Benguela system through the route between Katanga and Lobito Bay.

The English section will be completed in about three years time.

Bombs Don't Bounce.

This is a specimen of brevity and humor in reporting in a Shanghai newspaper:

A reporter picked up a bomb in China (belonging to the Communists) yesterday.

It showed to be some sort of explosion.

He threw the bomb on the ground.

He won't pick up any more bombs.

The report is headed: 'Bombs don't bounce when thrown rough.'

ROAD TRAINS IN AFRICA.

Means of Linking Up Railway Systems.

FLEXIBLE TRUCK VEHICLES.

Mr. R. H. Brackley, a member of the Empire Road Transport Corporation's Sub-committee on Transport recently visited the Transvaal as follows—

The Colonial Office Conference, which is to meet early in May, will be attended by many of the Governors and Colonial Secretaries of our tropical African Colonies. The session is unique and very important, because the health, wealth, and happiness of many scores of millions directly in Africa, indirectly in this country, will be deeply affected by the quality and character of the policies and common action which are then decided upon. May I advance a plan for the inclusion as an all-important item on the agenda of any analysis and exhaustive examination of the present state and future prospects of the transport problem in the African Colonies, particularly in respect of the establishment of feeder systems for the main railways?

Tropical African railways, when worked to capacity, can carry more than 20 tons, but owing to economic considerations, it is not practicable, at present, to hold them at less intervals than several hundred miles, probably on the average, about 300 or 400 miles apart. We still need a transport unit which can operate economically over a radius of 100 or 200 miles, thus covering the whole area between the railways.

ESSENTIAL CONDITIONS
 What would be the main distinguishing characteristic of such a transport unit?

(a) It should carry a large load of tonnage. The main object of this matter is the impossibility of transporting small quantities of goods over long distances economically.

(b) It must be suitable on some system of tracks to be as close to road as possible. It should be a wheeled road train of this capacity which will not completely destroy the soft surface of an African road. Tracks on the other hand, laminated to the public through the world's great Army "Tank", can be dealt of, a flexible character, that do not damage soft roads, but, on the contrary, tend them to last and consolidate them.

(c) A more economic prime mover than the petrol engine should be fitted. The Diesel type of engine or engine of the producer gas engine working on charcoal both offer a well-established, effective means of general power at a low cost.

(d) The speed of a transport train would probably have to be fairly slow—about five or ten miles an hour. Nothing is more destructive to a vehicle and the kind of road surface which obtain in Africa than forcing heavily laden lorries along at 20-30 miles an hour.

A transport system embodying the above principles is, in the view of many engineers, a perfectly practical proposition and might be specified in more detail. Such a tractor mounted, a flexible truck, propelled by H.O.B. producer gas engine, of which the fuel would be locally prepared charcoal drawing a train of five 10-ton lorries, has mounted on a track system.

Such a road train is no far-fetched idea but has already been suggested at the request of one of our administrators that the principles are available for other. The establishment of a transport system of this character opens up such a vista of development for Africa as can only be paralleled by the proposed effort to Europe by the invention of the railway less than 100 years ago. I submit that this whole question is one that deserves such weighty consideration as to deserve the most earnest consideration by the Colonial Conference.
