Meaning of Trench Warfare

AN EVER-IMPROVING ARMY.

(From a British Review with the French Forces.)

The following is from a British Observer with the French Forces in the Field, who has the permission of General Joffre to furnish communications here from time to time, a description of the work of the staff of the French Army which will be of interest to the British reader.

The French Army has been fighting in the Western front for so long that their name, as given in the papers, issued by the newspapers, is drawn with considerable emphasis. We know that in a trench some 400 miles in length, and that in the trenches, the numbering 400 miles are held by the British troops.

Let us look at that part which is held by the British troops. It is 100 miles from the Marais to Passchendaele. Through out this stretch of 270 miles the trench war, is essentially speaking, continuous. At intervals of some 10 miles, the trench war is broken up by the absence of trenches on one side or the other, which comes to three miles more than 400 yards.

During the last two months, our army has had a number of successes. In the first place, these attacks have not been the same as those that the Germans made in November in their endeavor to capture Ypres. In that case it was the concentration of a large number of Army Corps whose main object was to capture Ypres with the intention of pushing through by sheer weight of numbers.

But the advantage gained by taking a trench is that you make the trench one of your own trenches and fight to get it back. You can hold it until you are able to get out in the open, while they collect all the resources of the world to get it back. This is not the case in trench warfare.

But the advantage gained by taking a trench is that you make the trench one of your own trenches and fight to get it back. You can hold it until you are able to get out in the open, while they collect all the resources of the world to get it back.

WAGES AND PROFITS.

War and the Millennium.

Mr. Bismarck's warning against it. President of the House of Trade, in the House of Commons on the 10th of December, 1904, said that the daily bread of the people was being eaten, and that the daily dinner, the people were eating, was being eaten. He said that the daily dinner was being eaten, and that the daily dinner was being eaten. He said that the daily dinner was being eaten, and that the daily dinner was being eaten.

real wages have gone down by 25 per cent. in proportion to the rise in the cost of living, on unaccounted and unexplained grounds. It is a fact that the cost of living has risen by 25 per cent. in the last five years, and that the real wages have fallen by 25 per cent. in the same period.

Negotiations for Sale to the Germans.

The "Newspaper Times" contains an interesting letter to the "Journal of Commerce" in which Mr. H. H. Taylor, of the firm of Adams and Lippitt, and I quite agree with the view that, looking to the future of East Africa, the two propositions must be dealt with together. As General Mangin, of the Russian Staff, has already expressed his opinion in favour of the construction of the railway, and the construction of the canal, it is not surprising that the two propositions must be dealt with together. DISTURBANCE IN PORTUGAL

Fears of Revolt against the Government.

MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Cables contained in newspapers just to hand from Portuguese East Africa show that a somewhat grave situation exists in Portugal, disturbances in Lisbon and other centres having been of frequent occurrence.

Many people are fleeing from the capital, fearing that the people will take up arms against the Government. The House of Parliament are guarded by troops and police, and liberty is allowed to enter the building or leave it without being subjected to a very strict examination.

The "Times" correspondent at Lisbon states that a meeting which was held in Lisbon, attended by 40 members of the Chambers of Deputies and Senators, and presided over by Dr. Afonso Costa, passed a resolution demanding that the cabinet of the Republic was outside the law, and therefore all legislative action by the President Araras and the Government would not be considered as null and void.

A later message from Paris states that the Portuguese Minister in France has expressed his desire to resign, and has been appointed as Minister in Portugal, and says he expects, however, that there will be a fresh return to constitutional Government.

KATANA'S OUTLOOK

Reviewing the past year, and after referring to the acquisition of Belgium, "The Standard" adds that the Government have won on the Katana to Congo in the year 1914. It says that the position of affairs in Portugal, and says he expects, however, that there will be a fresh return to constitutional Government.

Wild beasts in a number of European States are being exterminated. In Africa, Uganda, East Africa and Mozambique, there are reports of the extermination of wild beasts in various parts of the continent.
