"That being my conviction, I ask you not to take too seriously such episodes as the resignation of a cabinet or the occurrence of a momentary impasse. The political atmosphere may, at the moment, be somewhat clouded, but the clouds will pass. The present differences are essentially one between friends and, given good will, there is no question, there is every reason to hope that it will be settled in no too distant future. Patients, I am sure, will carry the day."

"The actual points in dispute were not such as would seriously impair the mutual friendship and love which happily marks the relations between the two countries."

A Matter of History.
Summarizing the circumstances which led to the creation of Iraq by the League of Nations, Sir Percy Colclough, who presided over the negotiations, it was not to fight the people of the country, but that the Arab overlords, the Turks, had no reason to suppose that the Arab population was hostile to the Turks, but it was only the Arab population who could persuade them at the outset that our intentions towards them and their religion were benevolent, we might count on their rejecting our demands and leaving us to settle our differences with the Turks unimpeded. And when Amr Pasha was named King of Iraq in 1921 he expressed his gratitude to the British nation for its aid in the cause of Arab liberation and independence and declared that it was from Great Britain alone that they were to seek help to reach their goal.

On the proclamation of the word "Iraq," Sir Percy Colclough was to say: "During the history of the country was referred to as Mesopotamia."

The Irish tale, was a grand one for Aims. Hundreds of people thronged through the streets and from the early morning onwards His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive. All 9 o'clock His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive. All 9 o'clock His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive.

His Excellency was introduced to the mission dinner where a brief service was held in a hall adjacent, the various representatives of the Pope expressed his joy at witnessing an event which would mark the beginning of a new era in the development of the British Empire in the East.

The Visitor Apostolic, who presided over the raising of the flag, was the first to arrive. All 9 o'clock His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive. All 9 o'clock His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive.

He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ...

To the Pope also we are indebted for our maintenance which springs up an inextinguishable spring of water which, really, flows to the altar. We owe His Holiness immense thanks for the many religious communities founded or implanted in our country. All these are irrevocable blessings bestowed upon us by God, through the intercession of the Pope.

Another group of our Holy Father's devotees to our care, the Sisters, in your presence among us. One of the Sisters, who presided over the raising of the flag, was the first to arrive. All 9 o'clock His Excellency, Sir Percy Colclough, was the first to arrive.

He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ...

He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ... He was first to the college where he was warmly welcomed by the Rev. Fr. ...

We beg of you, Excellence, to accept the offer among us. May God bless you with the help you need to carry out the important mission entrusted you by His Holiness. The vicars of Uganda will be pleased to have the opportunity of serving you in the most efficient manner possible. We beg of you, Excellence, to accept the offer among us. May God bless you with the help you need to carry out the important mission entrusted you by His Holiness.

The Art of Reversing. Difficulties of Manoeuvring a Car in Confined Space.

Useful Hints for the Novice.

When the rear wheels have been brought close to the kerb in this manner, reverse gear forward on full lock towards the kerb, reverse the car to the kerb position. To get out, run the car forward on full extent of counter-lock.

It will be noticed that in reversing, any difficult position the situation should be reversed, leaving the steering of the car only in mind. For if the steering is put into a given position the rear is steady.

The most complicated form of reversing is to have to drive a car at an angle through a narrow doorway or in a narrow passage. It is, of course, the reason being that in these cases it will be necessary to get some idea of when the front wheels have been used and re-adjusted in the case of an angle through a narrow doorway or in a narrow passage. It is, of course, the reason being that in these cases it will be necessary to get some idea of when the front wheels have been used and re-adjusted in the case of an angle through a narrow doorway or in a narrow passage.

of the vehicle near the kerb must be judged. For this of course, we secure a definite point on the rear wheel to be obtained.

As a motorist, it is necessary to reverse the car to the kerb position. To get out, run the car forward on full extent of counter-lock.

It may seem odd if it is supposed that the first time the car is reversed, it will be a simple matter for the driver.

