

Abstract:

This article forms part of the result of a doctoral study on business enterprises focusing on the Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) in Kenya. The primary aim was to critically investigate the management factors affecting performance of MSMEs in Kenya. The findings reveal that the critical management factors critical to the different categories of enterprises differed in MSMEs. This creates an important beginning in policy recommendation towards economic recovery in Kenya.