

Land Use Law (GPR 311) third year School of Law Students, under the instruction of Dr. Robert Kibugi, recently developed short documentary films, through which they identified a legal land use problem, proceeded to investigate, and communicate the outcome through a 10-12 minute long documentary. The 6 short documentary films were judged by a panel of 4 experts as part of the class coursework. The panel of judges, while providing constructive criticism, commended the students the high degree of effort and diligence evident in the output. School of Law Dean, Prof Patricia Kameri-Mbote, CASELAP Director Prof Nick Oguge, and Dr. Collins Odote were part of the panel that examined the documentary films.
