TENEMENT HOUSES WRECKED

Montreal, Wednesday.

Two Austrians placed a bomb in the vestibule of a row of tenement houses, with the result that all were wrecked. Some of the inhabitants, who were mostly Russians, had miraculous escapes. The two Austrians perished. The constables are not known, but some of the sufferers are terribly wounded.

TRAFALGAR DAY.

UNPARALLELED FERVOUR.

London, Wednesday

Thousands of people, hour after hour, filled past Nelson's column. Every where there were masses of flowers, prominent among them being a wreath in honour of Admiral Jellicoe. The celebrations were unparalleled in former. Flags were flying over all the buildings.

To-night there will be a great demonstration at the Opera House, where the Allies will be represented.

NAVY SHELLS THE ENEMY.

SHIPS DOING GREAT WORK.

Dover, Wednesday.

British warships are doing great work on the Belgian coast. They watched the enemy in the night-time digging trenches by the light of flares; the ships took the exact range and shelled the enemy heavily at daylight, inflicting losses amounting to 1,400 in one day, and wrecking six batteries.
The first attack on Sunday destroyed a 15cm artillery and wrecked a Zeppelin. On Monday the enemy's submarines made frustrated efforts to damage our ships, their explosives missing.

GERMANS IN FULL RETREAT.

TRAFALGAR DAY.

GERMANS IN FULL RETREAT.

UNPARALLELED FERVOUR.

Paris, Wednesday. A communique says the enemy attacked with particular violence at Newport, Digne and La Basse. The allies were repulsed, but with great energy the allied forces. No notable change occurred in the other fronts.

Petrograd, Wednesday. It is officially stated that the Germans are in full retreat in the region of Warsaw and north of the River Pilica, leaving their wounded and abandoning the fortified positions. The Russians are pursuing them. They are holding Konostow, opposite the Trzangrod, despite severe artillery fire. Our forces are assuming the offensive. There is no change in East Prussia.

London, September 25th. This has been a week with good noteworthy making at sea and with a good deal of substantial success on land. It has brought out the best in the British nation. One might have thought that the loss of the battleship would have occasioned some bitter criticism of naval methods and that the staff would have advised a radical line of action—amounting almost to retreatment. This incident is hardly surprising, it need hardly say, but it has left the community unshaken, because it has never had any effect on the operations of the war, or so to speak, the fact that reverses of all sorts are expected. Although no actual reverses have ever been published as to the precise number of the British losses in Prussia, they cannot be much less than fifty to fifty thousand already, which is nearly as many as the entire force which fought at Mons, and in one-fifth of our present difficulties in the East. The naval loss is of course not so large up to the present, as even including the victims of the three cruisers they can hardly exceed two thousand.

Dover, Wednesday. British warships are being kept close to the Belgian coast. They watched the enemy in the night-time digging trenches for the light of their search beams, but the coast range and shelled the enemy heavily all daylight, inflicting losses amounting to 1,600 in one day, and wrecking six batteries. The first shot on Sunday destroyed a Tache machine gun and wrecked a Zeppelin. On Monday the enemy's submarines made an attempt to sink our ships, but all were torpedoed missing.

Paris, Wednesday. It is stated officially here that the Germans who advanced on Warsaw were forced into a precipitate retreat, abandoning their positions which they had organised for defence. The Russians are pursuing them, making numerous prisoners.

London, Thursday. The Admiralty announces that the monitors, "Serravallo," "Humber," and "Hercules," were recently engaged in an operation on the Helgoland coast, firing into the German right bank. Owing to their light draft they contributed materially to the success of the operation. They have abundantly justified their acquisition, on the coast of Helgoland, where they performed meritorious service.

London, Wednesday. The Admiralty announces that the monitors, "Serravallo," "Humber," and "Hercules," were recently engaged in an operation on the Helgoland coast, firing into the German right bank. Owing to their light draft they contributed materially to the success of the operation. They have abundantly justified their acquisition, on the coast of Helgoland, where they performed meritorious service.

Amsterdam, Wednesday. Berlin communique states that fighting continued on the Yser canal. The enemy's artillery was supported from the sea, north-west of Ypres. In the fighting to the east of Lille we are taking the offensive and have repulsed the enemy's attacks. The decision has been reached in the eastern theatre.

London, Thursday. [Commandant] Marchand has been famous owing to his capture in 1893, a movement which, at the time led to great credit for the commander. He was captured by the British in 1893, a movement which, at the time led to great credit for the commander. ENEMY'S HASTY RETREAT.

THE NORTH SEA COAST FIGHT.

1,100 DEAD GERMANS IN ONE TRENCH.

(SPECIAL SERVICE'S AGENT.)

An eye-witness describes the operations leading to the great battle on the North Sea coast. The arrival of British submarines, in fact, enabled the Allies to be extended northwards. Two minor engagements followed the enemy in the region of Montenegro, the enemy retreating hastily in this direction. The Germans also evacuated Biala. The advance of our light wing anticipated the whole of the enemy's position, thus all the country on the left bank of the Lys, and Arras, and all our lands. Our right wing in the mouth of the Lys continued to fight heavily and continuously. Hostilities having resumed the British tanks were for the infantry, villages were taken and captured. French cavalry gave most excellent support, driving the enemy back. The enemy's position was so weak against the machine-guns, but the counter-attacks were not repulsed. The enemy's general state was unbecomingly. The British had delivered a counter-attack. A stranded German dead were found in one trench.

A communication states that in the region east of Nancy, between the forests of Metz and France, the enemy has advanced, and driven the enemy across the Meuse. The struggle continues to be particularly heavy between the mouth of the Yser and the Meuse. The Allies have not retired as they would have continued to make progress between Yser and Breda, and in the Meuse district. An artillery column of the enemy has been repulsed in our favour. We have secured the mouth of the Meuse. It was officially stated at eleven o'clock last evening that there was nothing to report from the front. Our own part in the region of the Meuse.
