MATTERS OF MOMENT

WHEREAS the vast majority of Britons are shocked by Hitler's brutal seizure of Austria, the independence of which he was pledged to respect, those readers of East Africa and Rhodesia who have had faith in the point of view put forward by Hitler Runtz in our editorial columns must not be among the small minority of the unsuited, for the German Fuehrer, far from being unexpected to those who have taken the trouble to study his long-range plans, has run true to form. Successive British Governments, almost the whole of the British Press, and consequently the vast body of the general public, have steadfastly refused to face the unpleasant but inescapable facts, preferring to cherish the illusion of a gentleman's agreement with the Reich, perhaps with the retrocession of some of the former German Colonies as a pledge of good will. We, who have always described that attitude of mind as dangerous self-deception, can at least say that Austria's misdeeds and undoings have not closed that British eyes are at long last opened to the true nature and extent of Nazi barbarism, and that the public has clearly made up its mind that, in face of this cynical violation of the integrity of a sovereign State, there can be no further discussion of German claims to other European Colonies.

opinion in this country might, well have been prepared to agree to the reappearance of the German flag in West Africa, though certainly not in Tanganyika Territory, now as a consequence of Germany's insatiable insatiable of her underdog, any British Government which dared to propose the cession of any territory in Africa would cover itself with defeat. When Herr Hitler declared in his book Mein Kampf that he would bring Austria within the German Reich, he was contemptuous of the idea of building a new German Empire, and he has latterly admitted Communist claims for political purposes, and especially in order to gain a cause of alliance with Great Britain, though of course also realising that it would be extremely useful to have strategic points in the world if Great Britain were unable enough to surrender them. Possession of Austria, he may well say, is worth a hundred times more to Germany than all her present possessions.

It is difficult to see how the British and French Governments, that is to say, the West, has made absolutely impossible the return of Colonies. Any suggestion of a return of Colonies to the hands of the Reich would be met out by a strong tendency to present itself, the question of the return of Colonies is a very difficult and intricate one. It has been shown during the past week beyond the possibility of an understanding that they must build up their military and economic strength if they are to survive, the threat of a systematic rearmament which will enable them to re-arm and to break through the economic blockade which is being broken through by the Reich.

which might have been done. Those in the who were required to tolerate even to welcome colonial surrender by Great Britain and France have in the past week seen what might have been European appeasement ruthlessly swept from the map. It was the something which they held, would justify colonial adjustments. That one thing no longer exists, and there is therefore nothing left about which to bargain. It is paradoxical that the British Empire which would have saved Austria if it could, should be saved by the disappearance of Austria from those who planned to begin its own dismemberment.

THE AFRICAN can never be made into a materialist; there will be a reaction from the clamour for possessions bought by wage-earning in industry. That recent statement of Miss Mabel Shaw, the well-known Northern Rhodesian missionary, has been suggested as a subject worthy of editorial comment. Miss Shaw, of course, speaks with an authority derived from more than twenty years of residence on an outstandingly successful mission station, and intimate knowledge of and the most sincere sympathy with the African, but it is nevertheless permissible to ask on what grounds so arresting an asseveration was made.
 That materialism is one of the root causes of the world's present ills is one which will be readily accepted by the great majority of people, and most East Africans and Rhodesians would therefore welcome the conviction, if they could honestly reach it, that the emerging African will escape the toils which Europe and America, and now Asia, have been unable to evade.

Idealism and realism are inseparably concerned in this matter. That Africans have, in their own way, a strong religious sense though it is often in the ground of conflict with the Leaders of the European—is Native Thought not to be gainsaid; but it must likewise be admitted that many tribes are most acquisitive, and that that passion appears to develop strongly in contact with the white man's economy. Here it is those tribesmen who come most into contact with the European who provide the chief stimulus for such an adjustment, but it is those individual individuals, representing the most restless and enterprising members of their community, who are most likely to lead their fellows, for even he who lifts himself out of tribalism there may be twenty or fifty of more who cling to traditional village life, but it seems contrary to human experience to conclude that the twenty or fifty will succeed in attracting their more adventurous brothers back to the old system. Is it not much more likely that the new outlook brought back from the adventurous search will be the leaven which will gradually leaven the lump?

There is a certain amount of fact to be set against that. The African has lived for years in the touch of the European, and he has returned to the home of his fathers and still has quite Tribalism. contentedly beside those who have never felt it. Even the Native, who has served in the King's African Rifles or the Rhodesia Regiment, who has been a messenger in an office, or a personal boy of one or more Europeans, will, after many years in such an environment, frequently surrender to a nostalgia which calls him back to those from whom he broke adrift in earlier years, and in most cases, far from adhering to the new sense of values learned from the representatives of higher civilisation, he will revert to the state from which he sprang, even to the extent of discarding his clothing or dressing with a simplicity which he would have scorned while in the white man's service. Every man of much experience in East Africa or the Rhodesias has known such cases of reaction from material advancement, and it may be that that strong African tendency is responsible for Miss Shaw's strong confidence.

