EDITORIAL

As the reader of this journal will be aware, the development of Eastern Africa we believe, is destined to be of an increasingly important world-wide character. The resources and potentialities are becoming more and more known to business circles. The products are being marketed, and its capacity for expansion is being demonstrated by the great British development programme in the East African territories.

It is our duty to keep our readers informed of the progress of these developments, and to discuss the various aspects of the problem. We shall be glad to receive from our readers any suggestions or criticisms which may help us to do this more effectively.

The development of Eastern Africa is a task of the greatest importance. It is a task which requires the co-operation of all those who are interested in the progress of the continent. We shall be glad to receive from our readers any suggestions or criticisms which may help us to do this more effectively.

OTHER FRIENDS OF "EAST AFRICA."

Sir SYDNEY H. H. HENN, K.B.E., M.P.,
Chairman of the Joint East African Board, whose labours are largely responsible for the appointment of the East African Committee by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I send a cordial welcome to your new publication which should greatly benefit that country, in which I am so profoundly interested. My very best wishes for its success.

Mr. H. H. HENN, K.B.E., M.P.

Chairman of the London Chamber of Commerce and the Union-Castle Steamship Company, and profoundly interested in African transport developments.

I am very glad to learn of your new journal dealing with the interests of East Africa, and give it a cordial welcome.

Major Sir E. HUMPHREY LEGGETT, D.S.O., R.F.

Chairman of the East African Section of the London Chamber of Commerce, and an old member of the Legislative Council of the Gold Coast.

I cordially wish every success to your well-timed venture. I use the expression, well-timed, because you meet the exigencies of a growing demand from many quarters - political, commercial, scientific and social - for regular and authoritative news of the progress and development of the very important group of British colonies that will, I rather than the special concerns of your Journal.

It is a long and laudable service in organizing the supply of information and making it available for Home and Empire readers. Sound information is the lifeblood of a nation, and the capital of the part that is to be preserved and developed.

I need not add that I shall be only too glad to cooperate in any way with your own endeavours.

The Hon. Sir W. NORTH, M.P.

Chairman of the East African Section of the London Chamber of Commerce, and an old member of the Legislative Council of the Gold Coast.

I am glad to learn that you are starting a weekly journal under the name of "East Africa," and that your journal is to be devoted to the interests of those Festines, and the continent of Africa. My particular interest is in the Gold Coast, and I can assure you that we in the Gold Coast are very anxious to see the progress of the continent, and anxious to see that you are well received and devoted to the cause.

of the interests of the East African territories, of political and social progress. The importance of their development in connection with the general progress of the Empire cannot be too strongly emphasized.

On the 11th of the month last I spent some time in the East African territories, and was taken a humble part in laying the foundations of what is one of the most interesting, and will in time to come undoubtedly be one of the most valuable of the British Dependencies, may I wish you good success.

DEVELOPMENT

To the readers of this first number of "EAST AFRICA" we beg leave to state the aim, the policy and the ideal to which we shall ever strive.

In Eastern Africa we believe our destiny lies in an increasingly important rôle in world affairs. Its resources and potentialities are becoming more and more known to business circles. Its products are bringing heretofore "backward" countries to the power of the world, and its capacity to draw the attention of the world to the Great Continent of Africa is becoming more and more apparent.

The mantle of responsibility for the development of East Africa devolves upon us. It has ever been the duty of the British Empire in the East to develop the resources of the continent. East Africa has a vast potentiality for human development, and it is our duty to develop those resources to the benefit of the continent.

It is our duty to develop the resources of the continent to the benefit of the continent. It is our duty to develop the resources of the continent to the benefit of the continent. It is our duty to develop the resources of the continent to the benefit of the continent.

MR. ALBERT SHARPE, K.C.M.G., C.B.

Secretary of the East African Commission, London, England.

What you have done for the East African Commission, I think that you will find very well merited. East African questions are of the greatest importance to the British Empire and to the African Territory.

MR. HENRI CLAIR, K.C.M.G., C.B.

Secretary of the East African Commission, London, England. I spent nearly thirty years in the East African Commission, and I think that it is one of the most interesting and will be one to come in the future. It is one of the most valuable of the British Dependencies. I wish your paper all success.

Although each member of the East African Commission has some part of its own, there is a great deal of common ground. No periodical representation of the East African Commission is necessary, and I feel sure that the Journal now in issue will tend to attract attention to the great work which is being done in the East African Territory.

MR. GEORGE SLATER, K.C.M.G., C.B.

Secretary of the East African Commission, London, England.

It is a pleasure to welcome the Journal, and I hope to be able to contribute to it in the future. It is a great pleasure to see the Journal, and I hope to be able to contribute to it in the future.

KENYA AT WEMBLEY

Kenya's 1962 tour is a revelation, not only to the London spectators but to the Kenyans themselves. There is an air of excitement and a sense of anticipation that arouses a keen interest and enthusiasm. The young players are dressed in their own kit, and the spectators are dressed in their own clothes. The atmosphere is one of a friendly and profitable rivalry. The Kenyans are of all ages, while ladies find it amusing to see a professional and a schoolboy and a professional and a schoolboy of East African life all in the same arena.

But the spirit of the place is active and vigorous. Everything declares that it is a country that is growing and producing. The Kenyans are confident of their own strength. The Kenyans are confident of their own strength. The Kenyans are confident of their own strength.

for the first time in the world. Hence both Kenya's success will be a triumph in demand for London. It will also be a triumph in a field where the Kenyan players have undoubtedly done well for themselves.

