HONOUR IN GOLF.

Dr. J. G. McPHERSON.

(Anthor of "Golf and Golfers: Past and Present," etc.)

Golf is, par excellence, the game of honour. In most games, onlockers are the detective essectance; in golf, the player is left in many ions to himself, ; and his conscience hard presed—may be surely tempted to steal an unfair advantage. Portunately, it is not often the case; for a true sportaman is At billiards, for instance, not the slighter

At builarce, for instance, not the slightest chesting can take place. Unless with loaded dise, backgammon is all above board to both players. Pootball has no temptation for any shuttler to secure an unfair advantage. Cricket is as open as the fair beavens above eurling, polo, and other games

But with golf it is otherwise. The ball ent is out of sight; there is with some mptation to give the ball a snip out of ral from the bunker with the stroke more effectively, and with greater certainty. As an evidence of the miserable cravin for something new in golf, as in everything else, one has only to notice the suggest made that in the New Rules of the game it should be laid down that players in the match shall play off first alternately. But I am conservative enough in golf to hold on to the universal practice since the game was played; and I should regard the hange as a miserable weakness. The "hon-our", is not only a right, but a privilege moreover, it is an obligation; and long may the time-bonoured practice be maintained.

That there is an Institution in Momba wn as "Goan Reading Room" not started on broad lines and that it loomed to petty quarrels.