A RECENT REFERENCE to a crop restriction scheme has brought from a valued correspondent the inquiry: "Why should a man not be permitted to grow what he likes on his own land? Such a challenge is more easily issued than controlling convincingly answered." In the most Production of our readers' certain object on principle—as we do so to it, perhaps with the legitimate freedom of the individual, it may not be unprofitable to consider the subject. The point at issue, it must first be made clear, is not whether absolute freedom can be assumed or expected, but the measure of freedom or control is reasonable in a world controlled to a degree which would have been conceivable to our freedom-loving forebears. When international trade was not obstructed by duties, and economic rearmament and national self-interest by prohibition in vast areas of the purchase of many foreign commodities by onerous exchange restrictions and clearing house arrangements, by debasement of the general standard of living, by wars and the fears of wars, there was need from an occasional seasonal glut, no surplus of commodities and no absence of buyers. Nowadays the folly of mankind, as briefly expressed in the previous sentence, has made it impossible for scores of millions, if not hundreds of millions, of people to buy what they desire, with the corollary that if producers are not to be ruined, some regulation of production must be achieved to balance the regulation of consumption. But not until large numbers of producers of such commodities as tea, rubber, tin, and copper had been brought to the verge of ruin were they respected to have their own production regulated by national authorities. The whole system is White Settlements in the Rhodesian Education

No Colonies for Germany

Following Invasion of Austria

London, 14th Nov. (AP)—Germany's complete and unqualified withdrawal from Austria, as announced in a leading article in this issue, has been widely declared in the Times the current view on the incorporation of Austria into the German Reich. It supports the colonial policy to be followed by the victors on equal terms, but it also shows how the other side of the coin is being struck. It means that the form of tribute to be exacted from Austria is not to be a mere "writing on the wall" but an opinion which more than 100 million Germans will have to live with. It is a warning to the British that the end of all discussion of "attempts" will be made. The only ground upon which any section of the British public could object to this policy is that it is not the least of the territories has been granted to Germany, but this is not for the British to discuss. The standard article in the Times on the German Government's return to the subject of Austria is a masterpiece of the kind of strict justice which must go into the consideration of Germany's position. It is not a mere and precise analysis of what she is not entitled to do, but it is a masterpiece of the kind of justice which will be the result of the British people's sense of justice and endeavour to reach the aims of justice.

It is a warning which we must not ignore that Germany's position may be such that she will be unable to get justice, and if she is unable to get justice, then there could be only one result for her.

Lord Buxton's Southern Address

Lord Buxton, of South Africa, in his address to the Southern States, said that a large part of Africa should be controlled by a group of independent States, with Germany playing a leading part in the administration of the continent.

He said that the colonial situation in Africa is a matter of great importance, and that the British Government should be prepared to discuss the possibility of a "League of Nations" for Africa, which would be a body of independent States, with Germany playing a leading part in the administration of the continent.

Maple Says for Natives System in the Americas

Need for a better system of education for the native peoples of the Americas has been stressed by the Hon. J. H. Macpherson, Minister of Education, in a speech made at the opening of the 1934-35 session of the National Assembly in Ottawa. He said that the present system of education for the native peoples is "a failure" and that a new system must be devised. He pointed out that the native peoples are "not a backward race" but that they have "a high capacity for learning" and that the present system of education is "not adapted to their needs". He said that the present system of education is "based on the idea of the white man" and that it is "not adapted to the needs of the native peoples". He said that the present system of education is "based on the idea of the white man" and that it is "not adapted to the needs of the native peoples".

THE CHARMING HOLIDAY RESORT

BETRA provides the ideal sought by every tourist—a glimpse of the African peoples and all its amenities without any of its discomforts.

The winter season—from May to October—offers a sunny, healthy, bracing and enjoyable holiday unsurpassed anywhere in the world.

There are four magnificent beaches, with miles of white sand, which afford a warm, exhilarating bathing throughout the season. A few miles inland every variety of game, big and small, abounds, which may be "shot" by the visitor with rifle or camera.

Betra is a modern commercial and residential town, and nestling among the palm-trees, rose-gardens and flamboyans are comfortable hotels, a talkie theatre, an excellent golf course, tennis courts and social sporting clubs.

Betra has become the most favoured winter seaside resort of the Rhodesias and Nyasaland, and, being easily reached by sea, rail and air, it is becoming increasingly popular with residents in and visitors to Central Africa, and with visitors from Overseas.

The Port of Betra is the only the Port of the Territory administered by the Mozambique Company but it is the two Rhodesias, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and the shores of Lake Nyasa. It enjoys the advantage of the import and export trade of the Copper Mines of Northern Rhodesia. Over 30 Steamships call regularly at the Port which has the most efficient and modern equipment.