Nothing is better than a small, but bright, showing, the pure sample packings from Kenya and Zambia being regarded by market experts as most promising.

TIMBER

The next section to attract attention is the new, well-painted, well-finished, and polished and finished with Kenya's own timber. The greenish-grey is a striking contrast to the well-painted, well-finished, and polished and finished with Kenya's own timber. The Kenyans are confident of their own strength.

Since they have the glassed-in The National Airways' cabin company, they also are in the business of selling African goods. They have been able to send over six samples of coffee, ready to go, of the best second and third grades, as well as samples of the first and best in the world of coffee, and also of the best in the world of coffee. They also have the best in the world of coffee, and also of the best in the world of coffee.

THE HIGHLANDS OF EAST AFRICAN HIGHLANDS

Comparison With Other Countries

By S. BAUMFAN

What is to be Done With the Highlands?

There may be some "east" somewhere else on the globe, but only in the other areas of approximately the same size as the East African Highland blend of lowland fertility, continuous growth, wide choice of available economic products, equable temperatures, and a few weeks of drier weather, and a climate that is not too hot, or too cold, or too dry, or too wet. The highland areas of the world are few, and the highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world. The highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world. The highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world.

Apart from the Americas there are various highland territories that may possibly exist, such as those of the Andes, the Himalayas, the Alps, and the Pyrenees. The highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world. The highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world.

Nevertheless, a comparison of the highland areas of the East African Highlands with other highland areas of the world shows that the highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world. The highland areas of the East African Highlands are the most fertile and most productive of any highland area in the world.

to East Africa

Sir Alfred Sharpe, K.C.M.G., one of the best known British African officers and administrators, with his full knowledge of the country and its development, in Portuguese East Africa, Nyasaland and the Tanganyika Territory, has been kind enough to tell us what he thinks of the future of the East African continent and the part which the P.F.A. and Nyasaland Companies must play in its development. His views are of course those of an expert and his words are of considerable importance.

Development of the territory of the Mozambique Companies must, naturally, be primarily in the form of a railway. It is the only means of transport available to the interior and the only means of communication with the outside world. The railway will be the backbone of the business of the Port of Beira and will be the main artery of the country.

In taking the traffic to the interior, the railway will be the main artery of the country. It will be the main artery of the country. It will be the main artery of the country.

One of the main reasons for the success of the P.F.A. and Nyasaland Companies is the fact that they have been able to secure the services of the best available personnel. This has been done by offering them the best possible conditions of service and by providing them with the necessary training and experience.

The P.F.A. and Nyasaland Companies have also been able to secure the services of the best available personnel by offering them the best possible conditions of service and by providing them with the necessary training and experience.

CHAMBERS & CO
MR. ORMSBY-GORE

Dear Sir,

I have had your letter of the 21st inst. in relation to the proposed amendments to the Companies Act, 1929, and I am sorry to hear that you are unable to bring forward any proposals which will be of any use to the Government.

The first memorandum states that the proposed amendments are of a technical nature and are not of a fundamental character. It is, however, a matter of course that the Government will not be able to bring forward any proposals which will be of any use to the Government.

I am sorry to hear that you are unable to bring forward any proposals which will be of any use to the Government. It is, however, a matter of course that the Government will not be able to bring forward any proposals which will be of any use to the Government.

INDUSTRY IN UGANDA

By S. H. H. H.

It is a well-known fact that the industrial development of Uganda has been slow and uneven. The country's industrial base is still very small and is concentrated in the capital, Kampala. The main industries are the food processing, textiles, and construction industries. The food processing industry is the largest and is dominated by the production of coffee, tea, and sugar. The textiles industry is also well developed and produces a wide range of goods. The construction industry is the most rapidly growing and is responsible for the development of the capital and other major towns.

One of the main reasons for the slow industrial development of Uganda is the lack of capital. The country's economy is still largely dependent on agriculture and the export of raw materials. This has led to a chronic shortage of funds for investment in industry. Another major problem is the lack of skilled labour. The country's education system is still in its early stages and produces a small number of graduates each year. This has led to a shortage of trained personnel in the industrial sector.

Despite these difficulties, the Ugandan government has made considerable efforts to promote industrial development. It has established a number of industrial parks and has provided financial assistance to small and medium-sized enterprises. It has also encouraged foreign investment in the industrial sector.

In the future, the Ugandan government should continue to support the industrial sector. It should provide more financial assistance to small and medium-sized enterprises and should encourage foreign investment. It should also improve the education system and provide more training opportunities for the industrial sector.

It is hoped that these efforts will lead to a more rapid industrial development of Uganda and to a more diversified economy.

THE EAST AFRICAN

October 1, 1943

The first step in the process of development is to plan the land properly.

It is essential to have a clear and concise plan of the land.

We shall be glad to receive your suggestions and criticisms.

Will it be possible to have a section in the paper devoted to the study of the land?

THE LEASAGE OF THE EAST AFRICAN

1. INTRODUCTION

The East African region has long been a source of interest to the United States. This interest is based on the strategic importance of the region and the need to maintain a strong presence in the area.

The East African region is a vast and diverse area, encompassing a wide range of political and economic systems. The region's strategic importance is reflected in the fact that it is a major source of raw materials and a key transit route for international trade.

The United States has a long history of involvement in the East African region. This involvement has been based on a variety of factors, including the need to protect American interests and the desire to promote economic development in the area.