Self-Help.
A special article published yesterday told a story of millions which is of considerable interest. It indicates that the employment of a special kind of flourishes, that there are methods ready to hand in the Colony instead of advertising propaganda, by the settlers and that a great deal of good can be done by pioneering publicity on the spot among strangers to the Colony to spread the real story of white advantage in Kenya. During the visit of some hundreds of American tourists recently, the Coffee Planters Union, which represents a growing population of coffee planters, staged an attractive advertisement of the country's chief product. The visitors, who are notoriously critical of the quality of a cup of coffee, were impressed by the simple but effective advertisement and many enquiries followed the hospitable publicity. A Nairobi hotel, according to the spirit of the good work, gave six assistance and could not be so lucky that Kenya coffee will be as necessary as least as long as the memory impresses of a less valuable caldone. Kenya coffee has a strongly growing market in America, especially in which

The Detection of Faults.

Crackles and Oscillation.

The following is a further contribution by Q.B.M. on the causes and maintenance of some faults.

To continue with fault finding I did not quite finish with crackles last week, and so, fact is, it would be possible to have page four possible crackles. I have not yet dealt with the fault of oscillation. The most likely for crackles is if the coil and coil holder.

This applies to either one of the wires of the setal coil may be capable of the roughness or wear. This often occurs with Ignitron Short wave coils which are sectioned in themselves, and which I regularly use but through constant use and changing their get best out of shape and are liable to short especially at the place where the pins join on to the wire. The pins must make a good contact with the contacts and should occasionally be replaced with fresh. This replacing out of pins should be done gently, for the week I was doing this with a coil and pressed down to last with the result that half the breakers set and consequently the coil holder was broken.

With the exception of loose connections and a dull valve there is only the grid leak left that can give you crackles but these crackles are of quite a different type to a loose contact crackle, more like a busy crackle. The only cure for this is to replace it with another one. If you get crackles and are sure from your setal coil and putting your aerial on to that and nothing appears, provided that your aerial coil is all right, then your aerial coil may be at fault, but it is usually very easy to tell the difference.

The place to look for faults in your aerial system is in the lead in where the down lead goes through the window. You may find that the wire through cool continually swinging in the wind and worked the terminal of the lead-in tube loose. The fault may be inside the house from the lead in. This usually a flexible wire and some cases you may have to be broken or again a terminal in the flexible is liable to be found on the wire bending over and the terminals may be corroded or a sharp point also lead to loss of signal strength, especially if one of the points and terminals has to be reconnected.

Another place to look for a fault may be in the pins to the lead in coil and if it happens to be badly soldered, for if it should happen to come loose, these leads there have been known to set up a very noisy crackle. I have seen that the aerial or the down lead is a wire and touching on some part of the house will set up a "barnstorm" crackle.

I have seen that other place left new to look for a crackle and in an instance I am referred to a crackle which is set up by the condenser in the aerial. They sometimes crackle horribly—very expensive ones. The cause of this is dirt and sand, generally from the wind and for general regularly and I recommend a type cleaner, the wooly type for this job. Broad the type cleaner double and yields it between both the fixed and the moving plates. Sometimes the bearings themselves get dirty, especially those using a ball to take up the load bearing. This means that the condenser will have to be taken down and the bearings taken out using a ball as a block. I made a point of taking my condenser down regularly once a week and cleaning them as well as looking for something more amoring when a crackle occurs, more than a search for a crackle.

If you get a crackle and a very sharp one at one particular spot on your dial there is all probability the moving valve are touching the fixed shield. This may happen to the very many read and further will wear down a distance than to have it come by a very bad thing that should be rectified by sanding the plate which is causing the trouble, but this must be done very carefully or you may make matters worse, and buckle the plate so much that the condenser has to be taken down and the offending plate very carefully straightened out. This is not so easy at all, though you may be unobtrusively rounded and bent with your hands.

Some condensers have alternate plates and they may have to come wrapped so amount of the fault. This can easily be corrected by taking off the warped end plate. It may be a modified type face such as a piece of plate glass and not putting a new wire into one end, but on the other end there will be a hole. This may be a fault in the plate itself. They live a good time till the elements in your coil when they are straight out.

can be replaced on the condenser. If you get a crackle, these leads there are to noises especially when the very low end in some times like a piece of copper wire. When the leads which is made of a spiral piece of copper wire. When touching on short wires and when the spiral is tighter and more curved the condenser the turns are more likely to touch and give a crackle. Should this occur the spiral should be re-adjusted so that adjacent turns will not touch, no matter what position the condenser is in.

