the two captives, to avoid attention from themselves, rushed out into the street as though they were pursuing someone. A lad from nearby happened to have been loitering at the time and was able to state what really took place. But I wondered myself at the time who would have happened if their affair had occurred without witnesses, in some remote Belgian village.
"Their attitude of mind towards getting in bathing" On October 13 seven German officers, including an army doctor holding the rank of major, who was aged fifty if not more, arrived at a villa near Ghent from Antwerp, radiant at the capture of the place by the Germans. The next day they wished to show their appreciation of the hospitality they had claimed by erecting a monument to the German Emperor Kaiser Wilhelm II. The monument was erected in the garden of the villa, and was a simple structure of stone, with a plaque on top, which read: "To the German Emperor Kaiser Wilhelm II. The German officers of the 1st Army Corps of the German General Headquarters

PRESIDENT WILSON'S VIEWS

President Wilson recently gave an address to the Associated Press of America which has a higher importance than that which he delivered to Congress.

In his speech of the 18th inst. he said that the United States are not at war with Germany but they are at war with the German empire.

There are certain things which the world must know. The world is divided into two camps. On the one side there is the German empire.

THE HUN IN BELGIUM.

The great war has added another problem to those already engendering its attendant of pathological and abnormal psychology of the modern German.

His sanity, however, is not the asset and shield which it is. The blooded warrior, brutal, and senseless self-compulsion. His methods of warfare are not bear comparison with those of a savage, but rather reflect the hideous and unbridled violence of the Mahomedan hordes.

During which time Refreshment can be obtained in the PALACE. The Belgian Cinema: Shows in the snow Lord Kitchener Burns every afternoon in the Home.

The God of the Sun (in two Parts) Drama. A Pulchre Masterpiece, including beautiful country, a subject of absorbing interest, the incidents which make up the powerful story are a treat to the eye.

The German nation is degraded in the eyes of the whole world. Disgrace of an African king who suddenly remembers that he once was a German.

When the woman lifted the shirt-bone and presented the ball the doctor probed from his bag three parts of children's socks which he presented to the astonished woman in gaseous amazement.

"The inexperience of the super-organization of the German army was never better illustrated than in the handling of the wounded." "The Emperor's last will, faint, faded, was taken to the Palace, where he was to be laid to rest."

notions of the care of the sick and wounded. Their training has often consisted of a course of three weeks in a general hospital to a number of 150 persons.

The German soldier has a wholesome respect for British armor. I shall never forget the terror in the face of a German soldier when he saw one of our British armoured cars.

HOW THE SOLDIER SEES IT.

Mike Kennedy is one of the privates who did not save the whole British army...

When we were debriefed by our sergeant...

Some days ago a left arm in a sling with Mike Kennedy attached appeared in his room.

"Mostly," said Mike, "there's more news on the front than there is in the news."

Mike was reading a paper, too, when I met him yesterday. I showed him the paper's headline with the headline "Food Issues."

"I've got a new one," said Mike, "and I've got it down, now, and we'll see if we can't get it out of the stocks."

"I've got a new one," said Mike, "and I've got it down, now, and we'll see if we can't get it out of the stocks."

"I've got a new one," said Mike, "and I've got it down, now, and we'll see if we can't get it out of the stocks."

AGRICULTURAL AND FOREST PRODUCTS.

Following an article from an article in the Bulletin of the Department of Agriculture, London, 1914, it is noted that the total value of the exports of raw cotton in 1913 was £12,700,000. This was an increase of 20 per cent on 1912, and a decrease of 10 per cent on 1911. The increase in 1913 was due to an increase in the value of raw cotton exported to the United States and to an increase in the value of raw cotton exported to other countries. The decrease in 1914 was due to a decrease in the value of raw cotton exported to the United States and to a decrease in the value of raw cotton exported to other countries.

EUROPEAN AGRICULTURAL

The cultivation of the plant, started in 1880 by the German East Africa Company in East Africa, has made rapid progress in spite of the difficulties with which it has had to contend. In 1913 the area under rubber cultivation was 17,625 acres (19,114 hectares); in 1912 and 1911, 15,700 and 15,400 acres (39,888 and 34,128 acres, 39,888 hectares). The total rubber area in East Africa was 148,256 acres for the first quality, 412,116 acres for the second quality, 42,000 acres for the third quality, and 1,011 acres for the fourth quality. The total rubber area was 612,387 acres (247,522 hectares).

The rubber tree, which is a member of the Euphorbiaceae family, is a large tree with a trunk that is 1 to 2 feet in diameter at the base. It has a thick, leathery bark and a dense canopy of pinnately compound leaves. The tree is native to the Amazon basin in South America and is now cultivated in many other parts of the world, including East Africa.

The distance from the plant to the ground is about 4 to 6 feet. The plant grows in a variety of soil conditions, but it is most successful in the lateritic soils of East Africa. The tree is a member of the Euphorbiaceae family and is related to the rubber tree of South America.

GERMANS IMPROVE SUBSTITUTES FOR RAW MATERIAL

The German Government has issued a decree which provides for the substitution of synthetic materials for raw materials. This is a significant step towards self-sufficiency in the face of international trade restrictions.

The decree covers a wide range of materials, including dyes, pigments, and various chemicals. It is expected to have a major impact on the German chemical industry.

The synthetic materials produced are of high quality and are indistinguishable from their natural counterparts. This development is a testament to German scientific and industrial prowess.

The substitution of synthetic materials is a key element of the German war effort, ensuring that the country's industrial base remains operational despite external pressures.

RUSSIAN BARRIER.
The Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent, writing last month, said that Russian military news is high priced and described the situation in Galicia as one of "stagnant death."

At one point or another fighting continued occasionally very acutely. The main front still follows the course of the River San, from the confluence of the Vistula as far as Przemyel, and thence takes the direction of Sambor, Drogobitz, Strzy and Delatyn. The Russians hold the ground on the left bank of the San to the north of Przemyel. The tactics of the Germans are to concentrate on that one sector and then on

CONTRACTS OF WAR WORKERS

It will be known that the German Government maintains a strict control of the organization of labor during the war, and that military authorities decide in what cases and to what extent men may be released from their civilian occupations. Most of the applications for exemption in military employment are made by firms engaged upon army contracts, and it is expected that the military authorities will mainly apply to the recommendations of the local Chambers of Commerce.

The Principal Ministry of War has now completed among all the Chambers of Commerce rules drawn up by the Chamber of Commerce in London, which will be the basis of the system to be granted, only to men and equipment that is needed immediately, and only if tested working, as liable to military service are undesirable. No application from active services is to be granted which could be applied by firms other than