Now we will take the case of a setal coil where you have a setal coil and you are unable to oscillate. I suppose most people would look for the remedy or cause of this fault but not other things perhaps where you are not looking for it. The first thing is to ascertain that the valve is all right and that there are no loose connections or soldered joints which have come loose. Take out your aerial coil, that is provided other you use a setal coil coupled aerial coil. The valve may be a simple oscillator box that your HT is not HT. This is a common trouble you may not be able to oscillate valves. To test the valves you must look to you the wrong way round. It should go wrong in the same direction as the grid coil. The test thing is to be certain of this the reaction condenser used to the reaction condenser used to the reaction condenser. There may be a diaphragm in the diaphragm in which case you will not oscillate. Test the connections with a battery and flash lamp in series. The coil may be the wrong value. This may be checked by the coil may be the wrong value. This may be checked by the coil may be the wrong value. This may be checked by the coil may be the wrong value.

Now let us suppose your set oscillator, without an aerial coil. On putting the aerial coil in, the set stops oscillating. This means that your aerial coil is too large or that it is too closely coupled to the grid coil. The sizes to be found for the coils I have mentioned are, respectively: 300 ohms, 400 and 500 ohms. These are obtained by having a small series aerial coil around or loosening the aerial coil coupling by moving it slightly away from the grid coil.

Some sets have a grid potentiometer which has the effect of making the grid positive or negative. This is a common trouble. It is not only not used as a permanent reaction control. It should be set at the point where the reaction is controlled by the potentiometer. If you use a variable potentiometer you will find that you get violent oscillation as some sets, especially which are designed to give 100 wavelengths.

I advise making the grid HT if you get a positive and putting in 100 volt flash lamp battery with a grid HT coil.

you was in in place of the two coil turn out set oscillated very well.

Against the reaction condenser must be large enough—0000 is the proper size. If this is too small you will not have large oscillations, you must make the set oscillate over the whole range of the grid condenser so that the set oscillates when the grid condenser is set at the bottom of the scale.

On the other hand the reaction condenser should not be too large—0005 is too large, especially when using short waves. You will not be able to stop the set oscillate.

The best combination of coils for short waves is as follows: grid coil 2 turns, reaction coil 3 turns, grid 4 turns, reaction 6 turns, grid 6 turns, reaction 9 turns. These give you a wavelength range of 1050 metres, 2150 metres and 3040 metres approximately.

Now let us suppose your set oscillator, without an aerial coil. On putting the aerial coil in, the set stops oscillating. This means that your aerial coil is too large or that it is too closely coupled to the grid coil. The sizes to be found for the coils I have mentioned are, respectively: 300 ohms, 400 and 500 ohms. These are obtained by having a small series aerial coil around or loosening the aerial coil coupling by moving it slightly away from the grid coil.

I advise making the grid HT if you get a positive and putting in 100 volt flash lamp battery with a grid HT coil.

THE alphabetical division on the Guide gives the first key... Is the name you are looking for here? Yes! Then you at once see the number of the folder which contains the correspondence, and your hand goes straight to it.

Then if you have had any correspondence at all, it must be in the "Miscellaneous" Folder under the name Alphabetical.

And much easier than referring to a more or less accurate Card Index for the number of the folder, or to a more or less correctly-kept collection of folders in what should be strictly alphabetical order... Then it will be seen that the Ringefold Numeralphal System calls for three operations only: 1. Open the Drawer, 2. Glance at the Guide, 3. Take out the Folder.

THE POULTRY WORLD. Cause of "Crooked Breasts" Not Inherited in Birds.

A correspondent writing asking the cause of "crooked breasts" and whether the trouble is inherited in birds. The best of my knowledge is that it is not inherited. The most common cause is the position of the bird's feet. If the feet are not straight, the breast will be crooked. This is especially true in young birds. The position of the feet is determined by the position of the hock bones. If the hock bones are not straight, the feet will be crooked. This is a common defect in many breeds of poultry. It is caused by a fault in the development of the hock bones. It is not a hereditary defect. It can be corrected by proper feeding and exercise. The bird should be fed on a diet of green food and grain. It should be exercised in a large, open space. This will help to straighten the hock bones and the feet. The crooked breast will then be corrected.

To produce successfully it is necessary to understand the conditions under which the bird lives. The bird should be kept in a clean, dry, well-ventilated house. The temperature should be kept at a normal level. The bird should be fed on a diet of green food and grain. It should be exercised in a large, open space. This will help to straighten the hock bones and the feet. The crooked breast will then be corrected.

Nobody's Children. UNIDENTIFIED VICTIMS OF CHAIN DISASTER. STANBURY MOUNTAINS, London (by mail). An inquiry on the 16th inst. into the Cardiff railway accident this week revealed the strange fact that no one has yet identified the two children whose charred bodies were found in the debris. It was thought that they might have been on their way back to school and the mystery would be solved when the Christmas holidays began and they failed to return to their parents. But the Christmas holidays have come and passed by since the disaster but still no one has come forward to claim the two little charred bodies of these children.

Some Causes of Vibration. Faults Which Can be Corrected by Owner-Driver.

Parts of Chassis Which Give.

It is not the intention in this article to discuss about the behavior of the engine, but rather to discuss the faults in both the engine and the chassis...

Some cause of low compression may be present in any faulty valve, such as a faulty valve or a faulty piston ring.

Faulty Ignition System.

In induction systems, fault which is particularly common in four-cylinder engines, arises from the way in which the inlet valves of cylinders Nos. 1 and 2 are packed in a common pocket.

During recent years this matter has been looked upon too lightly. It is a serious cause of vibration, and, besides, produces greater stiffness and, besides, combustion-chamber design has been modified in the light of modern practice concerning flame propagation in order to reduce the rate at which the pressure increases between the spark-plugs.

At this instant, however, the valve of No. 1 cylinder is charged by the exhaust gases, and the valve of No. 2 cylinder is charged by the fresh air.

Turning to the transmission system, it will be understood that vibration is liable to be set up by any fault in the shafting from the crankshaft to the shafting before the driving shaft.

It is to be noted that the cause of vibration is not the engine, but the chassis...

Matrimony

A picture of dramatic thrills and daring situations, essentially modern and up-to-date magnificence, acted and beautifully staged and mounted. It tells a provocative story of a mercurial timberly wife's struggle to escape from a life of macabre monstrosity of her own choosing.

DEFINITIONS

In the Editor, "E.A. Standard," Sir—May I be briefly as possible, reply to your correspondence in "An Outlander" letter, which appeared in your issue today? I had something to say to a brief for the moment. I am sure that you will be glad to have the views of the Editor, "E.A. Standard," on this subject. I am sure that you will be glad to have the views of the Editor, "E.A. Standard," on this subject. I am sure that you will be glad to have the views of the Editor, "E.A. Standard," on this subject.

THE DEFENCE FORCE RIFTERS.

In the Editor, "E.A. Standard," Sir—Capt. Dabahu's reference to the quality of the Nairobi public is indeed funny. I feel sure in one respects that the gentleman who by the Nairobi Association to form an "advisory committee" lack of type and will experience. It is the method of selection to which one objects. The Ordinance how down a certain method for selecting a committee and it is the work. The Nairobi Rifle Association has no power to nominate members for election. Not only have they done so but in the case of Nairobi North they have finally selected the representative without any reference to members of the Nairobi Rifle Association.

FOOD CONTROL—A TRANSPARENT CONTRACT.

In the Editor, "E.A. Standard," Sir—I have read with interest your Nairobi Correspondent's investigations regarding the contract for the transport of Maize from Nairobi to Meru. It is obvious that your correspondent is giving this question of rates the slightest consideration, and, shortly giving responsible officials of the Commission in the administration of Public Works.

FAMINE IN KENYA.

In the Editor, "E.A. Standard," Sir—It would be amusing if it were not tragic for the world, to find that it is being said and written on the subject of famine in Kenya—how it is being reported—really say—whether there is any famine or is a famine? Now the official responsible for the Kenya is one of the food supply available, or likely to be available, any figures of the food supply in Kenya, it is likely to be affected, may be there, at the head of an investigative method it seems to me, one only one of the figures in question, but the means of ascertaining whether these figures are correct.
